Thirty-Fifth Division's Trail of Fire and Blood Described by Kenamore

Writer Who Went to France for Post-Dispatch Tells of Brilliant Record Under Title of "From Vauquois Hill to Exermont.."

UNDER the title, "From Vauquois Hill to Exermont," Clair Kenamore, who was the Post-Dispatch correspondent with the Thirty-fifth Division, has written a most interesting and valuable history of that division. The Thirty-fifth was made up of Missouri and Kansas National Guard troops, two of its regiments having been the First and the Fifth of St. Louis. In the division also was the 128th Field Artillery, of which Battery A of St. Louis was the nucleus.

Kenamore was with the division through its training period at Camp Doniphan, went overseas with it, and remained with it until it returned from France. His facilities for observation and first-hand information were exceptional and he made good use of them, as his book, just off the press of the Guard Publishing Co., gives evidence, if further evidence were needed after his graphic accounts of the division's activities, published in the Post-Dispatch while the war was still in progress.

The book opens with a stirring episode typifying the spirit of the guardsmen who crossed the sea to fight for the freedom of the world. This is the true story of the morale of Private Joseph Simpich, of H Company, 138th Infantry, who "stuck" with Lieut. MacManigal after both had been badly wounded, and crawled to Exermont when he could no longer walk. This was but one of hundreds of deeds of valor, and many others are told of in the book.

Trail of Fire and Blood.

With great detail, but with a style that is never dull, Kenamore closely follows every movement of the regiment and faithfully records all of the changes in the officer personnel from the time the training began until the end of the great offensive whose trail of fire and blood led through the Argonne Forest. The Thirty-fifth entered on this offensive at Vauquois Hill and finished at Exermont.

The training was at Camp Doniphan and in France where they arrived early in May, 1918. The first training abroad was with British troops whom the Missouri and Kansas boys did not like, but whose sterling qualities as fighters they later learned to respect.

The author records that the Americans especially disliked tea for breakfast.

"But we have always drunk tea for breakfast," a British mess Sergeant pleaded.

"Maybe that's what's the matter with you," the American mess Sargeant answered coldly.

The experience of E. Company of the 138th (St. Louis) Regiment in being bombed by a German aviator while its train was sidetracked at Abbeville is recorded as the first experience of the Missouri troops under fire. Their morale was fine, as is shown by the bantering remarks they made while the bombs were exploding around them.

Ordered to Go to Front.

After periods of further intensive training at Arches and Dounoux the order came, June 17, for a movement to the Vosges Mountains. The Second Battalion of the 138th Regiment had the honor of being the first unit of the Thirty-fifth Division to go to the front.

There is a graphic description of the march through the little Alsatian town of Wesserling and the long night hike up the steep mountain to relieve the French soldiers who had been holding the trenches in the Vosges sector. In these trenches they were so close to the enemy it was possible at some points to throw a stone across the German front line.

Of course no story of the Thirty-fifth would be complete without an account of the valorous exploit of H Company of the 138th in raiding the German trenches at Hilsenfirst. With rare descriptive power the author portrays the mountain setting for this raid:

"The play had begun. The guns were the orchestra, the sky was the proscenium arch and it was the part of our actors to advance to the front of the stage, pass through the footlights, which would be bursting shells, and play their parts all the way down the two aisles, which were the enemy's communication trenches."

This was the first engagement in which any troops of the Thirty-fifth had taken part and, as Kenamore's eyewitness account shows, the appointed task was well and quickly and bravely done. In the light of after events this raid may not loom large in history, but it was of great value in demonstrating the soldierly qualities of militiamen in action. As the author sums it up:

"Our losses were four men killed and 18 wounded. Seven prisoners were brought back, at least 25 of the enemy had been killed, and dugouts, defenses and communications in the selected area had been destroyed. According to the scales of war, it was a highly profitable raid."

19 Won Croix de Guerre.

For valor in this raid the Croix de Guerre was given to 19 members of H Company, including Firsts Lieuts. William H. Leahy, John E. Mitchell and Oliver W. Spencer and Second Lieuts. William S. Bryan and William F. Sweeney.

The Vosges was rated as a "quiet sector." "But," says the author, "we left about 100 of our men there in the foothills of the Alps. They were killed in action, died of wounds, or of disease or accident. I had not realized the number was so large until I came to count them up. It shows how heavy is the toll of war, even in the quietest sectors."

Then the Missouri-Kansas troops came down from the Vosges Mountains and from other "quiet sectors" and began a term of service as reserves in the St. Mihiel sector. This duty is described as "days of waiting, and policing, and equipping, and rain."

"Our men refused to take the St. Mihiel operation seriously," writes Kenamore. "Once in the rain a corps inspector saw a sentry walking his post carrying an umbrella. It almost threw the inspector into apoplexy, and it did throw the joking soldier into the guard house."

The division's next move was to Charmentois in a sector where preparations were being made for the Argonne-Meuse offensive. The boys of Missouri and Kansas were soon to take part in one of the hottest actions of the war.

Prepare for Big Battle.

All of the events leading up to the big battle are well described, including the many and often perplexing changes in the officer personnel of the various units and the shifting of responsibility from militia to regular army officers.

Kenamore describes the opening of the Meuse-Argonne offensive when 2600 guns of the American artillery were firing. This was at 3 a. m. Sept. 26 last. He says:

"All adjectives fail to give even a fair impression of the awful grandeur of such artillerying. No combination of words is effective. It seemed that for a while the lid of hell had been pushed back a little space. The long line on either hand leaped into flame, the horizon was lit by the bursting shells, and from the trenches where the enemy had lain so long there rose the many-colored rockets with which he appealed to his guns for succor. What each signal meant I do not know, but they plentifully told the tale of his distress."

The taking of Vauquois Hill and Rossignol Wood by men of the 138th and 139th Regiments is recounted in glowing style which is the more effective because of its wealth of detail as to the movements and achievements of individual officers and men. A story to warm the blood is that of the heroism of Private Nels Wold who five times went forth single-handed against machine gun nests. Four times he killed or captured the German gunners. The fifth time he did not come back.

Equally touching are the accounts of the deaths in action of Maj. Sauerwein, Capt. Skinker and Capt. Sodemann, all of St. Louis.

Tells of Artillery Support.

The hurdling of the 137th Regiment by the 139th, under command of Col. Carl L. Ristine, the reasons for this action and its consequences make an interesting episode, and Kenamore's account of the Argonne battle throws much light on the question as to whether the artillery support of the Thirty-fifth Division was at all times adequate.

In this connection it may be said that Kenamore does not base his opinions entirely on his own judgment, but incorporates in his story and in the unusually complete appendix all the army orders and communications which throw light on the manner in which the troops were handled. One cannot read the book without gaining the impression that there was great confusion throughout the battle and many defects in the signaling and liaison services and at times lack of co-ordination between the artillery and the advancing infantry. The author attributes the confusion mainly to the eleventh-hour replacing of National Guard officers with regular army officers who had hurriedly come from other sectors and knew little about the lay of the land or the conditions under which the men must fight.

Every phase of the Argonne battle is well described with that rare quality of narration which forms mental pictures for the reader.

The book is illustrated with halftones, drawings and maps and a feature of the appendix is a complete roster of the division.

Plan Commission Outlines Its Ideas for Plaza and City Building Group Proposed Municipal Buildings Group of the City Plan Commission.

Presents View of Parked Space From Twelfth Street to Fifteenth, From Olive to Market, With Public Structures on Either Side.

> (FROM CITY PLAN COMMISSION'S REPORT.)
>
> "IT has been suggested that the Municipal Auditorium and Community Center building be so designed and built as to constitute the city's memorial to those who served and died in the great war. This could very properly and effectively be done.
>
> "Such designs of the building as have been made have contemplated this feature, though it is not essential that the two ideas be combined.
>
> "St. Louis needs a Municipal Auditorium and Community Center building, and needs it soon. Regardless of whether a memorial feature is combined with it or not, a Municipal Auditorium should be built and so designed as to combine all the features necessary to make a successful building, used continually the year round, in order to make it satisfactory investment and to justify its great cost."

Proposes Erection of Municipal Auditorium and Community Center, as Provided for in Bond Program, West of Courts Building.

IT would be a fine thing to open up a plaza between the Public Library and the City Hall group of buildings. Anyone can see that if he will stand at Thirteenth and Olive streets and look south.

The City Plan Commission, in a report which will be presented to the Board of Public Service this week, gives its idea of the most artistic and effective way in which this could be done. It presents a view of a central parked space, with public buildings on either side, and with private buildings, in harmony with the general scheme, built to front on Twelfth and Fifteenth streets. It also proposes the block west of the Municipal Courts building, west to Fifteenth street, as the site for the $900,000 Municipal Auditorium and Community Center, for which provision is made in the proposed bond issue. The old City Hall lot has been mentioned as a site for this building, but the commission says it would be inadequate.

Buildings Suggestions.

The commission suggests buildings for which the space between Olive and Market streets could be utilized—a new Courthouse, a new Federal building, a City Hall of Records, and a State building, the uses of which are not very clearly defined. It discusses the effect on real estate values, holding it probable that the district farther east would not be harmed.

How the cost of condemning the land would be met, the report does not suggest. If the proposed bond issue passes, the city's limit of bonded indebtedness will have been reached. The natural increase of assessed valuations will, in a few years, raise the limit somewhat, but it would appear that, for so extensive an undertaking as this one, the increase of the bonding limit by an amendment to the State Constitution would have to be sought. This would require a favorable vote in a state-wide election.

Report of Commission.

The commission's report is as follows:

"Utility and lack of proper regard for appearances have been conspicuous characteristics of American cities, but in recent years public opinion has manifested a decided reaction against the distasteful, monotonous and careless manner in which our streets, public buildings and public open spaces have been treated. Plans for improved appearances of waterfronts, for grouping of public buildings, and for street treatment have made their appearance in many of the large as well as the smaller cities. We have become conscious of the need for a means of expressing ourselves in our every-day environment in a manner that shall reflect something besides the commercial spirit that has so greatly absorbed our attention.

American Art Desired.

"In the improvement of the city's appearance we should not and will not blindly follow the lead of European cities, though we may well profit by the beauty, the harmony, the spaciousness, and the architectural splendor of the many examples they afford us. American cities should develop a form of civic art that is truly national, that in originality may typify the spirit of the pioneer, that in simplicity rather than in ornateness of design may represent the spirit of democracy, and that in strength and dignity of composition may envisage the faith and confidence that is America's.

"Public building are the outward manifestation of civic spirit. They afford one of the best opportunities for a municipality to give expression to its aspirations and ideals. It is for this reason that large buildings should be well designed and given a proper setting. It has been customary for the Federal Government and for State Governments to pay more attention to the setting and design of large public buildings than most cities have done. This has been due in part to the fact that State and Federal buildings are larger and more money has been available for them.

"The character of our cities is becoming increasingly an index of the state of our national civilization. In the matter of public buildings, therefore, as well as in other forms of municipal work, it behooves the city to so plan and design its public structures that these may faithfully and fittingly depict the civic spirit.

"What more logical suggestion could therefore be made than that, in view of the larger structures to be built, and for which large appropriations will be made, the cities locate their various public buildings in one or more groups, thus presenting in the aggregate an appearance much more satisfying and beautiful than can be obtained by a single large building or by a number of smaller buildings miscellaneously located? A public-building group plan has many advantages. It affords, first of all, an opportunity for the convenient conduct of public buildings together at a common center. It provides unlimited possibilities in the way of architectural treatment by making it possible to adopt a harmonious plan. It affords to each structure a more splendid and proper setting than would be possible were the buildings separately located in different parts of the city.

"In some respects a public-building plan or a 'civic center,' as it is sometimes termed, has a commercial value through its being a medium of good municipal advertising. A group plan or civic center should present so satisfying and so splendid an appearance as to make it one of the particular points of interest in the city and a thing once seen, forever to be remembered. For this reason a civic center should be what might be termed the climax of the physical structure of the city. It should be located at the converging point of the principal lines of traffic and thus become in fact as well as in fancy the veritable heart of the city.

Group Building Proposal.

"Several new public buildings are needed in St. Louis. Within the next few years there will probably be built a municipal auditorium and community center building (for which a fund has been provided in the proposed bond issue), a new courthouse and a further extension of the municipal offices, which may possibly assume the form of a hall of records. In addition to these buildings, a new Federal building is needed, for which a site has been acquired and a portion of the cost provided for. It is also within the realm of possibility that a building will be erected by the State for the accommodation of State offices in this city and immediate vicinity.

"The plan for a proposed municipal building group in St. Louis presented herewith has been the result of many months of study upon the part of the City Plan Commission, and is by this commission believed to offer more possibilities than any other one of the innumerable schemes that have been devised. It has the advantage of being located on what will become the two principal traffic routes of St. Louis—Twelfth street and Olive street—assuming that the various proposals for widening and extending these two thoroughfares are carried to completion. Furthermore, three of the nine buildings in the group already exist—the city hall, municipal courts building and the public library. To the rear of the municipal courts building are now located the jail and children's building. In principle, the plan proposes the creation of a mall between the municipal courts building and the public library by condemning the property and razing all the buildings in the three blocks bounded by Fourteenth street, Market street, Thirteenth street and Olive street.

New Structures Needed.

"The new buildings which would then become a part of the group plan would be located on the blocks facing the mall thus created. From the plan it will be seen that the municipal auditorium and community center building could be located on the block bounded by Fourteenth, Market, Fifteenth and Clark avenue immediately west of the municipal courts building. The proposed new courthouse, hall of records, Federal building and State building could then be located to the east or west of the mall, occupying the blocks between Market and Olive streets and fronting on Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets. It will be noticed from the plan that the buildings on the east side of the mall between Pine and Olive streets occupy only so much of these two blocks as lies between Thirteenth street and the alley.

"This plan would not destroy the effectiveness, nor the appearance, of the public-building group plan, whose central axis is between the public library and the municipal courts building, and not on Twelfth street, assuming that the city is able to control the character of the buildings that might be erected on the Twelfth street front in these two blocks. Unless the city can control the commercial structures fronting Twelfth street so that in height and design they will not be out of harmony with the public buildings in the group plan, the commission recommends that the Twelfth street frontage be acquired. It would be foolhardy to spend many millions of dollars for these large public buildings and their sites and not control their surroundings. On the other hand, the public building group plan has nothing in common with Twelfth street.

"Twelfth street will always be a commercial thoroughfare, and as such should not be in part used for public building purposes. If public buildings are to be placed on Twelfth street, they should be located on both sides of that thoroughfare, using the center line of Twelfth street as an axis. Studies of possible groupings, using Twelfth street as an axis, have been found impracticable, both in point of design and cost.

"Probably the only satisfactory way through which the city might be able to control buildings occupying frontage on the two blocks between Olive and Chestnut streets would be through the use of the power of excess condemnation. Authority for voting on a constitutional amendment permitting the exercise of the power of excess condemnation has been denied St. Louis and other cities of the State by the Legislature at its last two sessions. The same condition applies to the western half of the two blocks between Chestnut street and Olive street and west of Fourteenth street. From the plan, also, it will be noticed that the block bounded by Market, Twelfth, Chestnut and Thirteenth streets has been left free of buildings. This was done to afford an east and west vista which would be fully as desirable from Twelfth street as the north and south vista that would be seen from either Olive or Market streets. The proper architectural and landscape treatment of the blocks constituting the mall should produce splendid effects, as well as offering unlimited opportunities for statues, fountains or other memorials.

"An apparent criticism of the present plan that might be offered is that it would bar the natural westward expansion of the business district, while the location of the Court House and Federal building in the vicinity of Twelfth street would decrease their usefulness by removing them too far from the present center of the business district.

It has often been the experience in other cities that public buildings for one reason or another produce unsatisfactory surroundings and reduce rather than increase the value of surrounding property for commercial purposes. While there may be no justification for expecting an opposite effect in St. Louis, it is nevertheless believed that the creation of the public-building group plan here proposed would result in an appreciation of property values and in substantial improvements on a large scale in the immediate vicinity. This assumption is warranted partly by reason of the fact that the property in the immediate neighborhood of the proposed public-buildings group is in an exceedingly run-

Holland Willing to Allow Belgium to Build Canals

Both Waterways Will Run From Antwerp to Points on Rhine—Expense Probably Will Be Shared.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 11.—Jonkheer Van Karnsbeek, Minister of Foreign Affairs for Holland, informed the correspondent in an interview that Holland will agree to the construction of the two canals which Belgium demands shall run through Dutch territory, and that Holland will meet the Belgians half way in the matter of expense. These canals are to run one from Antwerp to the lower waters of the Rhine and the other from Antwerp to the middle Rhine. He also said:

"The Scheldt shall continue to be in such a condition as to give entire satisfaction to the ever increasing wants of navigation. We propose to extend the powers of the Scheldt commissioners, who are appointed by both Governments, in such a way that the commissions will have administrative powers."

The desire of Belgium to add Dutch Limburg to her territory was explained by Jonkheer Van Karnebeek in the only statement he has given a newspaper in connection with the Belgo-Holland negotiations. In the beginning he explained that his Government ardently desired that the Dutch point of view should be thoroughly understood by the other Powers.

Demands Military Alliance.

What Belgium wants, as Van Karnebeek sums it up, is that Dutch Limburg shall become a part of the territory of Belgium, that the river Scheldt, if not given to Belgium, shall at least be internationalized and that concessions shall be granted for the construction through Dutch territory of two canals—one leading from Antwerp to the lower Rhine at Moerdyck and the other from Antwerp to the middle Rhine, by way of the Meuse. Belgium also insists on the widening of the Dutch Scheldt. Further, she desires that Holland shall enter into a military alliance with Belgium.

When Holland and Belgium were separated in 1839, the Minister explained, the boundaries were fixed according to historical rights and the nationality of the population concerned. These boundaries were determined with the approval of the great Powers as well as the consent of the Belgium Government. The treaty of separation also contained a clause to the effect that neither country would interfere in any manner with the territorial rights of its neighbor.

Lost Only Coal.

"What the granting of Belgium's desires would mean to us is this," said Van Karnebeek. "Holland would lose her only coal producing region.

The River Meuse above Roermond would come under the sovereignty of Belgium. The river traffic on the Upper Meuse, which formerly went to Rotterdam, would be diverted through the middle Rhine-Meuse Canal to Antwerp. Nine thousand Dutch subjects, who desire to remain such, would pass under Belgian rule.

"Why," he continued with a smile, "Belgium wants to annex a part of the Dutch Cabinet. Three of our Cabinet Ministers are residents of Limburg—the Prime Minister, Minister of War and the Minister of Waterways. Under the proposed arrangement they become Belgian subjects.

"In opposing the internationalization of the Scheldt, Holland takes the ground that she is a delta country and that her maze of waterways is as much a part of her national economic life as the very soil itself. To lose her sovereignty over the Scheldt, the Rhine or any other part of her river system would be to receive a blow which would threaten her very existence as a sovereign state."

American Reports Untrue.

Jonkheer Van Karnebeck declared that reports spread in England and America to the effect that the Dutch delegates had returned from Paris because of a disagreement with their Belgian confreres' claims before the commission of the peace conference. The Dutch gave their views in one meeting. Then, as a few days were needed for the other delegates to consider the two statements, the Dutch members went on a trip to Holland. The only business they had in Holland was to consult Van Karnebeck on certain matters of procedure.

"We are willing that the two canals in question shall be constructed," said the Minister. In that connection we are prepared to meet the Belgians half way in the matter of expense. Where Holland is to derive any benefit we shall not shirk our share of the obligations, even although we know that our Rotterdam interests are bound to suffer to some extent. As I have said, we propose to extend the powers of the Scheldt commissioners in such a way that the commission will have administrative powers.

Holland Won't Give Up.

"This should be satisfactory to Belgium because the Belgian representation on the commission is as strong as the Dutch. But Holland will not give up Limburg. Neither can we agree to the internationalization of any part of the waterways which are ours by right of sovereignty. Since the division of 1839 we have freely granted the use of the waters to Belgium, and given her every reasonable aid in availing herself of their use.

"We are not in favor of a military alliance as proposed. We have not sought such an arrangement, and have no intention of allowing such an alliance to be forced upon us. We wish to be fair and just in our relations with Belgium as with all other nations, and in the Limburg affair we feel that we are doing exactly that."

(Copyright, 1919, by the Chicago Daily News.)

Allied Committee Said to Oppose Belgian Claims in Dutch Flanders.

PARIS, Sept. 12.—Well-informed authorities say that the committee of 14 appointed to consider the Belgium-Holland case has decided in favor of the Belgian economic demands and military claims in Limburg, but not in favor of their claims in Dutch Flanders. The report made by this committee may be submitted to the Supreme Council soon.

Before a decision is reached, however, both the Dutch and Belgians will probably be heard again, inasmuch as Mansbeeg Van Swinderen has just returned from consultation with the Dutch Government at The Hague. The matter now rests on the decision of the Council of Four of June 4, 1919, saying, "The treaties of 1831 and 1839 must be revised, but in a way that will entail no cessions of territory nor international servitudes."

This last expression, "international servitude," has caused endless discussion. What does it mean? How far does it go? The technical side of the matter may be stated briefly thus:

Belgium wants to control the water supply of the canals radiating from Ghent and Antwerp and full navigation rights on the Scheldt. Without these, her dimplomats say, Antwerp will be strangled for the benefit of Rotterdam. In a military way Belgium wants the right to defend Dutch Limburg in case of another German invasion and the right of passage through Dutch territory on the south bank of the Scheldt. Territorial and political claims are excluded by virtue of the June 4 decree. The Dutch maintain that they are willing to grant economic concessions, but political ones never. Military co-operation in Limburg is also impossible, as that would draw down the wrath of Germany upon Holland "in the next war." One diplomat of the Netherlands legation has said that the people of Holland were intensely excited over the very formulation of such demands.

On the other hand, the Belgians say that their country has been shabbily neglected by the peace conference and that its indemnities will be insufficient. The claims made on Holland are vital for the future of Belgium and all true allies ought to back them up. Count Henricougt de Grunde has pointed out that it was the Dutch who had spoken of the "next war." "Everyone in Belgium expects that," he said, "and wishes to be prepared. The battle of Liege in August, 1914, showed how impossible it was for us to defend our frontier line when we were uncertain after the safety of our northern flank. We feared that at any moment the Germans would violate another neutrality and cross Dutch Limburg. Hereafter Belgium must have the right to defend the line of the River Meuse, whether in Dutch or Belgian territory. On the economic side the canal question means the success or failure of Belgian reconstruction. Our traffic, like that of Holland, goes more by water than by land. We have large commerce with the Rhineland and it has been growing largely since the armistice, yet all the waterways between the Rhine and Antwerp, between Antwerp and Liege and between Ghent and Antwerp and the sea pass through Dutch territory. Naturally the Dutch favor their own traders at the expense of ours."

Intelligent observers believe that France and Italy will back up all the Belgian claims, that America will oppose the military ones and that the British vote will be uncertain.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Preserve the Heart, Cut Out the Cancer!

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

> That the heart of the league of nations is the covenant not to go to war without first having either submitted the question, in which case they agree to abide by the result, or, having submitted the question to discussion by the Council of the Nations, in which case they will allow six months for discussion and engage not to go to war until three months after the council has announced its opinion upon the subject under dispute, so that the heart of the covenant of the league is that the nations solemnly covenant not to go to war for nine months after controversy becomes acute.

Now who will dispute that that part of the league is not good? That part of the league has not been criticised even by politicians so universally has it been held undebatable; that part of the league of nations has been fully understood by every voter throughout the territory which the President will traverse, whether he comes from the farm, factory or forest, and he needs no preceptor's explanation about it.

The people of this country do not seek to cut the heart out of the league, but they seek to cut the cancers out of the league. Some of these cancers have just been pointed out by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee for major operations. Preserve the heart, cut out the cancers! STERLING P. BOND.

Against the League.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Those who claim that Missourians are enthusiastically in favor of the league of nations are not expressing the true sentiments of the Missouri boys who served with the American Expeditionary Forces. If they seek the opinion of those who served their country in a military way they will find that the ex-soldiers are opposed to all attempts to bind the United States to guard the boundaries of European or other foreign countries. They are opposed to entering into any contract, treaty or agreement whereby we will be obligated to participate in the future controversies and wars of the world. We believe that we entered the late war in defense of the independence and sovereignty of our country, and now we insist that our independence and sovereignty shall neither be impaired nor surrendered. Believing it to be their business, we respectfully ask our United States Senators to see to it that the Monroe Doctrine is perpetuated and that our country is kept free from all entangling alliances whatsoever. We hope to see the United States Senate preserve the ancient policies and ancient liberties of the people by refusing to enter any league with foreign Powers

Congress Should Do Something.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I read an item in your paper where some one of our representatives proposed a bill whereby each soldier, sailor, marine or nurse in the service of our country would be given $30 a month for every month over two in the service, and $100 to each one under actual fire, as an extra bonus.

Some time ago a few of our more wealthy members, such as Roosevelt, Clark and others, who are not in need of this money, said they were not looking for charity; but how about the fellows who return to find someone else in their jobs and who have no rich daddies to support them. They certainly need some way out of this thing, and I, for one, think some bill should be passed by Congress for the service men at once. I was formerly a machinist but was wounded and I am unable to follow this work now, and it is impossible to buy a job of clerical work with our patriotic girl friends holding everything in sight.

A DISGUSTED DOUGHBOY.

Increasing Teachers' Salaries.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I notice that there is a proposition to hold a special election to increase the school tax assessment from 60 cents to $1 per $100 in order to meet a proposed increase in the treachers' salaries.

The writer of this letter is one of the two million some odd railroad employes who were advised by President Wilson that we must wait until normal conditions are restored before the matter of adjusting our salaries can be undertaken.

While I am heartily in favor of all classes of labor receiving a fair wage, and would be the last one in the world to stand in their way, I believe that what is fair for the railroad man is also fair for the school teacher. Let them wait as we are doing, until the H. C. L. is reduced, as the administration has promised it will be.

This proposed tax increase does not speak very well for the co-operation which our municipal Government is supposed to lend to the Federal Government in reducing the H. C. L.

A RAILROAD CLERK.

HIRAM JOHNSON'S LEAGUE.

"I could write a league of nations covenant," said Senator Johnson in his Coliseum speech. "It would be a league of peoples, not a league of rulers."

A very catchy phrase, but as Goldberg says, "It doesn't mean anything!" Let Hiram go to it, write his league of peoples and show how to put it over.

President Wilson is not the ruler of the United States. He is the chief executive elected by a vote of all the American people having the right of suffrage. The Constitution provides that he shall make treaties with the advice and consent of the people.

In the first place, therefore, Hiram would have to destroy the Constitution and reorganize the American Government so that the people directly could make treaties and then get the people to agree upon a treaty and a league of nations. A large job for Hiram. Conditions in the Senate prove how hard it is to get a few selected representatives of the people to agree upon anything.

He would also have to change the Governments of England, France, Italy, Japan—all the signatory nations of the peace conference. The premiers of these countries are not the rulers, but the creatures of their Parliaments. He would have to change them in to pure democracies governed by direct action of the people—soviet governments, not after the form of the Russian soviet, which is controlled by self-chosen dictators—but democracies controlled and governed wholly by popular vote.

Now, Hiram scornfully accuses the President of sitting in the other fellow's game instead of playing America's game. He intimates that he would make all the other nations play our game. So he would have to get all the peoples of the earth gathered in popular assemblies or by ballot to agree to play our game, to adopt precisely the kind of league of nations we want without regard to their wills or wishes. Another huge job.

We ask Hiram to draw up a peace covenant. Let us know and the world know what kind of a covenant would suit him and his friends. It would be well to do this before he attempts the reorganization of the peoples of the world for the purpose of making it a peoples' league. The league offered by Mr. Wilson is this in that it guarantees peace and the rights and liberties of peoples, but let us have a look at Hiram's league.

It would be much better work for Hiram to spend his time and talent trying to construct a league of nations than to spend them trying to destroy the league framed by other men. The people would be spared listening to or reading a lot of guff.

AN ADMIRAL OF OTHER DAYS.

The late Admiral Charles Beresford used to be spoken of as one of the three most popular men in the British defensive forces, the other two being Gen. Roberts and Gen. Kitchener. Probably no other high naval officer of his country has ever been as well known in the United States. If the great war, which came after he had passed the age limit, rather dwarfed all exploits of the immediately preceding years, it must be said that its naval phases were so filled with hard, gruelling, routine defensive work as to give only infrequent opportunity for the unexpected deeds of individual gallantry and daring which are associated with Admiral Beresford in the service.

He was an approachable man, resourceful and companionable in conversation. He wrote much on naval problems, at times turning attention to other subjects. His professional career, filled with unusual incidents, was supplemented and made more ample by a service of 14 years in Parliament. A similar career, combining technical naval achievement with service in Congress, would be most unusual, indeed, practically impossible, under present political conditions in the United States.

DO SOMETHING FOR THE SOLDIERS.

It was as far back as February that Secretary Lane was quoted in enthusiastic interviews, describing the great things that were to be done for the returning soldiers, in the way of providing them with work reclaiming land and ultimately becoming land owners.

Since then several bills have been introduced in Congress to put into effect the Secretary's scheme, and other plans by which soldiers who wished to acquire land could do so. It was pointed out that, while the reclamation scheme would provide work and enrich the country by the enhanced value given to the land reclaimed, many men would prefer to buy farms in their own home states. To make this possible, bills were introduced providing for loans to soldiers on more liberal terms than under the Federal land bank system.

Of these bills, that introduced by Congressman Mondell of Wyoming is to be brought up for action in a few days, and it is the intention of certain Congressmen to try to amend it by including in it provisions to enable soldiers to get land near home, the bill in its present form being practically a colonizing scheme.

About 100,000 returned soldiers have applied for land, and several of the states, including Missouri, have put at the disposal of the Government tracts of land that can be used under the Lane scheme. In addition to this, there are, in all the states, actual farms which the men could and would buy, if they had the means, through Government loans, so that they could remain at home. It is probable that this would be the most popular form of land acquisition.

But something practical and comprehensive must be done. The Post-Dispatch has received scores of letters from returned soldiers, complaining that they have been forgotten. The cities are crowded with men working at anything they can get, or looking in vain for work. Before winter, there should be openings for all who desire to work on land, either in colonies or on their own account.

It is up to the Republican majority to prove that all the talk about land for the soldiers is not mere talk. The nation must keep its word with these men who went out to suffer and to die, believing that they and theirs would not be forgoten.

REASON FOR $12 SHOES.

The rebuffed and repudiated $6 pair of woman's shoes, about which so many stories have been previously heard, stalks into Congress, under the chaperonage of Mr. Esch. According to his and prior accounts some firm of manufacturers put on the market a while ago serviceable footgear to sell at the low price, under present standards, of $6 a pair. But after a thorough test the pattern had to be withdrawn. The ladies just refused to buy them. They looked right over those $6 shoes on the shelves and insisted on buying $12 shoes.

The story is painfully lacking in detail. In what communities did the ladies prefer to pay twice as much for shoes which were, as the inference is, no more neatly made and no more attractive? How much care was taken to make it known that good shoes were to be obtained at a reasonable price?

The spectacle of our poor manufacturers yearning to give the public the benefit of $6 shoes, but held back by the coercion of prospective losses and fears that such shoes will be a drug on the market moves to deep compassion. With more details it might be possible to remove the coercion and persuade a reluctant public not to pay $12 when shoes just as good could be obtained for half the money.

JUDGE PRIEST ON ARTICLE XXIII.

Judge Priest's opposition to the League of Nations at least has the merit of being interesting. Most of the anti-leaguers are terribly exercised about Shantung. Judge Priest doesn't give an infernal hoot about Shantung. That also goes for Czecho-Slovakia, Jugo-Slavia, Poland, Lithuania, the Ukraine, Alsace and Lorraine, and all other points, east, west, north or south, that lie outside of the United States. Let the land-grabbers of Europe and the rest of the world go on with their game of grab. It's none of our concern.

The much-mooted Article X, which sends the temperamental mercury of Hiram Johnson, Philander Knox, Bill Borah and Jim Reed bang up against the top of the tube, leaves Judge Priest serene and untroubled as a June morning. It is in Article XXIII that Judge Priest perceives the deadly menace. So far from being "Labor's Magna Charta," as President Wilson describes it, the Judge feels it may reduce American labor to the level of wages and conditions in Europe. That, of course, would be a misfortune. But it is not that possibility that agitates the breasts of many of Judge Priest's fellow antis. Suppose that, instead of lowering American labor to the European level, the new order would raise European labor to the American level! Would that be a happy consummation? A lot of us think so. Judge Priest, we are sure, thinks so. But we have with us, in opposition to the League, a great many estimable citizens to whom such an outcome would be a calamity. For if the "pauper labor of Europe" should be removed from the map, what would happen to the high protective tariff? What would become of the grand old party's spellbinders, who quadrennially shed rhetorical tears for the downtrodden masses of other lands and warble prancing chanteys to the prosperity of America's workers? The passing of Europe's pauper labor would be the death blow to the system of spoils and venality called a high protective tariff, and the chosen beneficiaries of that iniquitous dispensation would be despoiled forever of their colossal graft.

Third, and finally, Judge Priest informs us that Woodrow Wilson is not the author of the League of Nations, that the covenant is, in effect, a reprint of a Utopian speech delivered by Lord Bryce a dozen years ago, or more. Even so, Woodrow Wilson is not the first President of the United States to be accused of plagiarism. Like Kipling's 'Omer, Roosevelt "went and took what he thought he might require." And before Roosevelt there was Thomas Jefferson, who has enjoyed a considerable repute as the author of the Declaration of Independence. Alas, that document never came from Thomas Jefferson's pen. It was stolen from the vagaries of Rousseau, as has often been whispered in the melancholy gossip of pedantic asses.

THE AGE OF WOOD.

The importance of lumber in the scheme of modern existence is among the commonplaces that are accepted without being appreciated. That importance has recently been presented in engaging advertising. It is somewhat startling to be told our forests yield an annual wealth nine times as great as our gold and silver mines combined and double the value of our imperial wheat crop. It is urged upon St. Louisans to add those facts to their fund of knowledge because this city is the nation's premier lumber market.

And there is more to wood than houses and furniture and the various utilities with which we are in familiar daily contact. An immense plant has just been completed at Charleston, Miss., for the manufacture of such wood products as charcoal, wood alcohol and acetate of lime. The investment is reported to be $500,000. The industrial significance of this enterprise is accentuated by the fact that the raw material of the factory will be supplied largely from what formerly was waste—the refuse of clearings and mills.

The Charleston plant is not the first of its kind, but as the latest it is believed to be the most efficient. In appointment and equipment it is obviously the last word, and the day the wheels were started was a memorable occasion for the Mississippi town, where leaders of the lumber by-product industry had gathered to witness the dedication.

It is in enterprises of this character that the industrial future of the South may be discerned. The South has entered upon an era of intensive pioneering. It is making blades of grass grow on what was barren soil. And in the ever widening circle of its resources St. Louis naturally takes a practical as well as sentimental interest, for St. Louis is the South's master salesman.

The Foreign Relations Committee has no fear that other nations will reject its amendments to the covenant. "The other nations," said Chairman Lodge, "will take us on our own terms, for without us their League is a wreck and all their gains from a victorious peace are imperiled." Without fulsome flattery it may be asserted that William Hohenzollern at the top of his stride never surpassed the modesty and tact of that bit of badinage.

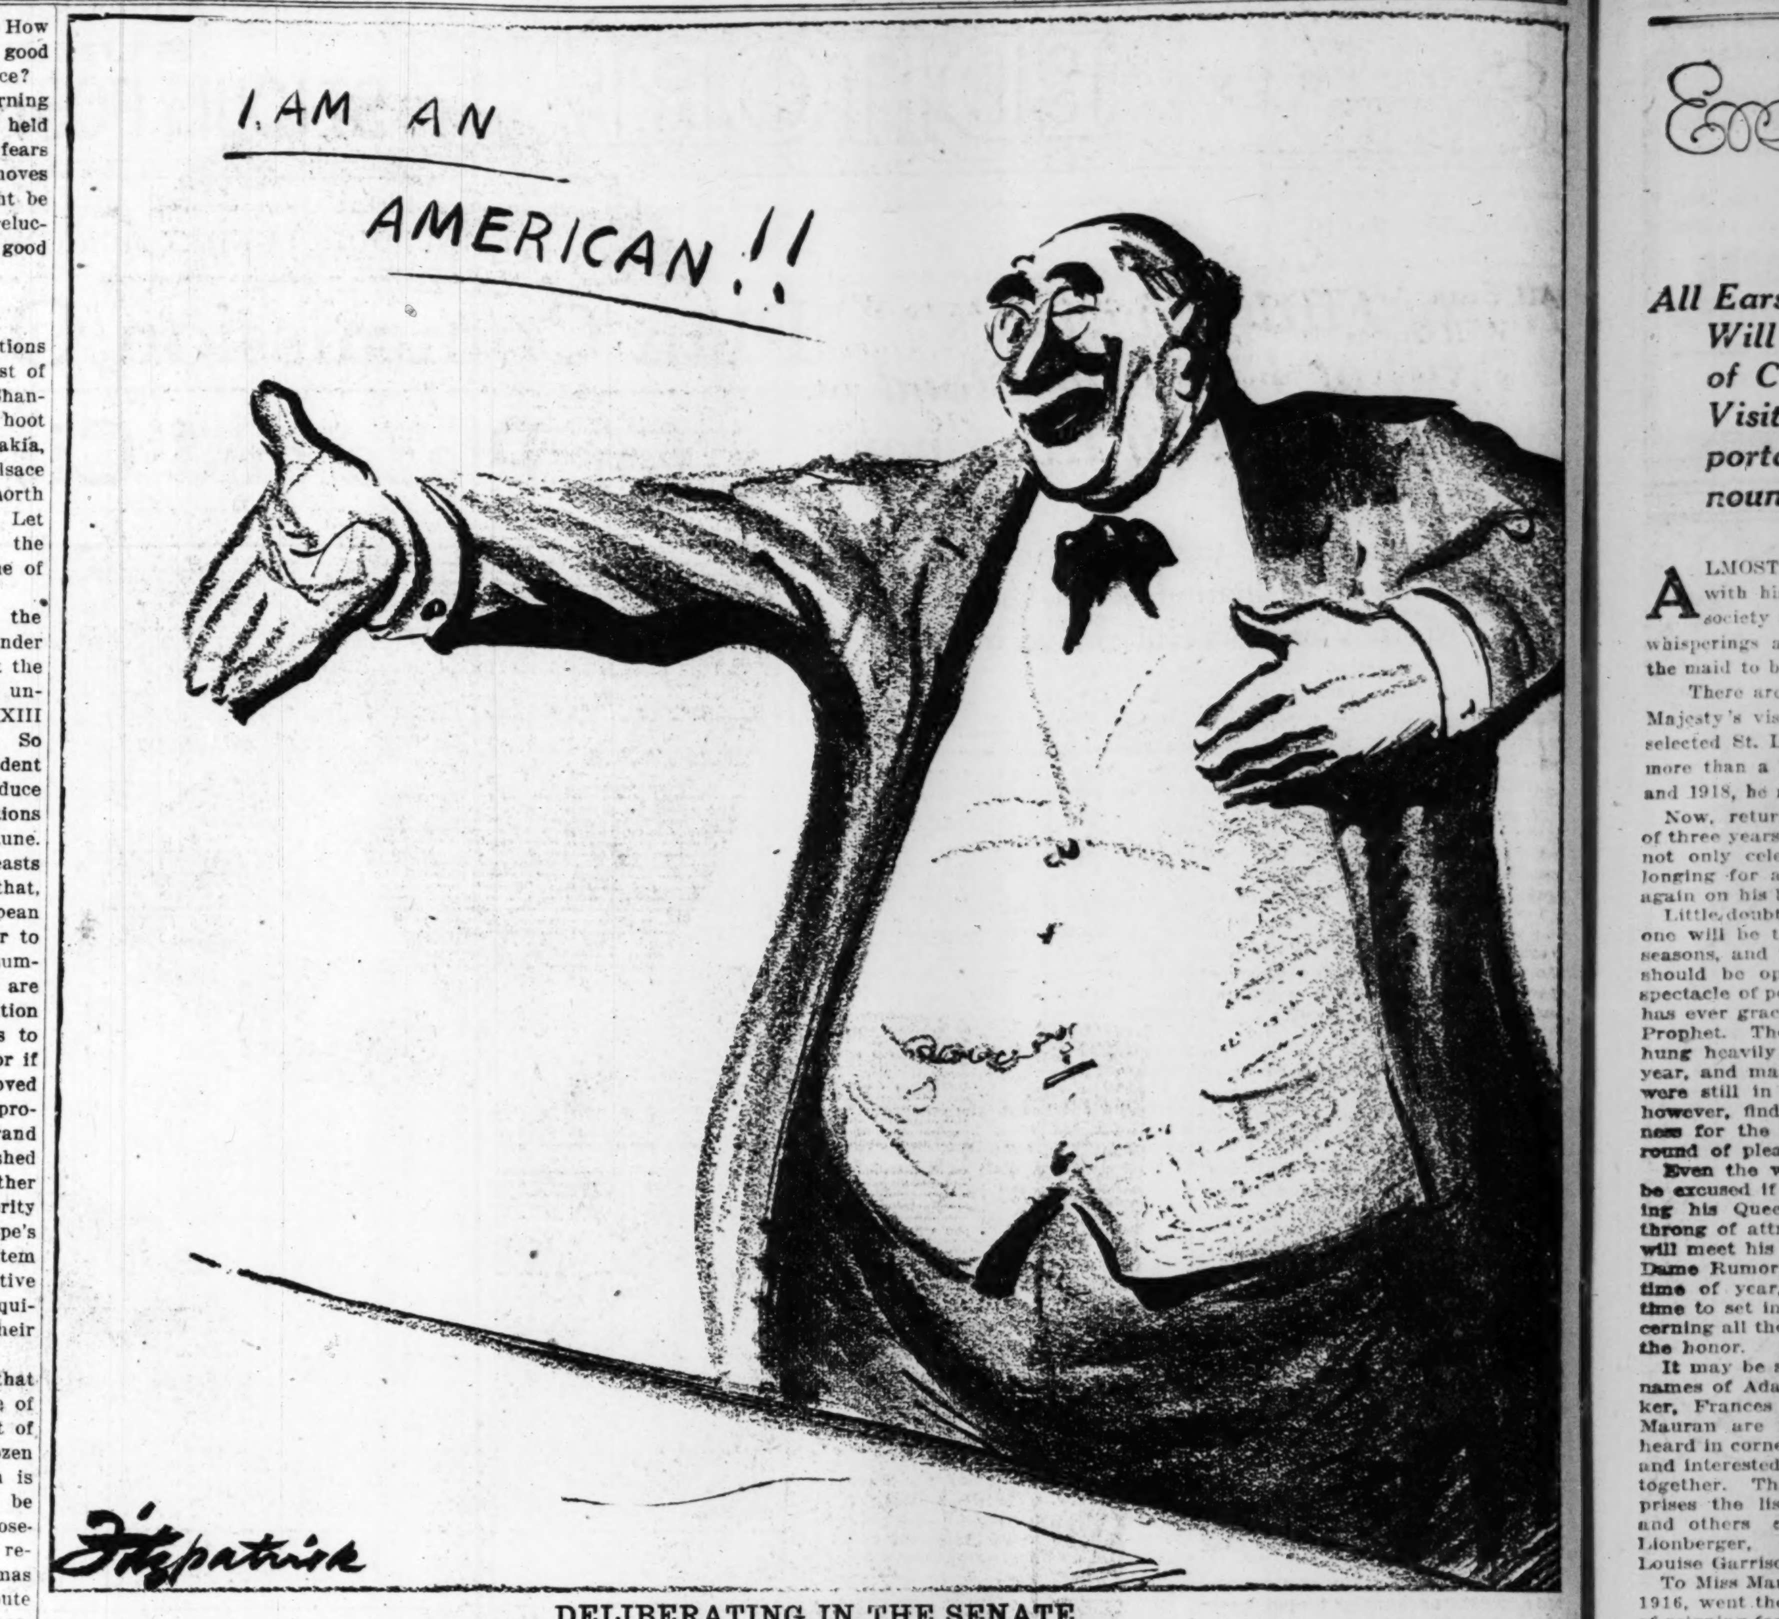
PORTO RICO'S GOOD RECORD.

There is a strong paragraph in Congressman Dyer's resolution looking to independence of Porto Rico. It is:

> Whereas, the people of Porto Rico have lent all the help they could to the United States in its war with Germany, contributing 15,122 men, and $10,903,000 in the purchase of Liberty Bonds.

The Porto Ricans are, of course, aware that their future as an independent people would depend on the considerate protection of the United States, and on such safeguards as the League of Nations might give them. They are within their rights in asking their independence under these conditions, and they are fortunate that they can come before Congress with clean hands and a consistent record of service, rather than a record of opposition to conscription, of petty annoyance to this country and intrigue with the enemy.



DELIBERATING IN THE SENATE.

JUST A MINUTE

Written for the POST-DISPATCH
by Clark McAdams.

THE MAESTRO'S WAND.

To Max Zach and the Symphony Orchestra:

WE tell the little children fairy tales of sprites,
Whose mystic wands in silence waved would charm or pain,
Who mostly danced in merry groups on moonlit nights,
And frowned when the boys were rude or little girls were vain.

Then all at once the fairies flee, they leave the world,
And nothing beautiful remains; the nations arm,
The clatter of the drum, the gage of war is hurled,
And as the fairies went they bore away each charm.

The little children prayed the fairies to come back,
To wave their wands o'er every bleeding hungry race,
And they who mocked the children's prayer but showed their lack
Of faith in fairy wands, or that they dwell in space.

But fairies do not live in turmoil or in war,
Their spirits flit in restlessness far 'oer the earth,
They heard the children's prayer as oft they'd heard before—
The War-God came, heedless to childish mirth.

And then they massed an unseen army of their own,
With spiky wands came down in thousands from the sky,
Vanquished the evil god, striking till victory shone
On those who fought that fairies might be ever nigh.

That when the fairies who had caused the war to cease,
Came back to live and watch and linger near each child,
They called the older folk to come and sit in peace,
To hear the mighty orchestra whose tones beguiled

Them from sad memories and led their griefs astray,
E'en as a whitened cloud doth vanish in the dusk,
Leaving the sky so clear at ending of the day,
That earthly glory seems only a crumbled husk.

Generals, costers, drummer-boys are chatting till
The maestro's wand but taps his desk and thus unlocks
Ten thousand singing fairies; and the King is still.

Sir: I think I have found it. Doubtless you, like many of us, have wondered somewhat longingly at times where could be found a new source, and a new sort, of humor. It was necessary to make a long journey, but I think I have found it in Japan.

We are not, of course, weary of the humor which is available to us; we enjoy it as always. But do we not lose that anticipatory relish with which one approaches something entirely novel? There is something a little wearing in knowing just how one will enjoy something, and just how much one will enjoy it.

Nobody will laugh uproariously at the Japanese idea of doing or saying things, but if the bland manner in which they do it doesn't provoke a ripple, I shall be mistaken. Anyhow, we have this from the Japan (Tokyo) Advertiser:

"Judge Tatkuki Kensuke rendered a judgment of acquittal in the case of Mr. S. Isaacs against Mrs. Isaacs and Dr. Davies. After pronouncing the judgment, the Judge expressed great pleasure at the termination of the case."

Doesn't it make you smile?

The Judge leans over the bench. "The case is dismissed," he says. Then he removes his spectacles, folds them carefully, and looks about with a surprised air.

"What!" he exclaims. "Do I hear aright? The case is dismissed? What an unexpected pleasure! What an agreeable surprise! Who would have expected such a happy ending! Indeed, dear people, let me congratulate you upon the event." And he does it all himself.

Then we have another instance from the same paper. This time it is a statement of the Koreans' complaints.

"The Koreans consider that the highest honor is to become an official of the Government, but since the annexation, no high offices have been open to them, or else the pay has been lower than that of Japanese officials."

There we have that happy blending of lofty ambition and greed that makes the corporation president really appreciate the loving cup which his employes gave him on his anniversary. Have I found it? P. Y. A.

Odd conceit of a transfer man in a Southern city:

O. B. CLARK
The Transfer Shark.

The apostrophe is often mistreated, but probably nobody else ever kicked it about as this merchant at Mise, Miss., does in his letterhead:

General Merchandise, Shoe's Ladie's and men's Ready-to-wear.—Coffin's Casket's and Robe's.—Face Value for Liberty Bonds in trade.

Sir: Since sign hunting is one of my favorite pastimes, I would like to call your attention to the following sign on one side of the Free Bridge:

Dangerous Curve. Drive Slow.

On the other side of the bridge:

Dangerous Curve. Drive Slowly.

Evidently the painters couldn't agree whether the cars should drive slow or slowly, so they decided to compromise. R. L. M.

And in Minneapolis signs on street cars say:

Automobile drivers please remember a street car can't dodge.

THE PRESIDENT'S APPEAL.

From the Detroit News.

THE President of the United States goes to confer with the people of the United States concerning the making of a treaty. Those who doubt the progress of the democratic principle will do well to consider. This is a phenomenon never before offered in the history of the world.

Ever before, foreign relations have been synonymous with secrecy. The making of treaties was not even regarded as a general government function. The secrets of treaties made were the property of a few in the inner circle of governmental intrigue. What business was it of the people that their territories were bartered away, that mortgages were put upon their prosperity and their happiness in future or that schemes were laid, the full fruition of which would send millions into carnage? This was the theory of treaty making among the rulers of the world until democracy came to consciousness.

Today a treaty, the most important ever negotiated, is under consideration. The two constitutional branches of treaty-making power in the United States are in disagreement. And the President turns to the people as arbiters. His trust is in two factors, the worth of the covenant which he himself negotiated and the power of the people when their purpose takes form, to give that purpose force through their representatives. President Wilson believes if he can convince the people, the people can force the United States Senate to comply with their will.

No more interesting test of personal influence and of the power of democracy was ever attempted. The incident will go down as one of history's most dramatic episodes.

CONGRESS WITHOUT A QUORUM.

From the Washington Star.

THE climax of the effort to secure the proper attendance of members on the proceedings of the House was reached yesterday when Representative Blanton of Texas asked for a quorum to hear the chaplain's prayer. A quorum was secured and the petition offered.

Absenteeism is an old complaint and has been made in many Congresses. A number of remedies have been suggested for cure, but none has ever been tried.

One remedy was the calling of the roll at the beginning of each day's session. This would show the absentees and give "the folks back home" information that could be used if considered important at the next election. It would be certain to cure chronic absenteeism. The reply, however, was that a member might present himself at roll-call for registration purposes and then retire and neglect the whole buisness of the day.

Another remedy suggested was that no leaves of absence be granted except upon specific statements by those applying. Illness must be a fact established. Illness in the applicant's family also must be established, while a request for leave to attend to private business must state the business and the length of time necessary to transact it. The reply was that these requirements touched too intimately on personal affairs, besides reflecting on the veracity of the members.

The complaint continues. No remedy has been found. None may be within reach. The matter seems to rest upon the appeals of the leaders to the rank and file to take an interest in all measures and "show up" at all sessions. These appeals have been made in the present House. Both Mr. Mondell and Mr. Clark have urged their respective followers to regular, prompt and full attendance, to come early and stay late, and see all public business through.

Whose engagement to Mr. W. Carey Payne was announced last week...

ALMOST a month remains before the Veiled Prophet will pass again with his splendid train before the eyes of his devoted subjects, but society already is listening with keen anticipation to those mysterious whisperings and deliciously vague speculations concerning the identity of the maid to be chosen to reign over the Court of Love and Beauty.

There are many elements to make this one of the most eventful of His Majesty's visits to his beloved city. For the first time since he, in 1878, selected St. Louis as the object of his royal favor, has he been absent for more than a year. While the dogs of war grappled and struggled in 1917 and 1918, he remained in his abode in the Himalayas.

Now, returning after an absence of three years, he will find his people not only celebrating victory, but longing for an opportunity to gaze again on his beneficent countenance.

Little doubt exists that the coming one will be the gayest of all social seasons, and it is but fitting that it should be opened by the grandest spectacle of pomp and pageantry that has ever graced the presence of the Prophet. The shadows of war still hung heavily over the country last year, and many of the young men were still in France. This season, however, finds everything in readiness for the beginning of a merry round of pleasure.

Even the wise Prophet may well be excused if he hesitates in selecting his Queen from among the throng of attractive debutantes who will meet his critical gaze this year. Dame Rumor, always active at this time of year, finds hardly enough time to set in motion whispers concerning all those who are eligible for the honor.

It may be said, however, that the names of Ada Johnson, Nancy Walker, Frances Carleton and Isabel Mauran are those most frequently heard in corners where wise matrons and interested maids put their heads together. This by no means comprises the list of possible choices, and others mentioned are Ruth Lionberger, Marion Bridge and Louise Garrison.

To Miss Mary Dee Jones, Queen in 1916, went the unprecedented honor of reigning for three years. It, however, carried with it the royal responsibility of observing the unwritten and unbroken law that no Queen may wed until her successor has been chosen, and she has remained faithful to the tradition.

Miss Johnson, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Johnson of 25 Portland place, is remarkably beautiful and is said to combine the advantage with others which would make her a charming Queen. She was graduated from Miss Spense's school in New York City this spring.

Miss Mauran who, like Miss Johnson, doubtless will be invited into the Imperial Club, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence Mauran, and made an informal debut last year. She is one of many St. Louis Society girls to receive her education at the Farmington school in Connecticut.

To attempt biographies at this time, of all the buds whose friends expect them to receive the highest honor in the Prophet's possession, would be, however, too great a task, and plenty of time intervenes between now and the trumpet blast that will summon them to the royal court.

MR. and Mrs. Rosemann of 5554 Delmar boulevard anounce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Margaret Rosemann, to Donald Lincoln of Cleveland, Ohio.

Miss Rosemann is a graduate of Mary Institute, class of 1914, and also of Smith College, from which she was graduated last spring. She is a sister of Mrs. Samuel B. Lambert, formerly Miss Helene Rosemann.

Mr. Lincoln is the son of Dr. W. R. Lincoln and a graduate of Cornell University. He recently was discharged from the United States army.

The wedding will take place in November.

WORD has just been received here of the marriage of Creighton Lawrason Garesche youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur F. Garesche of Chicago, formerly of St. Louis to Miss Gladys Margaret Bonney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Bonney Jr. of Baltimore. The marriage took place at Baltimore, Sept. 4. The young couple will be at home after Oct. 1 at 1043 Rush street, Chicago.

THE engagement of Miss Clara Frothingham, 3 Kingsbury place, daughter of Mrs. James C. Jones, to Doddridge Farrell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Farrell of Pittsburg, formerly of St. Louis, has been announced. Mr. Farrel is a brother of Mrs. Albert Ahern of Southmoor. Miss Frothingham was educated at National Park Seminary, Washington, D. C., being graduated in 1916. Mr. Farrell served during the war as first lieutenant of a machine gun company. No date for the wedding has been set.

AN important wedding to take place out of town next week will be the marriage of Miss Ruth Brown, 6 Beverly place, to Maurice Obear, Wednesday morning at the summer home of the bride at Harbor Beach, Mich. Miss Brown is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Alanson D. Brown, sister of Mrs. W. F. McElroy, Mrs. William O. Collins, Miss Vesta Brown and Alanson C. Brown. She is a graduate of Mary Institute and a member of the Junior League. Mr. Obear is a son of Thomas Obear of Chicago and a brother of Mrs. Lawrence O'Neil of Kingsbury place. He is a graduate of Leland Stanford University and was a captain in the Fourteenth Field Artillery during the war. Following their honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Obear will go to Cuba for the winter where he is engaged in business. Mrs. William O. Collins, 5 Hortense place, and her young daughter, Miss Janet Collins, and Mrs. Warren Finley McElroy and her daughter, Miss Jane McElroy, will depart today for Harbor Beach to attend the wedding.

THE engagement of Miss Dorothy Walsh of 7103 Waterman avenue to Walter A. Henshaw was announced at a luncheon she gave Friday to 14 of her most intimate friends.

Miss Walsh is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. P. R. Walsh. She received her education at Hosmer Hall and Oaksmere.

Mr. Henshaw is the son of George A. Henshaw of Oklahoma City.

He was graduated from Stillwater University and has recently been discharged from the army, after two years' services in the aviation branch.

The decorations were carried out in pink and blue and the announcement was made by the place cards, which were miniature cupids holding cards with the names of Miss Walsh and her fiance on them.

A wedding of interest took place yesterday evening when Miss Emily H. Beck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Beck of Lockwood avenue, Webster Groves, became the bride of A. W. Hamilton of Chicago.

Owing to the recent death of Mr. Beck's father, all the arrangements were very simple. The Rev. J. Courtney Jones performed the ceremony at the Emmanuel Episcopal Church of Webster Groves and a small reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride's sister, Miss Katherine Beck, attended her as maid of honor and Miss Isabel Perry of Maryland was bridesmaid.

Attending the bridegroom were George Peabody of Chicago, as best man, and Horace W. Beck Jr., Charles G. Hines of Maryland, George Reed and Frank Sammon of Chicago, groomsmen and ushers.

Among the out-of-town guests present were Mrs. R. F. Gundry and her son, Richard Gundry of Boston, and Mrs. W. F. Hines of Baltimore.

After a wedding trip Mr. Hamilton and his bride will go to Chicago to reside.

Miss Alice Rubelman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Rubelman of 5 Forest Ridge, has chosen Oct. 21 as the date of her marriage to Harold Knight, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Knight of 6106 Kingsbury boulevard. The wedding will take place at the Second Presbyterian Church and a small reception will follow at the home of the bride's parents.

Miss Rubelman was graduated from Mary Institute and later attended Bryn Mawr for two years. She was formally presented to society last season at a large reception given by her mother and was very popular, taking part in numerous social affairs last winter.

Mr. Knight attended Washington University and is a member of the Alpha Kappa Delta fraternity.

Miss Mildred Candy of 6165 Kingsbury boulevard entertained last Wednesday with a bridge party at which the engagement of Miss Grace Miller Woods to W. Carey Payne, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Payne of 5664 Washington court, was announced.

Miss Woods is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Woods of Indianapolis, formerly of St. Louis. She was graduated from Washington University last June and is a member of the Phi Beta Phi Sorority.

Mr. Payne was in service a year with the 110th Ammunition Train.

Miss Woods arrived from Indianapolis Sept. 6 and is the guest of her brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Horace C. Woods.

No date for the wedding has been set.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Scheu, 6112 Kingsbury boulevard, sent out cards last week announcing the engagement of their daughter, Miss Katherine Louise Scheu, to Clarence Wagner Bader of Chicago, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gallus J. Bader. Miss Scheu was educated at the University of Wisconsin. Mr. Bader is a graduate of Notre Dame University and is a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity. He served as First Lieutenant of infantry during the war. The date for the wedding has not been set.

Mrs. L. D. Cabanne and her daughter, Miss Dorys T. Cabanne of 4915 Argyle place, will spend the winter in Washington, D. C., with Maj. and Mrs. Sevier Rains Tupper.

The marriage of Miss Virginia Marie Burke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Burke of 3705 Humphrey street, and Mr. Frank Edward Murphy, son of Mrs. Catherine Murphy of Hollister, Cal., took place Monday morning, with Father S. J. Robinson officiating. The couple were attended by the bride's sister, Miss Jeanette Burke, and William E. Gallagher.

After a wedding breakfast at Hotel Statler, the couple departed for an extended honeymoon in the East. The bride is a graduate of Loretto Academy, class of 1917, and is a pianist of merit. Mr. Murphy is an alumnus of Leland Stanford University, and the senior medical class of St. Louis University. Mr. and Mrs. Murphy will reside temporarily with the bride's parents, and will be at home after Oct. 15.

Miss Jeanne Frauenthal of 4240 Russell avenue entertained with a tea Sept. 6, at which she announced her engagement to Jean Bainum, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Bainum of 6200 Victoria street. Miss Frauenthal is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Frauenthal and is a graduate of Lenox Hall. Mr. Bainum served with the 138th Infantry during the war and has been recommended for the D. S. C. The wedding will take place in the spring.

Mrs. Edward Thurman Smith received the members of the Twentieth Century Art Club and other friends at her residence "Hill Top," 7171 Kingsbury boulevard, on Friday afternoon. Those who assisted in receiving were Mmes. A. D. Nortoni, L. L. King, Samuel Myerson, T. E. Francis, A. E. Fisher, E. D. Rae, P. H. Cullen and D. C. Wray. Misses Fisher, Florence Markham, Mildred Francis, Maud O'Donnell, Ruth Markham and Margaret Francis served.

Mrs. James J. Dowd, who until Aug. 30 was Miss Hanne Gerdes, of 4116 W. Rosalie street was the guest of honor at a luncheon and card party given at the Missouri Athletic Association Sept. 6. Those present were Mrs. James J. Dowd, Mrs. Herbert Mesloh, and the Misses Ella Haeseler, Edna Landzettel, Minnie Campbell, Ellen Muehlberg, Adele Heil, Gertrude Gallaher, Ruth Gundlach, and Martha Gerdes.

The marriage of Miss Lulu Hooper and Philip M. Chamberlain took place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Lillie Hooper, Wednesday, the Rev. F. M. Keller officiating. Mr. Chamberlain is the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Chamberlain of Chicago. He has recently returned from a year's service in France. The bride was gowned in an ivory Georg-

FURSAND MYSTERY

Spring caught black muskrat fur is the finest grade procurable. From this class downward, there are so many different qualities that that one is bewildered in thinking of them—the principal determining features being, where caught, when caught, what size and what color.

Muskrat is a durable fur—one of the best-wearing furs there is, exceeding in this virtue several of the more costly though less plentiful animals. It is fair then to presume that if muskrats were more scarce, the fur would sell at a very much higher price than it does.

Besides being so durable, muskrat fur is always in strong demand because it can be used in almost any condition—natural, plucked, blended, dyed or sheared.

It is not sold as muskrat in all these conditions, however, for the unreliable fur dealer can get a better price for it as mink, brook mink, water mink, Hudson seal, electric seal, Red River and numerous other kinds of seal, none of which exist—and as moleskin, when sheared.

Regardless of the many lower grades of muskrat fur, that can be doctored to sell at higher prices than they are worth, other skins of still lower value than the poorer muskrat classes are "treated" and sold by conscienceless dealers as the genuine.

Few people would consider entering the store of a diamond merchant of unknown standing and buying a stone merely on his word that it was "the real thing," perfectly cut, first water, etc., and yet there is more room for deception in selling muskrat fur, and most people know less about it than about gems.

At least, a poor diamond will wear!

A Word About Linoleums

LINOLEUM and oil floor cloths should have a coat of Victoria Floor Finish to preserve them. They can then be waxed as any finished floor. The first coat of varnish or paint should be brushed out thoroughly, as the linoleum absorbs the liquid rapidly. The second coat is readily applied. Linoleum floor cloths should be painted with Floor Paint or Glaze, as the linseed oil paints dry too slow and are apt to make Floor Finish dry tacky.

PLAN COMMISSION OUTLINES IDEAS FOR CITY BUILDING GROUP

down condition, and that the presence of an imposing group of buildings affording splendid opportunities for light and air should encourage the building of hotels and other similar structures, not only in this immediate locality, but extending westward as far as Eighteenth street and the Union Station.

Buildings in Poor Condition.

"Previous studies made by the City Plan Commission have indicated that the expansion of the business district, particularly the commercial section, is destined to proceed westwardly between Olive street and Franklin avenue, inasmuch as the preponderance of vehicular as well as of street car traffic enters over these and intermediate thoroughfares. The public-building group plan would therefore stimulate and encourage a high character of building development in a district where it might otherwise be expected, thus creating a well-balanced westward expansion of the business district.

"St. Louis is growing rapidly. As the city grows the business district must expand. Twelfth street will inevitably become the central thoroughfare of the business district. This by no means will cause the depreciation or cessation of the present activities in the eastern section of the business district. It simply means that St. Louis must plan for an enlarged business district commensurate with the growth of the city. The public-building group plan will then be actually at the heart of the city's activities.

"Mention has already been made c. the poor condition of property in the vicinity of the present Municipal Buildings. Several plans have been proposed which would clear out and rehabilitate some of the property west of Twelfth street and lying between Olive and Market streets. It is believed that the public-building group plan proposed would do this more successfully than any plan heretofore devised. Certainly the poor character of the majority of buildings between Twelfth, Eighteenth, Market and Olive streets is not merely a discredit to the city of St. Louis and an unpleasant daily reminder of the necessity for rehabilitation, but the present condition of this property represents a tremendous actual monetary loss to the city in the form of diminishing tax returns, which would be entirely overcome by the adoption and execution of the public-building group plan.

The Community Center Hall.

"In view of the fact that one of the first public buildings to be built will be the Municipal Auditorium and Community Center Building, assuming that the proposed municipal bond issue is favorably acted upon in the election of November next, the question of the location of this building has been the object of serious consideration by the City Plan Commission.

"The size and character of this building is such that it could not be erected on the average city block. In fact, our studies have indicated that there are but two or three locations where this building could be satisfactorily constructed. Our attention was first directed to the block bounded by Twelfth, Chestnut, Eleventh and Market streets, in which block the city owns a considerable proportion of the property; but this block was found to be entirely inadequate in size. Later our attention was directed to the two blocks bounded by Twelfth street, Market street, Eleventh street, and Clark avenue as a prospective site for the Municipal Auditorium and Community Center Building. This would involve the closing of Walnut street between Eleventh and Twelfth. While it would afford a plot of sufficient size for the building, the ground is expensive and it was deemed undesirable to have a building of this character on one of the principal thoroughfares of the city, since its use by tremendous crowds of people would bring about a congestion of traffic on both Twelfth and Market streets, where traffic congestion would not be a desirable feature.

Our final conclusion is that the best location for the Municipal Auditorium and Community Center Building is the block bounded by Fourteenth, Market, Fifteenth streets and Clark avenue, possibly omitting the acquisition of the rear of the block on Clark avenue. This is one of the largest blocks in the downtown section of the city. It is not too far removed from the hotels and business district. It has the advantage of being adjacent to most of the principal traffic thoroughfares. By not placing the building on the principal trafficways, opportunity would be afforded about the entire building for the parking of automobiles and street cars to accommodate the crowds that might be expected, and without confusing or interfering with the usual traffic on the principal traffic routes. This site also has the further advantage of giving an imposing location for the Municipal Auditorium and Community Center Building and making it an integral part of the proposed public building group plan. Furthermore, the value of the ground is considerably less than in any other location.

Auditorium as a War Memorial.

"It has been suggested that the Municipal Auditorium and Community Center Building be so designed and built as to constitute the city's memorial to those who served and died in the great war. This could very properly and effectively be done. Such designs of the buildings as have been made have contemplated this feature, although it is not essential that the two ideas be combined. St. Louis needs a Municipal Auditorium and Community Center Building, and needs it soon. Regardless of whether a memorial feature is combined with it or not, a Municipal Auditorium should be built and so designed as to combine all of the features necessary to make it a successful building, used continually the year round in order to make it a satisfactory investment and to justify its great cost.

"St. Louis is probably criticised more because of the surroundings of its Union Station than for any other reason. The necessity for improving this neighborhood is almost unanimously admitted. As a suggestion for accomplishing this purpose there is presented herewith an alternative plan for locating the municipal auditorum and community center building opposite the Union Station, occupying the two blocks bounded by Chestnut, Eighteenth, Pine and Twentieth streets and opening up as a plaza the two intermediate blocks bounded by Market, Eighteenth, Chestnut and Twentieth streets. This location for the municipal auditorium and community center building is not deemed as desirable as the previously mentioned location immediately west of the municipal courts building in the municipal-building group plan. However, it opens up attractive possibilities which should receive further serious consideration. It is possible that a sufficient number of public

STAUFER'S STILL 5¢ Laundry Tablets

Don't Worry
Because Uncle Sam Is Not Selling Soap

You can still buy STAUFER'S LAUNDRY TABLET for 5c. They will do all the things soap does and then some, bleach linens, brighten colors, preserve fabric, lessen the labor of washing. Ask your grocer why he has carried STAUFER'S for the past twenty years, ask your neighbor why she has used STAUFER'S ever since she was keeping house. Economize by using the old reliable Washing Compound which, in spite of high prices, still sells at 5c. One 5c Tablet will do two boilers of wash and no soap is required. Unsurpassed for washing machine washing. Follow directions as for tub washing. Will not injure metals or rubber. Will not clog parts. At all grocers.

HENDERSON ELECTION TAKEN AS REPROOF TO GOVERNMENT

Labor Leader's Success Revives Speculation of Imminence of Another General Election.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Friday, Sept. 12.—The result of the by-election of Widnes, Lancaster, in which Arthur Henderson, Labor leader, was elected to the House of Commons, is considered a severe blow to the coalition Government, and has revived speculation as to the imminence of another general election.

The virtually unanimous vote of the Trades Union Congress at Glasgow for the nationalization of mines and today's vote on the subject of withdrawing British troops from Russia are regarded as evidence of a very determined attitude on the part of labor against the Government.

It is pointed out that they are suspicious as to the Government's intentions concerning Russia and conscription and that the Glasgow Congress declines clearly to condemn the policy of direct action, but only strategically sidetracked the decision.

Henderson said his victory was "an emphatic condemnation of the coalition Government's policy and of the cynical political compromise upon which the Government rests."

"I believe," he continued, "that the origin of the demand for a policy of direct action lies in the fact that the present Parliament is felt to be wholly unrepresentative of the nation and is dominated by reactionary influences. This has involved the country in proceedings which are the negation of democracy. It is shown in developments in Russia, Hungary and, near home, in Ireland where the situation is obviously grave. Widnes is a warning the Government cannot afford to ignore."

buildings will be needed within the next few years to warrant undertaking the municipal-building group plan. To locate the municipal auditorium and community center building near Union Station as suggested would not prevent the execution of the group plan if undertaken. Its location at this point, however, does not afford the degree of accessibility that is inherent in the previously mentioned site.

Should Look to Future.

"In 1904 a Public Buildings Commission was appointed to study the location of public buildings in St. Louis. This commission presented an admirable report, but their suggestions were not followed. The occasion for their appointment was the contemplated erection of the municipal courts building. Fortunately, the opportunity for a public-buildings group plan that will be a credit to St. Louis is still open. Now that other structures are soon to be built we should again give thought to the question of the best design and location for them, so that whatever is done may not be in continuation of preceding haphazard methods of our city's growth. Even though it may take years to complete a public-building group plan such as is here suggested, whatever we do now should be done in the spirit of building a future city in accordance with some definite plan that will be truly representative of our city, our citizenship and enlightened methods of city building."

BELCHING
Acid-Stomach

Let EATONIC, the wonderful modern stomach remedy, give you quick relief from disgusting belching, food-repeating, indigestion, bloated, gassy stomach, dyspepsia, heartburn and other stomach miseries. They are all caused by Acid-Stomach from which about nine people out of ten suffer in one way or another. One writes as follows: "Before I used EATONIC, I could not eat a bite without belching it right up, sour and bitter. I have not had a bit of trouble since the first tablet."

Millions are victims of Acid-Stomach without knowing it. They are weak and ailing, have poor digestion, bodies improperly nourished although they may eat heartily. Grave disorders are likely to follow if an acid-stomach is neglected. Cirrhosis of the liver, intestinal congestion, gastritis, catarrh of the stomach—these are only a few of the many ailments often caused by Acid-Stomach.

A sufferer from Catarrh of the Stomach of 11 years' standing writes: "I had catarrh of the stomach for 11 long years and I never found anything to do me any good—just temporary relief—until I used EATONIC. It is a wonderful remedy and I do not want to be without it."

If you are not feeling quite right—lack energy and enthusiasm and don't know just where to locate the trouble—try EATONIC and see how much better you will feel in every way.

At all drug stores—a big box for 50c and your money back if you are not satisfied.

1000 PERSONS ATTEND FALL PAINTING EXHIBIT

Little "Modernist" Work Shown in Pictures Now on View to Public at Art Museum.

There is now on exhibition at the art museum, in Forest Park a collection representing the best paintings done by American artists in the last year. The exhibition will continue until Nov. 1, and is open to the public.

Many of the 1000 persons who attended the opening of the exhibition Friday night were people actively interested in art movements, and they pronounced the collection one of the best, if not the best, of the 14 which have appeared here in as many years. An Eastern and a Western jury selected most of the paintings, and Director Holland invited a few.

Considering the troubled spirit of the times, the subjects and their execution are surprisingly conventional. Indeed, less than half a dozen of the 162 pictures have any bearing whatever on the war. The finest two paintings of the collection—a portrait of Mrs. Moore, by John Sargent, premier of American painters, and "The Glory of God," by Horatio Walker, are on two of the oldest themes of art history.

However, war had its representation, and a striking one, too, in "Marseillaise," a flamingly vivid poster, depicting the white body of France, twisted with a terrible agony over a soldier's grave, yet desperately gripping the tricolor, while the belching flames of the world conflagration leap luridly in the background. The stony whiteness of the figure, thrown against the blood redness of the flag, forms a contrast that fairly leaps out from surrounding pictures.

Arthur Carles the Artist.

During the evening this was a constant certer of admiring groups. The artist is Arthur Carles of Philadelphia. Another war subject was a destroyer patrol, done by Reuterdahl in his familiar style.

Some of the younger art devotees who attended Friday night appeared disappointed that there were so few "modernist" examples, but the ordinary spectator, as well as the more conservative critics, were frankly pleased. They said they had feared something like the recent exhibition of painting by Boris Anisfeld, the Russian "modernist," some of whose creations were distinctly "wild."

Artists generally agreed that the finest picture on exhibition was the portrait by Sargent, although Walker's masterpiece, which showed a peasant couple, having alighted from their cart, standing in a reverent attitude before a wayside shrine, attracked more attention. It is a moonlight scene, and the highlights achieved by the artist add greatly to the impressiveness of the work.

Another among the best depicts a nude reclining on a couch before a Chinese screen, and the title is "The Lacquer Screen." The artist is Leopold Seyffert, of Philadelphia.

Nine St. Louisans Represented.

St. Louis had a substantial representation, Thomas P. Barnett, Paul Berdanier, Oscar Berninghaus, Gustav Goetsch, Charles E. Wuerpel, F. R. Nauman, Emily Phillips, E. O. Thalinger and C. E. Galt having paintings in the collection. That of Berdanier is of particular local interest, a scene on the banks of the Mississippi River by moonlight.

"The Young Painter," by F. R. Dickinson of New York, showing a youthful face of unusual purity and sensitiveness, occassioned much favorable comment. It is somewhat reminiscent of photographs of Shelley. The loosened blue blouse and the high idalism of the face led some spectators to surmise that it represented a boy soldier of Fraince.

Fantasy in Red and Grfeen.

"The "modernists" had some consolation from a fantasy representing the spirits of Spring and Summer merging. Its bright red and green hues are much like some of Anisfeld's works, and prompted one cynic to ask Director Holland if it represented "a rew beefsteak." The harried director, who between satisfying the revolutionary aims of the radicals and mollifying the outraged academicians, has a hard time of it, replied placatingly that it "probably was painted by one of these crazy fellows who had something in mind."

Director Holland said to a reporter that St. Louis is unusually fortunate in having the exhibition, and that this privilege may be denied in the future unless public interest justifies it. No prizes are offered here, as is the case in New York, Chicago, Washington, Philadelphia and other cities where the paintings are shown. The collection may be seen while it is here during the regular daylight hours of the museum, which are 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.

MEXICANS ACCUSE AMERICAN

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—An American citizen, Samuel Follery, has confessed to participation in the assault on the Atlantic Refining Co.'s property in Guayabillo on Aug. 14, according to an announcement made today at the Mexican embassy. It was added that Follery also was an accomplice of those who robbed the same company on July 16 of 12,000 pesos.

The embassy also stated that an investigation in the State of Puebla had proven that Edward L. Du Fourq, another American, who was killed in that state, was not the victim of the rebels, but was murdered by another American named Heisman.

WILL STUDY PENAL SYSTEMS

Prison Commission From India Arrives in United States.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—On the Aquitania, arriving early today, was a special prison commission from India of which Sir Alexander Cardew is chairman. The members will study the reformatory and penal methods in this country, preliminary to making radical changes in the penal system of Ihdia.

Others on the liner were Dr. John P. Andrews, secretary of the American Association for Labor Legislation, who has been in France and England for two months as technical adviser from the United States Government to the committee of arrangements for the International Labor Congress to be held in Washington next month, and Baron Jote and members of the Japanese peace conference mission.

JUDGE PROHIBITS SALE OF DAIRY'S PROPERTY

Grants Restraining Order on Complaint of Stockholders of Old Union Company.

On request of six stockholders Circuit Judge Hall yesterday issued an order temporarily restraining the sale of three parcels of realty belonging to the old Union Dairy Co. The sale was advertised to take place tomorrow under a $150,000 deed of trust held by Jacob A. Spies, former president of the company, but instead the matter will come up on the issue as to making the injunction permanent. The petitioners also asked that the deed of trust be declared void and that a receiver be appointed for the company.

It is alleged by the plaintiffs that the realty is worth from $250,000 to $300,000 and that if it is sold to satisfy the mortage their interests will be sacrificed. They set forth that Spies, acting as president of the company, took the mortage to cover an indebtedness of $150,000 of the company which he assumed. They say this was done without their consent and is therefore void.

Rent Is $11,000 a Year.

The realty consists of property at the northeast corner of Jefferson and Washington avenues, one piece on Morgan and another on Duncan avenue. It is now under lease to the City Dairies Co. at $11,000 a year. The City Dairies Co. was organized in February by merger of the Union and Grafeman companies.

The plaintiffs are Margaret V. Brooker, L. W. Blanke, Louis J. Schulte, Joseph Marchscek, J. J. Gunther and William Seifert. They name as defendants Cecil R. Nickolls, trustee of the deed of trust; Jacob A. Spies, the Union Dairy Co. and its officers—Adam Thornton, Edward N. Beach, James Mackentosh, E. V. Kaiser, C. W. Dickey and John Jackson.

According to the petition Jacob Spies dominated the affairs of the corporation and put through the merger, although two months before, as shown by the last statement, the Union company was solvent, having ample assets with which to pay debts and leave a large surplus for stockholders. The indebtedness consisted of $150,000 to the St. Louis Union Bank, it is stated.

Spies Guaranteed Obligation.

Attached to the petition is a notice sent to the stockholders early this year by Spies in which he set forth that his brother, the late Louis A. Spies, former president, had assumed the indebtedness of the company to the bank and that to prevent it becoming a charge against Louis' estate and leaving nothing for the latter's widow he (Jacob) personally guaranteed the obligation. The stockholders are asked to subscribe $40 a share to make up the loan. Another notice gave warning that they had failed to make the contribution, the bank was demanding its money and that foreclosure proceedings would be the next step. The Union Dairy was capitalized at $350,000.

50 NAMED TO HELP CONVENT

Nonsectarian Committee to Aid in Social Service Work.

A nonsectarian committee of 50 men has been formed to serve as an advisory board in connection with the social service work of the convent of the Good Shepherd, Gravois and Bamberger avenues. The committee is headed by Archbishop Glennon and Mayor Kiel and includes, among other, United States Senator Spencer, Congressmen Igoe, Dyer and Newton.

I. F. Gradwohl was elected president of the executive committee that will organize the business activities of the convent with a view of putting the institution on a self-supporting basis, so that it can produce sufficient revenue yearly to provide for the 315 women and girls who have come to its refuge, or been committed to its care. Other members of the executive committee are Amadee V. Reyburn, treasurer, J. J. Burns, secretary, and W. R. Clark, assistant treasurer.

One of the early activities projected by the committee is a series of concerts at the Odeon Oct. 28 and 29, to raise funds to liquidate the $55,000 indbtedness of the institution.

$120,443,469 INSURANCE PAID

Death Claims Due to Winter's Illness Are Reported.

By the Associated Press.

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 13.—Figures of death claims because of the epidemic of influenza, grip and pneumonia from Oct. 1, last, to March 1 of this year, presented in a paper read to the National Convention of Insurance Commissioners which closed yesterday, by T. F. Tarbell, an actuary of the Connecticut Insurance Department, showed a payment of $120,443,469 by 31 out of 42 companies canvassed.

The rate of sickness doubled in that period as compared with the same period a year previous. Health and accident companies noted an increase in sickness proportionately as great for the same period.

Austria Refuses to Surrender Bela Kun.

By the Associated Press.

PRRIS, Sept. 13.—The Austrian Government has refused to accede to Hungary's demand for the extradition of Bela Kun, virtual dictator at Budapest during the communist regime, asking for proofs of accusations of murder and theft made against him, according to Vienna newspapers.

235 Births, 180 Deaths in Week.

Births recorded for a seven-day period ending at 5 p. m. Friday amounted to 235. There were 180 deaths. Twenty-seven persons died of organic heart trouble, 18 of Bright's disease, 18 of nephritis, 14 of cancer and malignant tumor and 13 of tuberculosis. There were six accidental deaths, four suicides and two homicides.

Tablets That Cost Little and Do Much

Here's the end of all drudgery, the one thing in all the world that makes washday a day to look forward to.

SIZZ saves half the soap, and nearly all the labor. SIZZ makes white things whiter, cleans fancy waists, and garments of silk and satin.

With all its capacity for laundering SIZZ also cleans coat collars, suits, shoe tops, spats, hats, furs—even painted woodwork and linoleum are freed from soil and made like new.

You'd think we had covered about everything that SIZZ could do. But after the clothes have been cleaned and the fine goods made spotless; after the clothing and shoes have been attended to; after the hats and furs have been renewed; bless you, there are still the rugs that SIZZ can clean, and clean better and more cheaply than by any other means. A rug 9 feet by 12 feet in size, spotted and greasy, foot-marked and stained, can be cleaned entirely with one package of SIZZ.

There's no lye, caustic, soda, lime, acid or grease in these wonder-working SIZZ tablets. You can eat 'em, they're that safe. Read the directions and see how readily other women save money and work.

Irish Aid Fund Had $689,040.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Sept. 13.—The Irish National Aid and Volunteer Dependants' Fund, formed after the rebellion of Easter week to provide for the families of men killed or imprisoned, has just issued an audited account of its work which shows that the total amount received was $685,040, of which it expended $679,730. Subscriptions were received from all over the world, the largest contirbution, $296,740, coming from the United States, while $109,970 came from Australia, and $25,850 from New Zealand. Ireland itself contributed $218,125.

New Lamps to Brighten and Embellish Your Home

YOU will be pleasantly impressed with the great variety of new lamps which we have just received. Floor lamps, table lamps and boudoir lamps, with silk and parchment shades, of designs and colorings to meet every decorative requirement, are shown in profusion. Perhaps never before has it been our privilege to present so splendid an array of such useful and beautiful lamps. The prices are moderate, the values great. You will find these lamps in various appropriate settings among our Living Room and Sun Room Furniture.

Domestic Rugs of Superior Quality

The variety, extent and reasonable prices of the assortments shown here are the reasons why so many people prefer to buy from Kennard's. You will find all rugs in all sizes and the colorings to meet the requirements of any scheme of decoration.

The Newest Draperies in All Fabrics

The chief charm of our drapery department is the large assortments of the latest creations. The velours are lovelier than ever, while there are probably no greater artistic effects than those found in the new arrivals of cretonnes. These cretonnes are the one instance of illuminated fabrics in which the boldest conceptions of design and color are unceasingly attractive.

Time now to be thinking of new portieres. We show them in many materials, many colorings and in a wide range of prices. All prices for draperies will be found very reasonable.

NORTH SIDE Y. M. C. A. TO BE DEDICATED TODAY

Parade From 19th and St. Louis to Grand and Sullivan at 1:30 P. M.

The new four-story building of the North Side department, St. Louis Young Men's Christian Association at Grand and Sullivan avenues, will be dedicated this afternoon, with exercises in which the North St. Louis Business Men's Association, the Knights Templar, and church and school organizations will take part.

The building, costing $150,000, is of stone up to the second story, and the remainder of brick. It is a conspicuous object from the grandstand of the American League baseball park.

The building contains departments for men and boys, gymnasium, running track, swimming pool, classrooms, assembly hall and bedrooms, besides social and reading rooms.

The afternoon's exercises will begin with a parade, forming at Nineteenth street and St. Louis avenue at 1:30, and marching west on St. Louis avenue to Grand, then north to the building. Business and fraternal organizations, church societies, Boy Scouts and school drum corps will be in line.

Speaking Program.

The ceremony in the building will begin at 3 o'clock, with an address of welcome by Louis Boeger, chairman of the North Side organization. Melville L. Wilkinson, president of Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney, and vice president of the St. Louis Y. M. C. A. will preside. The singing of "America" is to be followed by an invocation by the Rev. J. P. Meyer, pastor of Bethel Evangelical Church, and by talks scheduled to be made by Mayor Kiel, Louis Moller, past commander of the Knights Templar of Missouri, and J. H. Banks, State secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

The dedicatory address will be delivered by Henry M. Beardsley, former Mayor of Kansas City, and former moderator of the National Council of Congregational Churches. The keys will be turned over to J. W. Fristoe, on behalf of the building committee, and will be accepted by F. H. Peters, honorary chairman. The dedicatory response exercise will be conducted by Philemon Bevis, general secretary of the St. Louis Y. M. C. A.

2260 New Members.

Tomorrow night will be church and association night at the new building, with Phil Stremmel presiding and J. G. Kessler as the chief speaker. Wednesday night is designated as Ladies' Night, and Miss Margaret Wilson, general secretary of the Young Women's Christian Association, will speak. Friday night will be Boys' Night, and there will be music, motion pictures, swimming and gymnastic exercises, besides short talks.

A membership contest, which has just ended, brought in 2260 new members for the North Side "Y." The team headed by Louis Boeger won the contest, getting 1136 members, to 1124 obtained by the team headed by Alfred W. Pauley. A silver cup 25 inches high was awarded to a group of 10 workers, headed by Paul J. Wielandy, for getting the largest number obtained by any such group. Their number was 347. Phil Stremmel was field marshal, and J. F. Mocker campaign director.

IMPORTATION OF U. S. COAL BY GERMANY IS UNLIKELY

Price So High That Purchase in Quantities Is Declared to Be Out of Question.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Wednesday, Sept. 10.—Importation of American coal in quantities sufficient to relieve Germany's need is regarded by the press as inconceivable, owing to the cost. Although German-American negotiations have resulted in an offer to send American coal to this country, it is said, the price is so high, owing to freight rates and foreign exchange that the importation of coal in large quantities is out of the question.

Coal experts of the Ruhr district are against the movement to import foreign coal, especially American. Peter Kloeckner, one of the leading Rhenish industrialists, recently declared American coal costs 500 marks against 70 marks a ton for German coal. Since he made this statement the foreign exchange situation has become worse.

WOUNDED PRIVATE AT HOME

Oliver W. Cook Injured First Near Chateau-Thiery.

Private Oliver W. Cook, 22 years old, who was a member of the Motor Transport Corps of the American Army and a dispatch rider with the Fifth and Sixth Marines at Chateau Thierry, is visiting his parents at 2620 Natural Bridge avenue from Fort Sheridan hospital.

Private Cook was wounded in the right leg by shrapnel July 15, 1918, near Chateau Thierry, and the same leg was broken last June in a motorcycle accident near Bordeaux. The leg has not fully healed, which is the reason for his detention in the hospital.

$1.80 FOR SUPPOSED REMBRANDT

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, Aug. 12.—A British army officer recently purchased for 7½ shillings ($1.80) in a Pretoria auction room a picture which art critics believe to be a missing Rembrandt—a work of priceless value. The picture, portraying the Crucifixion, has been sent to advisors of the Great Art Gallery at The Hague for examination.

The theory is that the picture was brought to South Africa by a member of a family of Dutch noblemen who were patrons of Rembrandt.

W. U. CHANCELLOR RETURNS

Dr. F. A. Hall to Prepare for Opening of School Sept. 25.

Dr. Frederic A. Hall, chancellor of Washington University, has returned from two months in the Catskills and preparation for the opening of the university's school year Sept. 25 will begin actively tomorrow. All members of the faculty have been summoned to report Sept. 22.

Scores of students already have enrolled, and Friday morning there was a long line of registrants.

Dr. R. R. Hollingsworth, who will begin his work as associate professor of education, while his twin brother, Dr. W. W. Hollingsworth, is professor of political science, has arrived from Georgia and is residing with his brother at 5869 Enright avenue.

GEORGE HERSHEY AUGUSTINE, LONG MERCHANT HERE, DIES

Funeral Service Will Be Held Today at Family Home in Kirkwood.

The funeral of George Hershey Augustine, for 20 years vice president of the Carleton Dry Goods Co., will be held today at the family home, "Fairlawn," in Kirkwood. He died at 7:15 o'clock Friday night, at the age of 71 years, after an illness of two years with a complication of diseases, following a nervous breakdown.

When his health failed physicians sent him to California. but when it was seen that the end was not far away, his family brought him back to St. Louis, arriving home Tuesday. He is survived by his widow and three children, Mrs. Warren Goddard, Mrs. Nelson D. Jay of Milwaukee and Floyd B. Augustine.

After business experience in Chicago and other cities, he came to this city in the '70s, and was connected with the firms of Dodd, Brown & Co. and the Ely & Walker Dry Goods Co. With Murray Carleton he purchased the controlling interest in the Wear & Boogher Dry Goods Co., and became vice president of the firm in 1899, when it changed its name to the Carleton Dry Goods Co.

PREUSS ARRAIGNS PARIS ATTITUDE ON UNION OF GERMANS

Addition of Austria to Germany Would Be Burden, but of Importance to Young Democracy, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Thursday, Sept. 10.—Dr. Hugo Preuss, who drafted the new German Constitution recently promulgated at Weimar, in a statement today to the Associated Press, severely arraigned the demand made by the peace conference that Germany must amend the constitution so as to prevent Austrian representation in German parliamentary offairs.

"I must emphasize first," he said, "that this is not a question of law. Legally it is clear and simple. The way in which our opponents brought up the matter shows they are following entirely different purposes than the clearing up of doubtful legal questions.

"In article 178 of the new German constitution is the clause: 'The terms of the treaty of peace signed at Versailles will not be effected by this constitution.' This excludes any practical collision between the peace terms and the constitution for if there should be any provisions of the constitution in contradiction of the peace terms, the latter would be valid legally without any chance for the constitution to take precedence over the treaty.

Not Formal Contradiction.

"Article 61, paragraph 2 (providing for the admission of Austrian members of the Reichstag) does not stand as a formal contradiction of the peace terms, this fact being recognized by the signing of the terms by the allied and associated Governments. In the German counter proposals to the original peace terms the German Government explained, in discusing this point, that Germany did not desire to violate the Austrian frontier, but that if Austria wanted to bring about a state of unity with Germany, the latter could not obligate herself to oppose the wishes of the 'German brothers in Austria,' for in that case the right of self-determination of peoples would count against Germany.

"The allied and associated Governments merely recognized in their answer Germany did not want forcibly to violate the Austrian frontier. Thus the peace treaty was signed. Article 61 does not forcibly violate the Austrian frontier. Rather everything is left to the free initiative of Austria on the basis of national principles and national self-determination.

"Further, if the entente raised serious objections to harmless paragraph 2 of article 61 there were plenty of opportunities to reach a quiet understanding with Germany, instead of that the entente chose a most sudden and brusque manner toward us and offered terms for which there was no trace of legality, the purpose being to compel Germany to alter her Constitution as to immaterial points. I estimate too highly the legal insight of our opponents to believe they do not recognize how legally untenable is their position.

"Their political purpose, however, has been attained and the whole world has been shown that Germany must submissively comply with the absolutely illegal order of the entente.

Purpose of Policy.

"I do not believe in the opinion widely current among Germans, that the statesmen of the entente and America are filled with anger and hate and have allowed themselves to be drawn into a planless and purposeless policy. This policy, however, can have but one thought and plan—to make it impossible to consolidate a democratic republic in Germany. The forcible prevention of a union of Austria and Germany is the blow in the face for all the solemnly proclaimed principles of the entente.

"The union of Austria to Germany would mean a severe burden on Germany. Tremendous sacrifices would be necessary and therefore there aer many people in Germany who viewed the plan with hesitation. It would, however, be of great value and would be of wonderful importance to the young German democracy as it would bring about a unity which Bismarck's statecraft and Prussian weapons failed to accomplish.

"The policy of the Entente, therefore, can have no conceivable aim other than forcibly to prevent this moral strengthening of the republic of Germany and to add to the strength of its opponents, since it would make it much easier for them to gain supporters for their claim that German national unity cannot be brought about in Germany except by a military reaction.

"When the peace terms were formulated the German people established their republic. We know at that time that with this peace instrument in hand the Entente could discredit the German republic. The German-Austrian question is the first indication of such an intent, but it probably will not be the last.

Counter to Declarations.

"In the meantime this policy runs counter to all the solemn declarations of President Wilson and the Entente—That should not mean much, for after our experiences since last November the value of these declarations has been sunk deeper than German values. But this policy negatives the obvious interests of the allied and associated Powers which demand the strengthening and the democratic development of Germany.

"It was attempted at first to represent the German democratic republic as a barefaced deception in order that actions such as were adopted to defeat Kaiserism might be justified. It is harder to maintain this fiction the longer the democratic regime lasts. This regime now has concluded a Constitution, the bases of which are pure democracy and unity. Under most tremendous difficulties it has protected the western world, as Adam, against Bolshevism. It was obvious to every stateman that the German republic cannot be forever misrepresented by a disguished kaiserism. So new blows must be delivered.

"Such treatment increases the protagonists of the old systems and adds to the spirit of revenge in the German people. A desired excuse for mishandling Germany may thus be given in future. The goal must be the destruction of German democracy or of Germany herself. If the allied and associated statesmen do not have this aim in view their policy of making life bitter for the German democracy would be inconsistent and that must never be assumed in studying the policies of an opponent.

British Land at Scutari.

LONDON, Friday, Sept. 12.—British forces have been landed at Scutari, across the Bosphorus from Constantinople. It is officially explained, however, that this is an ordinary troop movement and that only 1200 men were placed on shore.

STYLE SHOW NEXT AUGUST

The St. Louis style show committee has voted to hold a style show in August, 1920. It was also voted to raise an additional $15,000 for the purpose of nationally advertising the show and the St. Louis market. An advertising committee composed of Aaron Rauh, Paul Wielandy and Thomas H. Lovelace was appointed.

The Pageant of Fashion held in the Municipal Theater, Forest Park, in August, cost approximately $22,000. The receipts from subscriptions, entries and admissions was approximately $25,000. The style show committee contributed $1000 towards the building of the permanent dressing rooms. The officers of the committee are Flint Garrison, chairman; Paul J. Wielandy, vice chairman; Aaron S. Raur, chairman of Finance committee; Sigmund Hasgall, treasurer; Anita Moore, secretary.

BUDGET PLAN HEARING SEPT. 22

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Hearings on a budget system for the Government will be begun Sept. 22, by the Special House Committee which has decided to push the inquiry with a view of making recommendations before March, the date fixed for a final report.

Chairman Good was instructed to ask the Senate Committee to join in the hearings.

WILSON DOMINANT IN PEACE COUNCIL, SAYS PROF. HUDSON

Attache of American Mission Tells City Club President Seldom Failed to Get What He Wanted.

The manner in which President Wilson dominated the Supreme Council of the peace conference was described, from his personal observation of the Council in session, to members of the City Club yesterday by Prof. Manley O. Hudson of Harvard University Law School, who was attached to the American mission. He went to Paris at the signing of the armistice, departing, he said, one month ago yesterday. He formerly was a University of Missouri professor.

"I was never doubtful," he said, "but that the United States was represented by a man thoroughly respected. In many instances he was feared and seldom failed to get what he wanted."

Hudson's estimate of the accomlishments and failures embodied in the eace treaty seemed to have singular weight with his audience because of his dispassionate manner of statement. He had neither unqualified praise nor condemnation for the document.

Hudson said that, as a member of five separate advisory commissions, he frequently appeared before the Supreme Council, composed of the representatives of the five leading Powers. "There, to me, was no question that President Wilson was the dominant figure of the council," he said. "It was he who said what question was to be discussed and when the discussion should close. He was an adept at discovering just when an agreement was reached, just as Hankey of Great Britain was an adept in stating that agreement in words, for it usually was true that one word more of discussion would have meant disagreement, and one word too many or too few in the written interpretation of the agreement would have meant disagreement.

Made Informal by Wilson.

"The supreme council was hard to reach, but it was more informal when President Wilson was there and much more formal and more difficult of approach after he had left. But the council seldom acted without its advisers being present, and the advisers took the greatest part in the discussion. President Wilson usually directed the discussion of the American points himself. Clemenceau delegated the discussion to Tardieu when he could, Lloyd George used his experts and left his decisions to the men he was depending upon. President Wilson is greatest in taking words from men's mouths and making them his own, and did it much in the supreme council."

He said that the plenary conference, in which all the participants in the war on the side of the allies had representation, was merely the "show window" of what was going on and that the members of the plenary conference themselves often were entirely ignorant of the progress of negotiations.

"Clemenceau would appear before the plenary conference with, for instance, a supreme council decision on the league of nations. He would read the provision and interrogate: 'Are there any remarks?' If a Frenchman happened to rise to remark, Clemenceau was visibly displeased. If it chanced to be the head of the French commission for the consideration of a league of nations, he was visibly more displeased. He usually would end up the discussion in this fashion: 'There is no further discussion. It is agreed that this shall be a provision of the covenant of the league of nations? It is agreed. The meeting is adjourned.'

Hudson discussed some of the criticisms of the treaty, the covenant and the President. "I have heard it said that the British 'put it all over us,' that they were trained diplomats," he said. "In my own contacts when I saw Americans meet the British, the Americans invariably measured to the mark. I also have heard it said that President Wilson did not rely on his experts. Experts are peculiar beings. Let us say, for example, that one is assigned to Switzerland, to be the source of information as to all events of Switzerland. Soon he becomes pro-Swiss in view. Experts are a good thing to have on tap, but not on top. President Wilson didn't use his experts on many occasions, but on many he did.

"Then I have heard complaint of the amount of money spent by the American commission. They might have spent more. We did no entertaining. The British did, and entertaining seems to be the sine qua non of successful negotiation."

Wilson Alone on Shantung.

Hudson expresed his personal disapproval of the Shantung clause, but declared the circumstances under which it was made to have been extenuating. He said that California had not permitted the provision of race equality to enter the covenant and that Japan had been refused other concessions and was pressing her last remaining one, as to Shantung, at a time when the Italian commission returned to Italy. President Wilson had absolutely no support for his objection to the Shantung clause, he said.

Hudson declared the greatest advance accomplished by the peace treaty was that it had established among nations a willingness to work together on international problems. "That is the real issue in this present controversy," he said. "I would like to have seen some things in the covenant that are not there. I would like to have seen a provision for the expression of views of peoples when they oppose their own government.

"The most disappointing thing in the conference was that throughout the world it left vast multitudes of common people disillusioned in their hopes which have been inflamed to a high pitch by the speeches of President Wilson. He came to them as a sort of savior to whom they looked for a revolutionary new order of things, which was, of course, impossible. But I think I can understand the convictions of these people who want to see Europe organized on Bolshevik principles, though that is not the order of things to which I am looking."

Hudson gave to E. M. House great credit for winning Europe to an acceptance of Wilson's fourteen points as a basis for peace, and said that whether the treaty measured up to the fourteen points depended largely upon what interpretation was given to the points.

The Vocalion
Where other phonographs stopped, there the Vocalion began.
Other phonographs have an amplifier, the Vocalion has the Symphonetic Tone Chamber.
Other phonographs are impersonal things, the Vocalion has the Graduola, conferring the privilege of artistic tone control.
Other phonographs reproduce partial music, the Vocalion makes records eloquent with tones heretofore lost.
Other phonographs fall short of perfect music, the Vocalion satisfies the greatest musicians.
Broad claims, indeed. But they are made by the world's largest producer of musical instruments. That makes them worth investigating. That makes it worth your while to hear the Vocalion before you buy any other phonograph.

TO own a phonograph with limitations—or without limitations—to buy a noise maker or musical instrument—it is worth some thought and investigation.

SPECIAL SCHOOL TAX ELECTION ON NOV. 11

Taxpayers Only Can Vote on Proposed Increase From 60 to 75 Cents.

Preliminary details for the special school tax election, to be held Nov. 11, were agreed upon yesterday by the Board of Election Commissioners and the Board of Education.

The election, to be determined by a majority of the municipal taxpayers only, will settle the question of whether the school taxes will be increased from 60 to 75 cents on each $100 valuation to make it possible for the School Board to grant a permanent increase of salary to teachers and meet other current expenses of the public school system. A special registration will be held Sept. 25 in the 500 precincts of the city. Public announcement of the location of the polling places will be made on Sept. 19 and 20.

It will be necessary to prepare a list of about 3000 judges and clerks and to locate the various polling places. Because of the limited time at the disposal of the Election Board a large force of extra workers will have to be employed at once.

At a meeting at Central High School Friday afternoon several hundred members of the Grade School Teachers' Association decided to postpone consideration of a proposal to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor until after the special tax election.

After a spirited debate, the teachers, by a rising vote, decided to inform the Board of Education that they were not satisfied with the $100 bonus voted by the board last Thursday night. It was pointed out that the bonus was equivalent to about $10 a month increase for the teachers, whereas public school janitors were given an increase of $13 a month. The teachers, whose salaries now range from $850 to $1550 a year, had requested an increase of 33 1-3 per cent.

Announcement was made at the meeting that the membership of the association had now reached 900. This is an increase of more than 300 in the last two weeks and it was attributed to the formation of an organization of grade school principals a week ago.

ALABAMA CONSIDERS BILL TO DIVORCE DESERTED WIVES

Charge Is Made Many Soldiers Married and Abandoned Brides.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MOBILE, Ala., Sept. 13.—Argument in favor of the Craft divorce bill was made by representatives in the Committee of the Whole Friday who said it wold be beneficial to Alabama girls that married strange soldiers during the war and were deserted by them in a short time. The bill already has been approved by the Senate. It will permit a divorce to a man or woman when his or her consort has remained away from home ten months. The abandoned person is permitted to give 60 days notice to the absent person. The divorce is permitted at the end of the 60 days if he or she has not returned. The assertion was made that during the war soldiers married Alabama girls and in a short time abandoned them. The Craft bill would permit the granting of a divorce to the girls abandoned.

SEMINARY DAY NEXT SUNDAY

The 29 Evangelical churches of the city will have their annual seminary day at Eden Seminary campus next Sunday, at 3:30 p. m. Addresses will be made by the Rev. H. Fux of Redeemer Church and the Rev. Theodore Baun of Holy Ghost Church.

Twenty-one brotherhoods of the city churches will take active part in the days' program. A student chorus will give vocal selections and refreshments wil be served on the grounds.

Obregon Would Take the Field.

By the Associated Press.

Doctors Stand Amazed at Power of Bon-Opto to Make Weak Eyes Strong—According to Dr. Lewis

Guaranteed to Strengthen Eyesight 50% In One Week's Time in Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home

Philadelphia, Pa. Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses, and those who wear glasses, will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored by this remarkable prescription and many who once wore glasses say they have thrown them away. One man says, after using it: "I was almost blind. Could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without my glasses and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for 15 days everything seems clear. I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with eye strain caused by overworked, tired eyes which induced fierce headaches. I have worn glasses for several years both for distance and work, and without them I could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on the machine before me. I can do both now and have discarded my long distance glasses altogether. I can count the fluttering leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by the use of this prescription. Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and let it dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, the Bon-Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or misfit glasses. I can highly recommend it in case of weak, watery, aching, smarting, itching, burning eyes, red lids, blurred vision or for eyes inflamed from exposure to smoke, sun, dust or wind. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto, referred to above, is not a patent medicine or a secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is sold in this city by the leading druggists, including the Enderle, Johnson Bros., Pauley, Judge & Dolph, Wolff-Wilson Stores. —ADVERTISEMENT.

Where do you sit in the Theatre?

Imagine heading for the side rows first. There's not a human reason why you would do it. Instinct tells you to look straight ahead. It's easier—not tiresome.

Why, then, do you and I permit our best stenographers to read notes at the side contrary to both nature and human efficiency?

Neither stenographers nor employers have been responsible for this practice. But now we cannot conscientiously continue to twist spines, ruin eyes, drag down feminine beauty and handicap business when tens of thousands of stenographers are enjoying better health and doing better work through the use of the Line-a-Time.

Directly in Front

is the obvious and natural position. The Line-a-Time directly before the stenographer and directly back of the typewriter is the correcting feature of Line-a-Time System of Transcribing.

It does away with side reading and therefore does away with bad effects on the eyes and back of a stenographer.

AUTOS CUT OUT TRAIN EXCURSIONS TO KANSAS FAIRS

Railroads Abandon Custom of Years of Operating Specials to Carry Crowds to Expositions.

CROWDS ARE LARGER THAN EVER BEFORE

Farmers and Their Families Drive in Now, After Doing Morning Chores, and Back Again in Evening.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TOPEKA, Kan.—The automobile has sent another long-enduring institution into the discard. The railroads have announced that no excursion trains would be run to any of the fairs in Kansas this year. Those who find it impracticable to drive their motor cars or ride with someone else will have to take chances on the regular trains to get to the fair, or stay at home.

The automobile is assigned as the only reason for abandoning the time-honored custom of running excursion trains to the fairs on the two or three big days of the great event. So many folks go by motor car that the trains are not only unprofitable, but are operated at heavy losses and do not have enough passengers even to pay the trainmen. The year 1918 marked the passing of the excursion.

Some years ago the railroads took off the excursion trains for the circus days in the larger cities, but even during the war the Government authorized the railroads to operate excursion trains to the fairs. The Government maintained large exhibits at all the State and county fairs, and held that the people were entitled to and sholud have some amusement and recreation during the war period.

Larger Crowds Than Before.

But in Kansas, anyway, the excursion trains last year were all operated at a loss and all the railroads reported that the regular trains could have carried the crowds with one or two extra cars and some roads did not find it necessary to operate any extra cars. But the crowds at the fairs last year and thus far this year have been larger than in any previous year, and the indications are that the crowds at the big fairs in this State during the remainder of September and all of October will be limited only by the capacity of the grounds to take care of them.

But no more will the farmer gather up his family in the early hours of the morning, drive two to 10 miles to the railroad station, unhitch his team and leave it to the tender care of some liveryman while the family boards the excursion train, made up chiefly of dilapidated old coaches pulled by a wheezy old engine that acts as if it might blow up almost any minute. Those trips were great events for the farmer and his family. They landed in the fair town about 10 o'clock on a hot day, usually a very dusty day, and hiked to the fairgrounds.

Fat Lady to Balloon.

At noon there was the home-made lunch under the trees and the entire family took in everything from the fat lady to the balloon ascension and parachute leap. And there generally was a night show, too, and the family stayed for it, never leaving the grounds, as that would entail another admission fee all around. Then the train was scheduled to leave for home about 10 o'clock, but the crowd didn't gather until about 11, and then some time in the small hours of the morning the family arrived at its destination, found the team and wagon, hitched up and got home about daylight. All were so tired they could hardly move. All the kids had been asleep for hours and had to be carried, but everybody had a good time and the whole family talked about it for months afterward.

But that doesn't happen any more. For Mr. Farmer does the chores around home in the morning while the women folk put up the lunch and then they drive to the fair in the family automobile. Likely as not they will spend two days at the fair instead of one, coming home just after the races one afternoon to milk the cows and feed the pigs and the next day not starting for the fair until late in the afternoon and seeing part of the races and attending the fireworks display at night.

They do it in comfort and ease and good time now. As a matter of fact, the motor car has made the fairs available to more persons than the railroads ever handled in any year.

Meeting to Plan Relief Work.

The St. Louis War Relief Bazar Association will hold a meeting next Sunday at Turner Hall, 2508 Chouteau avenue, to plan to raise funds and solicit clothing for the relief of the people in the famine stricken districts of Germany, Austria and Hungary. The association raised $100,000 in 1915 for the same purpose but its work was stopped by the entry of the United States in the war in 1917.

An Armless Man who couldn't be Downed-

The story of a Mechanic who lost his Arm-Built a wonderful Substitute with his teeth and remaining Arm

On the night of the 13th of February, 1902, William T. Carnes, a machinist of Warren, Pa., was working on a large boring and milling machine in a machine shop at Pittsburg, Pa., when his right arm came in contact with a revolving cog-wheel, and was so terribly lacerated that it was necessary for it to be amputated two inches above the elbow.

He came out of the hospital armless and "down on his back." No one seemed to have any work for an armless man. When he searched for an artificial arm, he found that none suited his purpose. Young Carnes needed a job—to be back on the payroll again was his main idea, but the man with a hook for a hand got small consideration in a machine shop.

But Carnes had a streak of fighting blood and a slim purse. He refused to be downed. He began to study the human arm and hand. With his teeth and remaining arm he fought his battle, duplicating the arm muscles with steel levers, the joints with ratchets and gears in such a way that they responded to the nerve impulses of the stumps on his shoulder.

Never before probably had a man lost his own arm who had the mechanical skill, the patience and perseverance to work out each individual movement and test, and try it out personally, patiently and painstakingly, changing this, condemning that; completing one movement before working on the next one, finishing it, making them work in unison, easily and naturally; strengthening the weak parts, hardening the wearing surfaces, etc., until in the face of untold discouragement, adverse criticism, and friendly advice to "drop it," he perfected an arm which flexed and straightened; the wrist turned, and bent, the fingers opened and closed at his will.

And then, six years later, a Western capitalist lost his arm. By accident he heard of Carnes and his wonderful invention. Six months passed before he received it and saw what wonderful things could be done with the arm. He was astounded.

"You haven't a moral right to keep people waiting months for your arms," said Mr. Prescott.

MR. WM. T. CARNES, Inventor

When Carnes spoke of his financial needs, a big company was organized in Kansas City to manufacture the Carnes Arm. Today this large factory turns arms out more rapidly and much better than the Pennsylvania mechanic ever dreamed. Many of the factory workers are armless, operating complex machines.

Carnes Artificial Arm is worn today in every State in the Union, and in practically every civilized country in the world.

The allied Governments equip large numbers of maimed soldiers with the Carnes Arm—they go "on the pay-roll again."

Armless persons should write to the Carnes Artificial Limb Co., 731 Carnes Bldg., 904 East 12th St., Kansas City, Mo., for a free book which they have published showing some of the wonderful things wearers do with the Carnes Arm.

TEXAN AGAIN IN JAIL FOR KILLING MAN 22 YEARS AGO

Dave Atkins Indicted Second Time on Charge of Murder in Connection With Death of Tom Hardin.

ACCUSED HAS BEEN SOLDIER OF FORTUNE

A Fugitive From Justice, He Fought in Africa, Worked in Central America and Trapped in Northwest.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SAN ANGELO, Tex.—Dave Atkins, 45 years old, a soldier of fortune and for about 22 years a fugitive from justice, is at last behind the bars here and for the second time has been indicted on a charge of murdering Tom Hardin, a merchant at Knickerbocker, in Tom Green County, in March, 1897.

Atkins' virtual surrender to Carroll Bates of San Angelo, an ex-Captain of the Texas Rangers, furnished one of the most dramatic turns ever taken in a murder case in Texas. While working in the harvest fields near Hawley in Jones County, he was approached by the officer and meekly surrendered. Confident that he can prove on trial that he was justified in shooting Tom Hardin, the adventurer desires to start life anew and "with a clean slate."

Atkins' career since the fatal day in 1897 reads like fiction. The scenes shift from the dark continent of Africa to the plantations and sawmills of Central America, then to the far Northwest, where "the most hunted man in America," as the officers call him, trapped for a living before going into Colorado and New Mexico to battle with outlaws who sought his destruction.

Captured in Montana.

Atkins was a youth of 23 with a young wife when Tom Hardin fell before a Winchester bullet in 1897. Atkins fled to Montana and in 1900 was captured there and brought back to Texas by Gerome W. Shield, then sheriff, who today is one of this section's wealthiest cowmen. Two men signed the prisoner's bond and he was released. Not long afterward, Tom Ketchum, known in the old days as "Black Jack" Ketchum, was caught and convicted of many robberies and other deeds of lawlessness by him and his band. On the hangman's stand, Ketchum implicated Atkins.

Fearful of the result, despite the fact that he had an eye witness to the killing of Hardin, upon whose testimony Atkins' attorney was confident of acquittal, the man on bond skipped to South Africa, leaving his wife behind. There he joined the Kiffirian Rifles and says he fought under Col. Price throughout the Boer war. Returning to the States in 1902, Atkins found his wife divorced and it was not long until he responded to the lure of Central America. The fugitive spent almost five years there and came back in 1907, wearing no disguise

So much at ease was he that at Wellington, Tex., he married a second time, becoming the husband of a Mrs. Amelia Oldham, a widow. Of this union a daughter was born, but Atkins today knows nothing of their whereabouts. When it again became necessary for him to leave his native land he sought refuge again in Central America, and worked on plantations and in lumber camps.

Back in Texas in 1916.

In 1916 Atkins was back in Texas, and for a while he lived in Jones County, the scene of his arrest. Then he went to Utah and Colorado and trapped for a livelihood. At Chama, N. M., on Aug. 19, 1916, Atkins was the principal figure in a five hours' revolver battle with brigands, some of whom had been paid to kill him. Atkins had interfered in the affairs of a wealthy Mexican, who held land by means of a bogus title, and he nearly paid the penalty with his life. More than twenty men were slain, one of whom was Bill Chaney, arch-enemy of Atkins and reputed to be one of "Black Jack" Ketchum's outlaw band.

Enmity had grown between the two men, according to Atkins, when years before Chaney had tried to induce Atkins to hold up the Sonora-San Angelo stage. Chaney and his bandit companions made their headquarters on Spring Creek, about twenty miles from this city, and terrorized the region. Their retreat was impregnable and few officers dared to follow them into their lair. Today a mountain near Knickerbocker bears Ketchum's name. From it, the outlaws' sentinels watched for the approach of posses.

Atkins' refusal to rob the stage evoked a threat from Chaney that he would "get even." One of the best organized hunts that was ever made for Atkins was due later to Chaney. The two men meet one day on horseback near Christoval and Chaney opened fire. His aim was wild and his mount was shot from under him by Atkins. The rider claimed his horse stumbled and fell, but the bullet hole in the dead animal told a different tale.

After Atkins' fight at Chama in 1916, he returned to his northwestern haunts and in May this year came down through Redville and Denver, Colo., to Hawley, Tex. On Aug. 11 Atkins dared to come to San Angelo with no disguise, arriving on an early evening train and departing next morning. Several times during the 22 years of the fugitive's wanderings he visited his old home at Knickerbocker, unknown to the officers. Most of the time he walked and rode alternatively from Kerrville to Tom Green County, almost 200 miles away.

When Atkins was put in jail here Tuesday, the old indictment against him could not be found and upon the testimony of Sam Moore, one of the few living eye witnesses to the killing of Hardin, a new bill was returned. Because Atkins once skipped bond, Judge C. E. Dubois has refused bail. Habeas corpus proceedings to obtain the prisoner's release probably will be started within a few days.

Atkins' mother, Mrs. Tom Atkins, and a brother, Jim Atkins, live at Ranger in the oil fields. Another brother, Walter, resides at Rankin, in Upton County.

A GUARDIAN APPOINTED FOR SOLDIERS INSANE AT FULTON

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FULTON, Mo.—That the interests of the insane soldiers, now committed to the Fulton State Hospital, may not suffer by reason of their inability to look after their business affairs, W. R. Taylor of this city has been appointed guardian of the men by the officials of the institution.

He will particularly look after their business with the Federal Government, which in the main covers their allotment under the insurance clause. The men for whom Mr. Taylor will act as guardian all have money coming to them from the Government, but being insane, cannot receipt for it when it is paid to them. Practically all of the men who have been brought here carry the $10,000 quota of insurance and under it are entitled to $57.50 a month. The men are being kept at the institution at the expense of the Government, but it is probable that the money paid for their care will be deducted from their income from insurance.

About sixty insane soldiers have been received here so far and the majority of them are hopelessly insane. A few have recovered sufficiently to be sent to their homes on parole. It is expected that insane soldiers will be sent here from the demobilizing camps for some time yet.

BANK CASHIER WHO DROVE OFF ROBBERS RESIGNS; HE'S AFRAID

E. L. Zoernigh, cashier of the bank at East Alton, Ill., who last week drove robbers from the bank, has resigned. When the robbers entered the bank he dropped behind a counter and reappeared to the robbers' view pointing a revolver.

He now says that he dropped behind the counter because he was frightened, that his hand fell upon the revolver by accident and that his act of waving it in the general direction of the robbers was involuntary. He says that he resigned because of fear that another robbery might be attempted.

"MYSTERY SHIPS" HUNTED FOR SUBMARINES WHEN THEY THREATENED COAST

Innocent Looking Hooker, Armed to Sink a U-Boat, One of Numerous Agencies Employed to Protect Coast Cities in the Summer of 1918.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—That the Navy Department employed mystery ships in the hunt for submarines off our coast in the summer of 1918, when U-boat depredations were raising havoc with our schooners and small steamships, is revealed in the current issue of The Convoy, magazine of the Atlantic Cruiser and Transport Force.

Though impatient persons were clamoring because the sinkings continued over a period of weeks, and were demanding investigation into what they termed the failure of the navy to cope with the situation, the navy was alertly on the job.

"It was on May 25, 1918, that the U-151 came up out of the deep and sank the American schooner Hattie Dunn only ten miles off the Winter Quarter Light Vessel.

"It so happened that there was one 'defenseless schooner' that never came in contact or in sight of the U-boats. This ship was the mystery ship George Whittimore, a four-master schooner, as innocent-looking as could be, but in reality as dangerous to the foe as any of England's mystery ships. She had been fitted out by the Navy Department and sent out to cope with the undersea menace, and had she ran afoul of the U-boat she (the U-boat) would have been greeted by a rain of shell-fire from the heavy guns concealed under the wooden bulwarks of the apparently innocent merchant ship.

Fitted Out at New London.

"The George Whittimore was fitted out at the New London (Conn.) naval base. She was 250 feet long, carried a naval crew of over forty men, and was heavily armed. She worked in co-operation with the American submarines that were searching the seas below the surface for the enemy boats. She cruised up and down the Jersey coast for over a month and never had the luck to run afoul of her foe. The Whittimore, the seaplanes and the submarine patrol boats and submarine chasers were all on their mettle and ready to do battle if they were but given a chance.

"When a submarine was reported to the department or to any of the commanders of naval bases the Whittimore would sail to the spot. She would labor tiringly for a breeze, apparently trying to make headway but she was satisfied to tack back and forth if she could only be attacked by the sub. But it happened that the sub never came out of its hiding place.

Might Have Bombarded New York.

"The Navy Department was aware that it would be a simple matter for the commanders of the submarines to assemble one of their seaplanes (which it was known they carried) and send it aloft and over the city of New York or any large city along the coast and drop high-explosive bombs into the heart of the cities. This possibility was coped with by placing large rapid-fire anti-aircraft guns on the Palisades on the Hudson to protect New York and Bay points, and similar precautions were taken in other cities. It was the navy and our ships that guarded the gates to New York City, as well as every city, town and hamlet on the Atlantic. While the people slept the seaplanes, the sub patrols and the 'mystery' ship kept an ever-watchful eye on Mr. Submarine. It was the seaplanes that were ready to combat the enemy in the sky and the surface craft were ready and more than willing to engage the U boats below. It is true that we lost several small fishing smacks, some sailing schooners and two ships—the Trexel and the Herbert L. Pratt, but we stopped the boasted threat that the German U boats were going to blockade our coast from Maine to Florida.

Sub Chasers in Gravesend Bay.

"The Third Naval Base, defending New York and surrounding territory, was located at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The rendezvous, however, was at Gravesend Bay. Here the Department operated 24 submarine chasers. These little vipers of the sea were charged with the care of the safety to a great extent of the convoys going out and coming into New York. They listened for submarines and patrolled the coast. The sub chasers are only about 110 feet over all, yet they braved the dangers of the sea as well as the submarines of the enemy. They were all equipped with the latest devices to trap submarines—listening devices, wireless telegraphy and wireless telephones—and it is now given out by the Navy Department that they were the most dreaded menace to the lurking submarines. The complement of the sub chasers was only two officers and about a quarter of a hundred enlisted men. They went to sea for days at a time, and only came to their respective bases for supplies and fuel.

"The Navy Department has given out that it was the invention of an American in form of a listening device that defeated the boast of the Germans to block the coast of the United States. By this device the subchasers were enabled to detect the sound of the submarines and follow it; the sound of the submarine's engines and the turning over of its propellors could be heard for miles. By the means of this underwater detector the subchasers could follow the sound of the enemy submarines's high-powered turbines and end for ever the career of the undersea craft by letting go a depth bomb.

"The American submarine lent valuable service in this respect. They cruised on the surface and under the water to sight, and then fire a deadly torpedo into the enemy. The seaplanes, which maneuvered overhead, would sight the submarine. They could plainly distinguish the difference between our own craft and those of the enemy, the fact is that they could 'spot' a submarine as far as 100 feet below the surface. By means of a wireless telephone the observer in the seaplane could talk with the skipper of the subchaser or the commander of the American submarine as the case might be. It was also frequent that signal flags were used to send messages whether or not the 'coast was clear.'

"The minelaying fleet must be given due credit in this story, for it was they who cleaned the coast of the fiery demons which sent our gallant ship, the San Diego, to the bottom off Fire Island. It was first thought that a submarine got the San Diego, but it had been given out officially that it was a mine that sunk her. The mine-laying fleet cleared the coast of hundreds of mines, gathering them from the extreme southern part of the United States to the Newfoundland Banks."

CEMETERY LONG FORGOTTEN UNEARTHED BY RAILROADERS

Officials Say Bodies of Persons Buried Fifty Years Ago to Be Reinterred.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Sept. 9.—A cemetery that has been in disuse for more than 50 years and the exact location of which had become obliterated by the passing of time and the elements, evidently has just been uncovered by the crew of the Missouri Pacific Railroad that is raising the tracks of the road in the Stock Yard Hill district south of this city.

The report that there was a cemetery near the point where the railroad men are working, caused officials to make an investigation this week before putting the steam shovel on this ground. A small space was dug up and a casket unearthed, containing bones, the handles and metal parts of the casket, a ring and a hairpin, indicating that the deceased was a woman. Parts of bones were found in other parts of the plot of ground.

Poplar Bluff people know very little about the cemetery except that about 20 bodies were buried there. Missouri Pacific Railroad officials say that every effort will be made to insure that there will be no molestation of the sanctity of the grave. Wherever a grave is discovered the body will be exhumed, removed to the city cemetery and given proper burial.

IRON AND STEEL ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS TO MEET HERE

Thirtieth Annual Convention Will Be Held in St. Louis, Sept. 22 to 26.

The thirteenth annual convention of the Association of Iron and Steel Electrical Engineers will be held in St. Louis from Sept. 22 to 26, inclusive. This association has organized sections in all the large iron and steel centers of the country except St. Louis, and one purpose of holding the convention here is to pave the way for the formation of a live section.

The association is composed of electrical engineers who have given considerable time and study to the manufacture of steel and to the equipment of rolling mills from the standpoint of safety in addition to efficiency. It has brought about an electrification of the iron and steel industry which has revolutionized the methods of producing iron and steel. Besides this, it has helped very much to promote industrial safety and welfare.

Among the speakers at the convention will be H. D. James, control engineer of the Westinghouse Electrical Manufacturing Co., who will deliver an address entitled "Recent Improvements in Industrial Control." and Paul Lincoln, advisory head of the electrical department of the University of Pennsylvania, and former president of the association, who will read a paper on "Overload Protection for Motors."

Aguinaldo's Daughter and Princess of Sulu at University of Illinois

Girls From Philippines Will Study Life in States So They May Take Back American Ideas to Their People.

COME FROM PALACES TO WESTERN SCHOOL

Princess Has Movie Favorites Just Like Other Girls—Former Rebel's Daughter Scorns Ragtime.

MISS TASHATA A. KIRAN...

MISS CARMEN R. AGUINALDO...

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Sept. 13.

MISS CARMEN AGUINALDO, daughter of the former Insurrecto chieftain, of the Philippines, and the Princess Tashata Kiram, daughter of the Sultan of Sulu and Mindanao have arrived at Champaign to enter the State University.

Times can change in 20 years, and if there be any doubt of the complete capitulation of our one time most formidable enemy in our new possessions, the sending of his daughter to complete her education in this country may be taken as final evidence of his thorough metamorphosis from foe to friend. Moreover, Miss Aguinaldo comes to specialize in education with the purpose of returning to impart our methods at the Normal School in Manila of which she is a graduate. The Princess' purpose is avowedly the same, to become a sort of missionary to her people from her high station.

What they will be able to take back with them is a matter yet to be determined, but already the young women as unofficial embassadresses are imparting to those who come in contact with them, much information about their country, and revealing, incidentally, how our own mental metamorphosis toward our island citizens may not be as complete as is theirs towards us.

Same Education as Ours.

How many of us know that the Filipino youth today enjoys the same system of education as ourselves; follows the same social customs and fashion in movie stars, in motor models, in sports, in social customs, in dress? That Filipino women go in for suffrage, enter business and the professions? That an heiress in the Philippines is likely to be even more "advanced" than heiresses generally in this country, and act, as her father's paymaster?

These facts with photographs of their families, their homes, their motor cars; of industries employing our most modern machinery, their country clubs, their fine roads, etc., are shown visitors who call upon them at the home of Prof. and Mrs. R. D. Glasgow where they are boarding.

Of late years certain students who have made the highest grades in the public schools of the Philippines have been selected and sent at the expense of the Government for higher educational advantages to this country. Illinois University offers special attractions to foreign students in a department under a special Dean and there has been here a large colony of Filipino boys. Miss Aguinaldo and the Princess are among this year's pensionados.

Come From Palaces.

Emillio Aguinaldo is known to have grown very rich under the new order at the head of large cocoa oil and other interests. He is said to live splendidly in a palace at Manila and upon his haciendas. The wealth, the barbaric splendor, the Orientalism perpetuated at the courts of the Sultans of Sulu have furnished the theme of many a story and at least one operatic extravaganza for our edification. Shorn now of civil authority save that of presidente in his provinces, which is about the same as mayor in this country, the present Sultan, Hadji Mohamed Jamalal Kiram, is, nevertheless, encouraged and even paid a salary by our Government, to rule over his former subjects and for the sake of their peace and happiness, to maintain their racial traditions of living, native industries and religion, which is Mohammedan.

We have heard of the hundreds of Moro servants he still affords, though slavery has been abolished; his Arabian horses, his treasury of pearls and other riches. The Sultan paid a visit to this country in 1910 and his daughter is looking forward to another visit from him, perhaps this winter. In view of their wealth and upbringing, their attested high grades in scholarship and their selection of an inland college affords the most illuminating insight into the characters of these young women.

Wants to Learn Real Life.

"My father wants me to learn the really representative life of America, which he thought might not be found in a large city," said Miss Aguinaldo to a Post-Dispatch correspondent. And the Princess added: "I want to learn those things from your people which will be of use to my people. I shall watch out for those things which will improve conditions among them." The Princess is 17 years old and the General's daughter 19. Both girls are small of stature and possess the brown skin, almond-shaped eyes and other characteristics of the Malay race. Their English is pure in the sense of being free from slang, and they speak in rich soft voices. They talk easily on any subject brought up and seem especially interested in social and economic questions. Their manner is that of quiet grace, demure and reverential, but not without a good deal of poise and dignity. Occasionally spirited glances flash from their black eyes. The affection both girls have for their fathers is manifest in frequent allusions to them. Photographs of her father exhibited by Miss Aguinaldo make the former General look not more than middle-aged despite his former exciting career.

"My father is interested only in his farm and his firm," declared Miss Aguinaldo. Whereupon she shows pictures of the huge dam now under construction upon his estate, the gas tractors he employs, the big oil tank on his land. A hunting picture showed a large crocodile recently captured, with the General seated upon it. Pictures of the Manila Country Club made one decide that after all, most country clubs are alike. Pictures of fine motor cars, of well-kept roads and of stately university buildings, but for their background of tropical foliage, could not be distinguished from similar objects and scenes in this country.

Princess Drops Title.

Both girls dress simply following our fashions as closely as their limited opportunities for observation thus far, permit them. They have worn no jewels to school, though the fame of the pearl fisheries of the Princess' possession, at least, are of world renown. The Princess, moreover, insists upon being simply "Miss Kiram" while she is among Americans.

Both girls express a preference for country life and the Princess dilates upon her fondness for horses in tales she tells of Subol, her favorite mount, an Arabian steed.

"I like the country so much better," said the Princess earnestly. "There you can be free. And if I want to go to the movies, I have only to motor to town."

There she struck a familiar chord. "Have you your favorite movie actors?" she was asked.

"Oh, yes," she replied. "Of the women I like Mary Pickford and Marguerite Clark. Then I like Douglas Fairbanks and Bill Hart. Movies are only 10 cents at home," she added. "Sometimes, of course, they go higher. 'The Birth of a Nation' was $1.50."

Scornful of Ragtime.

Philippinos are notably fond of music. A bit of evidence in point, perhaps, was the scorn Miss Aguinaldo expressed for ragtime.

"We have a great deal of it, but I like the serious music. When I have time I like to play the piano, but always the sad pieces. I don't like the gay ones."

She spoke of being always busy and when questioned further along this line, she said.

"Often I help my father, especially at the end of the month. Then I work just like your business women. I help father pay off the men at his haciendas.'"

Loves to Swim and Dive.

Swimming may be said to be the national sport of the Philippines and evidently the Princess is proficient in this accomplishment.

"I love to swim and dive," she said, her brown eyes flashing. "The water around Jolo is very clear, no matter how deep it is you can usually see the bottom. There are sharks in the water, of course, and we don't swim at night on that account. But in the day time we don't fear them because the water is so clear."

"I love the deer," she said, "They are so pretty, I hate to kill them, so mostly we hunt wild hogs." Very seldom does she hunt alone. Such expeditions are accompanied by a great retinue from her father's court. Both girls are none the less interested in our western sports and inquire about the prospects for tennis, golf, and indoor baseball to which they became accustomed at the public schools.

They like to talk of flowers. The Philippines are the land of the orchid. The Princess displayed pictures of the women's dormitory at the Normal School where near every window there hung suspended wonderful growing orchids. They are astounded when told what Americans pay for one lovely blossom.

Becoming More Americanized.

The native language of Miss Aguinaldo is Tagalog, though she also speaks Spanish. Arabic is the language of culture in the provinces where the Sultan holds sway. Her father's chief offices, the Princess explains, are abitrating between the Governor and the natives. Parts of Mindanao, which is the second largest island of the group, are still unexplored and under Eastern influence civilization in the Sultan's domain has not progressed as it has in those parts which formerly were under Spanish domination. One wondered if in the region from which the Aguinaldos and others of Spanish nomenclature come certain of the more worthy phases of Latin culture implanted by the Spaniards had not been allowed to survive. When asked about this, Miss Aguinaldo replied:

"It is true that among certain families the old social customs are retained, but we are becoming more Americanized all the time, especially in regard to the position of women. In some families the girls are strictly chaperoned until they are married and their husbands are selected by parental authority. But when we go to the public school and into business or the professions we are no longer strictly chaperoned and we have many women in public positions now. We have them in offices and stores and in the professions. We have five women attorneys in Manila.

375 Women's Clubs in Islands.

"There are more than 375 women's clubs in the islands. Their activities take the form of civic improvement, health conditions, the prevention of infant mortality. There were eight women in our party coming over who were going to New York schools of philanthropy. Women have not until recently been interested in politics, but not long ago a meeting was held and an equal suffrage association was formed in Manila."

The fine spirit which animated two girls so young to undertake the month's journey overseas for special study with the purpose of carrying further enlightenment to their people, is always a matter of comment with their visitors. Upon which occasions both girls modestly reply.

"We cannot presume to say what we shall be able to take back and we are not considered young in our country where girls mature earlier than with you. It is not unusual for us to go abroad to school. About 2000 passports were issued this summer to students coming to America. Perhaps that is why," they add in a tone of gentle reproof, "we know more of your civilization than you seem to know of ours."

WEALTHY PROVIDE FOR POOR ON ISLAND RULED BY WOMEN

When Eskimo Tires of Hunting and Fishing He Applies for Permission to End Life.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

JUNEAU, Alaska., Aug. 15.—Mere man has little voice in governing affairs on Eskimo inhabited Little Diomede, one of the Diomedes Islands that are cut in two by the international boundary line across the Bering Sea between Alaska and Siberia. Women and children do most of the ruling, according to reports reaching the Alaska Territorial Bureau of Publicity here. Before a man can make a purchase he must get his wife's consent. If a mother is living with a married son or daughter her consent must be obtained. Wealth is estimated in skins and the rich provide for the poor.

Official suicide is provided for. When one of the natives tires of hunting seals and fishing and trapping and desires to end his existence he makes formal application to the governing body for permission to take his life.

BERLIN WRITER SEES JAPAN AS GERMANY'S BEST FRIEND

Count Zu Reventlow Says League of Nations Would Mean Anglo-Saxon Dominion of World.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

BERLIN, Aug. 28.—Urging his countrymen to cultivate Japan's friendship in preference to America's, Count Zu Reventlow, in the Deutsches Tages Zeitung writes:

"Germany's eyes must also be directed toward the European east. Let us not forget that Japan was the power among our enemies which during the progress of the war did not show intense hatred and will for annihilation, where a stronger current, even if suppressed, in favor of Germany was noticeable; which treated our prisoners far better than any other power, and which, alone among all our enemies, showed herself a nation of high culture. This union of powers which is called the League of Nations, if it materializes, will be nothing else but an epitome of Anglo-Saxon world domination, which would completely control the markets."

BOY WINS FIRST PRIZE FOR EXHIBIT OF HOME-MADE JELLY

Rolla Dean, Bryan Hill School Pupil, Competes With Girls in Canning Contest.

Rolla Dean, a pupil at the Bryan Hill School, and a member of the Bryan Hill Canning Club, last week was awarded first prize for the best exhibit of home made jelly at the annual exhibit of the local boys' and girls' canning clubs.

The five cash prizes for the best displays of canned fruits and vegetables were won by girls. Louise Hanwauer, a junior at McKinley High, won the first prize in this contest, being closely pressed in the order named by Caroline Phipps, of Bryan-Mullanphy School Club; Doris Wetzel of McKinley; Ruth Carr of Bryan-Mullanphy and Helen Deering of Soldan High.

Gold recognition pins in the form of a four-leaved clover, the official canning club emblem, were yesterday given to the member of each club canning the greatest amount of produce in his or her respective organization.

GERMANY NEEDS LEAGUE AND LEAGUE NEEDS GERMANY, IS VIEW OF PROF. SCHUECKING

An Expert in International Law Says It Cannot Exist Permanently Without That Country, and He Points to One Bad Feature and Need of Change.

"No league of nations can succeed permanently without the co-operation of a nation of Germany's rank. The league of nations must have us and we must have a league of nations," is the opinion of Prof. W. Schuecking, Germany's foremost authority on international law. Writing in the Frankfort Gazette, Prof. Schuecking says:

"The covenant of the league of nations made public on the 14th of February, 1919, by President Wilson is testimony of a momentous period of transition in the relations of the world and, like the head of Janno, it looks in two directions. As a pessimist one might look upon it as an instrument intended to perpetuate the existing superiority of certain governments to the disadvantage of Germany, meant to oppress us permanently. An optimist will hope that the covenant will eventually be modified and amended in such a manner as to gradually guarantee the vital interests of every nation, and to assure a status of just peace. This double character of a covenant that, unfortunately, is not the product of the pure spirit of pacifism, has the deficiency of being more political than juristic in its nature. To some extent its provisions are more or less elastic and open to varied interpretations.

"As far as precision and definiteness of draft," he declares, "and consistency of form and arrangement is concerned, the Paris project is undoubtedly inferior to the draft proposed by the German Society of International Law. It is also decidedly inferior to the draft offered by a Swiss federal commission of experts, which has also considered this topic. The Paris covenant creates three governing organs—a body of delegates, an executive council and an international secretariat. The body of delegates, to which each government is allowed to send three representatives, follows the suggestion of the Hague Peace Conference in meeting only at intervals. Unhappily—for this is a very serious defect—the executive council is not a continuously functioning institution, but ordinarily will meet only once a year. This executive council will at the same time play the role of an international mediation office in case of disputes of a nonpolitical character, adding thus to the importance of the manner in which it is constructed. Although the evolution of international law has worked consistently along the lines of a nonpartisan authority to settle disputes between governments, the reform most urgently advocated in this procedure having been the elimination of political influence which, springing as it does from the governments themselves, makes such procedure appear in the light of partisan intervention, the Paris covenant commits this mediation to an executive council, made up entirely along old diplomatic lines, composed of the representatives of the great Powers and four other States elected by the body of delegates.

Germany's Point.

"Assuming that the present political alliances were likely to be permanent, Germany upon entering such a league of nations, would incur the peril of unjust and arbitrary treatment by this executive council. In order to investigate special cases commissions may be appointed, but if the executive council is to decide by a majority vote when the latter course is to be followed, this does not constitute any ground of fair treatment. It is rather quite remarkable that the question as to where the league will have its headquarters is left unsettled, although The Hague, with its peace palace, has an undisputed moral claim to this distinction.

"The admission of new members, such as Germany, is to depend upon a ballot in which at least two-thirds of the member Governments shall vote. The proposition that colonies and dominions having an autonomous government shall become members with equal rights, strengthens the predominance of the Anglo-Saxon element. A far more questionable proposition still is the one making admission to the league dependent upon the applicant giving special guarantees, and in particular pledging itself to a reduction of armament to a maximum determined by the league itself. It is needless to say that a new government entering the league would pledge itself to conform to the general principles of the league concerning the limitation of armament. The dangerous point is that one group of nations is given word in regard to the armament of the new member, without its having any voice whatsoever, while those governments that are already in the league do have a voice in regard to the program of general armament.

Geographical Lines Account.

"The fact that the geographical situation of each country is to be taken into account instead of fixing a general scale of disarmament to apply equally to every country, such as 25 per cent of the force maintained prior to the present war, as proposed in the German draft, forms another proposition which may be so employed by a hostile majority as to endanger Germany. If such a proposition were to be honestly enforced by an absolutely nonpartisan authority, then no country in the world would have a greater interest in this last provision than Germany itself. As long as Germany remains out of this league of nations, it is nothing else but an ambitious alliance of our opponents against us, for a military danger threatening any member is to be a matter for common action. All members of the league pledge themselves to submit their disputes either to arbitration or to mediation by the Executive Council. As far as arbitration is concerned, a permanent international court is to be organized. What that court decrees is naturally final, and if it is not complied with within three months the Executive Council will enforce it. In case of a political conflict, the Executive Council not succeeding in bringing the parties to an agreement, the council publishes its decision. If all the members of the league who are not parties to the controversy are unanimous, the judgment of the league becomes obligatory and the Executive Council in such a case is authorized to enforce the decision against the party opposing it. If the Executive Council is not unanimous, the majority is obligated and the minority is authorized to publish reports, stating their opinions of the merits of the case and their proposals for its settlement. In such a case, the reports having only moral sanction, it would appear as if the door were wide open for war between the contestants, qualified by the fact, however, that they must not start hostilities within three monhs.

What Follows.

"From what I have just said it follows that if we were members of the league, for instance, and should become involved in some new dispute with England, and the executive council passes unanimous judgment against us, we would have to obey, for otherwise we would be forced to do so under article 16 of the Paris covenant. In order to compel us to submit to its judgment the league could employ an absolute economic boycott against us, or if necessary military force. The executive council would determine what force each state should contribute for the latter purpose. The members of the league give members permission to convey their military forces through their respective territories, and obligate themselves to share the losses and expenses involved in the enforcement of an economic boycott. In respect to all these provisions one cannot say that they do not conform with existing principles of international law, they seem intended rather to develop those principles, also the methods they employ in some instances are open to criticism.

Monstrous Provision.

"Article 17 of the Paris covenant," he declared, "is, however, a monstrous provision. It outlines what is to happen if a member of the league of nations becomes involved in war with an outside Government, or if two outside Governments become involved in war with each other. Disregarding the elements of justice in the dispute the league of nations assumes authority over the outside Governments and would compel them to submit to the obligations of members of the league and to bring their case before its tribunals at the peril of having the league intervene directly. This means practically that the league of nations would force its sovereignty upon outside Governments, whether they desire it or not.

"In regard to international legislation for the welfare of the working classes," he says, "the covenant contents itself with a few meaningless phrases, and makes provisions for an International Labor Bureau. A provision far more practical places all the international bureaus under the supervision of the league of nations. Another one provides that international treaties shall not go into effect until they have been registered at the international office and have been made public. Special agreements that violate the fundamental principles of the league are annulled. To mention all these things that are unfortunately omitted in this project would lead too far. I merely mention that the internationalization of the seas, advocated by Wilson, is left out. But in spite of all these deficiencies it would be bad and short-sighted policy to condemn the principle of the league of nations merely on account of this imperfect and uncertain statute. This principle has at last begun to take real root in Germany. The tragic experiences of the war will force the world into a league. No league of nations can succeed permanently without the co-operation of a nation of Germany's rank. The league of nations must have us and we must have the league of nations."

CONVENTION TO TAKE UP BUSINESS CRISIS

Zone Meeting of Mississippi Valley Association Will Be Held Here Thursday.

The "present business crisis" will be discussed at a zone convention of the Mississippi Valley Association at Hotel Statler Thursday, which will be attended by Mayors, farmers, manufacturers and bankers in the St. Louis zone, which comprises the southern half of Illinois and Indiana, the western half of Kentucky and nearly all of Missouri. There are seven other zones in the Association in each of which a convention soon will be held. The convetion will be preceded on Wednesday by a meeting of the board of directors of the Association.

Chief among the speakers will be President Harry H. Merrick of Chicago, president of the Association and president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, and John M. Parker of New Orleans, first president of the Association.

It is expected that approximately 500 out-of-town delegates will attend. W. P. Young of Blossom, Tex., representing the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union of America, will discuss matters relating to the organized farmers' movement.

Mayor Charles Jewett of Indianapolis will be the official spokesman for the Mayors of the various cities in this zone. Mayor J. T. Cross of Moberly, Mo., A. Baumgartner of Sedalia, and S. D. Rouls, Tipton, Ind., also will be present. Charles F. Coffin, president of the Chamber of Commerce of Indianapolis, will represent the various commercial bodies of this zone. O. R. Welborn, vice president of the Fletcher American Bank of Indianapolis, will represent the banking interests of that city.

SHIMMY MUST GO, WELFARE BOARD OF OMAHA VOWS

"Edict" Forbidding Shivery and Long Gliding Movements Is Issued—Rules for Proper Dancing Made.

SAXOPHONE AND TROMBONE BARRED

Their Sounds Not Conducive to Decorous Steps, Even in Old-Fashioned Polka, It Is Urged.

OMAHA, Neb.—Omaha is going to abolish the shimmy dance. Omaha is tired of that style of dancing. That is, that portion of Omaha that doesn't dance—the "ain't-it-awful" portion that blushes and peers through its fingers at what is going on out on the dancing floor. That's the portion of Omaha that has decreed that the "shimmy" must go.

But among that portion happens to be a majority of the members of the Board of Public Welfare and Superintendent T. H. Weirich of that institution has just issued an "edict" forbidding the shimmy and similar dances and decreeing that if Omaha wants to dance this winter Omaha shall dance like they did in the "good old days" before the saxophone and the slide trombone threw themselves onto the music world and evolved jazz stuff in sound as well as in action.

"The gentleman's hand must be placed lightly, not over half way around the lady, and above the "waistline," orders Superintendent Weirich, in a set of "rules for dancing" which the board has promulgated.

Some Exceptional Cases.

The superintendent realizes that there may be exceptional cases, such as the situation of a fat man and a small woman, or a small man and a "woman of size," when his rule simply cannot be made to apply. But in extreme cases of this kind the conscience of the dancer may be permitted to dictate the proper position which shall be assumed—provided the saxophone and the slide trombone are not permitted to intrude their tones.

"Let your conscience be your guide and hold a deaf ear to the saxophone and the slide trombone and all will be well," urges the superintendent.

Supt. Weirich holds those two instruments, the saxophone and the slide trombone, together with the clarinet, as partners in crime and the real cause of the shimmy and similar dances.

"Suppose you were dancing quietly over the floor and all of a sudden the trombone should let out a sliding blare, the saxophone should join in with a shiver and the clarinet should shriek, what do you expect would happen?" asked Weirich. "You just naturally would shimmy for an instant out of sheer terror."

Just Got to Stop.

But that has just got to stop, the superintendent avers. He is not going so far as to ask the Sheriff or the police morals squad to seize all the saxophones and slide trombones and clarinets in town, but he announces he intends suppressing the shimmy and all such terpsichorean antics, even if he has to prohibit dancing of every kind.

The prohibition covers private dances as well as public dances. The shimmy is not to be permitted in the clubs and hotels and private ballrooms any more than it is in the 5-cents-per-dance houses. The society debutante is to b "protected" and if the debutante's mamma won't do the protecting and save her from the horrors o fthe shimmy, the Omaha Board of Public Welfare will act the part of a dutiful and discreet parent.

Other dances that are to go include the shoulder shake, the strangle hold and things of that kind that are danced to jazz music. The superintendent admits that jazz music lends itself readily to the execution of various forms of dancing more or less of the shimmy type, which do not meet with the approval of the board.

No Touching of Heads.

The touching of heads is "positively prohibited" under the new dance rules. Dancers who get their heads together will be visited by "severe criticism." If the lady gets tired, she can sit down for a while, but she must not rest her weary head against the cheek of her partner. That simply will not be tolerated.

"The lady is merely to rest her right hand in her partner's hand and her left hand to rest lightly on her partner's shoulder," reads another rule governing the conduct of the lady.

Under this rule it will not be fair for a woman dancer to clutch her partner by the throat, nor to wrap herself around his neck.

The Welfare Board will encourage the waltz and the polka and such dances as the members used to like when they were young, but it is to be "good night" for the extreme trots and other eccentricities.

Scratched Wrong Man.

LONDON.—For assaulting Alderman H. F. Whyman, former Mayor of Chatham, Emma Louisa Shackleton, married, was fined $10. She and others were singing in a tramway car at night and a passenger complained. Mistaking Whyman for the complaining passenger, she said she "set her ten commandments in his face," and scratched him.

PATROL WAGON NOT EQUAL TO TASK WHEN HORSE IS NABBED

Police, Answering Call of Negroes That Building Is Full of Burglars, Find Equine.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo.—When the police responded to a hurry call from the office of a local commission firm they found a couple of badly frightened negroes and a prisoner entirely too large for the patrol wagon.

Much has been said and written about the trick horse in the side show that can add, multiply, spell and perform kindred stunts, but it remained for a horse of the above mentioned to break into a store and steal.

This particular horse is used during the day in a delivery team. The stables are located near the office in the main building and when the door to the office was left open it left an avenue for the entrance of the horse, which became restless during the night and began to wander about. He ate a bouquet of flowers that stood on the pretty stenographer's desk in the office and began to explore the interior of the building.

The two negroes went to work early and when they arrived at the building they heard a noise that indicated a dozen burglars were at work inside. Patrolman Dan Rainey slowly and watchfully, with his revolver drawn, ready to fire at the "thief" any minute, started to enter the building. The horse heard him coming and tried to back out of the door, which solved the mystery and relieved the mental strain of the negroes.

CEREMONY FOR LINCOLN STATUE

Unveiling of Barnard's Monument Set for Sept. 15.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

MANCHESTER, Eng., Sept. 2.—George Grey Barnard's statue of Abraham Lincoln has been placed in the position it will occupy in Platts Fields, and details of the unveiling exercise on Sept. 15 are being prepared by a committee. Judge Alton B. Parker of New York will deliver the principal address. The statue was presented to Manchester by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Phelps Taft of Cincinnati. Lord Weardale and Lord Wareham and Ambassador Davis have been invited to be present.

The respective merits of the Barnard and Saint Gaudens statues of Lincoln, both of which originally were intended for erection at Westminster in London, have been the subject of a long controversy. The Saint Gaudens statue finally was awarded the coveted place while the Barnard statue was given to Manchester.

WOMEN APT PUPILS IN GAME OF MACHINE CUT POLITICS

Recent Conventions Over State Prove That They Will Fight for Their Rights.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo.—That it isn't going to take the women long to learn the various tricks in the game of politics already has become apparent from the reports that have reached politicians of the old school in this city from some of the large cities and even the rural districts.

While as a rule the meetings called to perfect organization among the women of the state were poorly attended and in some instances were overlooked altogether, this apparent lethargy was made up in other counties and townships with fights among the women that put the old-time mass convention of the men into a very tame class.

In one county effort on the part of a woman, whose husband has long been active in politics, to control the convention led to spirited opposition with the result that the woman was defeated in her efforts, something the men have not yet been able to accomplish in trying to uncrown her husband. Similar little skirmishes were reported from other sections where the women voters believed efforts were being made to put something across.

Kansas City also got in the limelight but men were prime factors in the fight there, using the women to carry their point. By changing the hour of the convention the "goat" faction of the city political ring put one over on the "rabbits" and now the women are up in arms.

Stop Tobacco

How One Woman Helped Her Boys to Overcome the Inroads of Tobacco Poisoning by Secretly Mixing Odorless and Tasteless Lucko in Their Tea, Coffee and Food.

Sends a Free Trial Package

Oh, Say! It's Great to Feel this Way! No More Tobacco for Me.

Lucko was the lucky discovery of a woman. It is odorless and tasteless and she mixed it secretly in tea, coffee and food. Like a magic wand it hits the spot. It immediately puts the craving in a trance. Instead of that irresistible desire for a smoke or chew Lucko satisfies. It soothes, calms, takes off the raw, nervous edge and you feel better, eat better, sleep better and work better. It is certainly a wonderful discovery and a free trial package will be mailed to every tobacco user who wants to quit or to anyone who wishes to help a friend, son, brother or husband by giving Lucko secretly. The hundreds who have used Lucko never go back to the dyspepsia, heartburn, palpitation, nervousness and all the other poison sufferings from tobacco. Don't fail to send for this free trial of Lucko. It is really a wonderful discovery. Address Lucko Drug Co., 34 Glen Bldg., Cincinnati, Ohio.

SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE TO GET GERMAN LINERS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Four former German passenger liners, which have just been turned over to the United States Shipping Board by the Naval Transport Service, are being surveyed with a view of adding them to the South American trade. These ships are the Aeolus, deadweight tonnage 12,350, speed 15½ knots; Baron de Kalb, deadweight tonnage 8200, speed 15 knots; Huron, deadweight tonnage 11,000; sped 14½ knots, and the Princess Matoika, deadweight tonnage 10,500, speed 15 knots.

Ports of call have not been determined definitely, but the runs will be made from New York and probably wil include Rio Janeiro, Santos, Montevideo, Buenos Aires and Pernambuco.

NO INCOME LEVY ON FEDERAL TAXES

Government Will Even Make Allowance for Two Cents Paid on an Ice Cream Soda.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Responding to inquiries, the Bureau of Internal Revenue announced today that virtually all Federal taxes, even the 2 cents paid for the privilege of an ice cream soda, may be deducted from gross incomes in computing income taxes. Only income and excess profits taxes may not be deducted.

Transportation taxes, paid on railroad, sleeping car, and steamer tickets; admission taxes, assessed on theater, ball game, circus and moving picture show tickets, luxury taxes, on toilet articles and the higher priced wearing apparel—all may be subtracted from the amount on which income tax is to be reckoned.

The entire sum may be lumped together without specifying the actual number of sundaes consumed or movies attended, but investigation will be made of any cases in which the taxes paid the Government seem out of proportion to the incomes indicated.

Right to Claim Deduction, but Payment Must Be Proved.

Frank M. Kleiber, Chief Deputy Collector of Internal Revenue, and Waller Edwards, chief of the income tax department, said yesterday that it had always been the right of an income taxpayer, since the war taxes became effective, to claim deduction of amusement and other luxury taxes paid by him individually. At the same time, they said, if such claim was made, it would be incumbent upon the claimant to show to the satisfaction of the income tax collector that he had actually paid such taxes.

If an affidavit accompanying the claim is to be accepted at its face value, they said, there would be little difficulty experienced in making the deduction, but if the claim should be subjected to investigation the investigation probably would cost more than the amount to be deducted.

INCREASE IN PARIS BIRTHS REPORTED DURING AUGUST

Decline Shown by Official Figures Causes Alarm—Magazine Devoted to Repopulation.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 20.—France's declining birth rate has lately been a source of much concern, but a distinct improvement has been noticed during the present month.

Evidence of a great decline in births in 1918 was shown in official figures for the district of the Seine, which includes the city of Paris, which showed that there were only 43,480 births registered in that district in 1918 as compared to 73,599 in 1911.

The infantile death rate given by statisticians is 40 per cent, as compared to 10 per cent before the war. This has been attributed to the scarcity of wet nurses and poor quality and shortage of milk for bottle-fed babies. This shortage is said to be due to the tremendous increase in cheese making, especially in Normandy.

However, all the maternity hospitals in Paris reported increased births thus far in the present month. A new periodical entitled Marriage has just appeared. It announces that it will devote itself to the question of the repopulation of France, which is generally recognized to be one of the most urgent problems of the day.

LAMBERT ON COMMITTEE TO PLAN FIRST AERIAL DERBY

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Plans for the first trans-continental aerial derby began to take shape today, when Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary, president of the Aerial League of America, announced the appointment of a Committee on Arrangements, including officers of aero clubs in all parts of the country. This committee will draft rules and set the dates for the contest and complete arrangements for the prizes, which are expected to exceed $100,000.

Among others, the committee includes Charles J. Glidden, chairman; Santos Dumont, Lieut. Godfrey L. Cabot, president of the Aero Club of New England; Maj. A. B. Lambert chairman of the Missouri Aeronautical Society of St. Louis; Maj. Loring Pickford of San Francisco and Rear Admiral Pond, president of the Pacific Aero Club, and Joseph A. Steinmetz, president of the Aero Club of Pennsylvania.

NEW AMERICAN LEGION POST

A new ost of the American Legion, to be called the Atwell T. Lincoln Post No. 62, in honor of the St. Louis captain who gave his life at St. Mihiel, will be formed at a meeting at 8 p. m. tomorrow at Central High School, Grand and Finney avenues.

The committee in charge of arrangements states that this is the first attempt to organize the men of the Eighty-ninth Division and urges all former members of that division to attend. M. J. Dallett, F. J. Dolan, J. J. Sweeney and A. L. Harlow, members of the committee, were in the Eighty-ninth Division.

Miss Bryars to Give Recital Here.

Miss Mildred Bryars, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bryars of 5024 Raymond avenue, mezzo-soprano of the Hanson Place Church choir, Brooklyn, N. Y., will give her first professional recital in her home city on the night of Sept. 28, at the Sheldon Memorial Auditorium. Her recital at Aeolian Hall, New York, in March, opened the way for a number of concert engagements. Her accompanist will be Mrs. Julie Stevens Bacon.

REMOVED HIS CORNS AT HOME

Vancouver Man Tries Simple Home Recipe for Corns With Wonderful Success.

Mr. D. Morris of Vancouver, B. C., suffered from painful corns for years, until he tried a simple home remedy. He states:

"I had tried various remedies since I came here, but none of them were ever so successful as Cactus Corn Compound."

Go to any drug store and get a small bottle of Cactus Corn Compound. Paint your corn with it, and shortly the corn drops off—no pain, no danger or loss of time. This bottle is sufficient to remove dozens of corns Any druggist will refund your money if you are not satisfied.—ADVERTISEMENT.

POLES ASK TWO MISSOURI SENATORS TO SUPPORT LEAGUE

Telegram Sent to Reed and Spencer Says if U. S. Stays Out She Will Become Military Power.

The Polish Citizens' Committee of this city this morning sent the following telegram to Senators Reed and Spencer:

"To stop all wars; to stabilize industry; to protect small nations; to force disarmament; as an antidote to England's and Japan's selfish aggressiveness.

"In behalf of over 25,000 residents of the city of St. Louis of Polish birth or extraction, we appeal to your udgment and sound Americanism to help make democracy safe throughout the world by backing up the President and voting for the league of nations.

"If America stays out of the league of nations, she must become a military power."

The organization takes an active interest in all public questions especially those concerning the Poles.

This Is Rheims' Memorial Day.

RHEIMS, Friday, Sept. 12.—In memory of those who lost their lives at Rheims in the war and in commemoration also of the beginning by the Germans of systematic bombardment of the cathedral, Sept. 14 hereafter will be observed each year in Rheims as a Memorial day. Wreaths will be placed Sunday at the monuments erected in the cemeteries outside the town to the memory of the inhabitants who fell in the war.

USE OF CITY PARKS IN 1919 SHOWS INCREASE

More People Attended Playgrounds, Tennis Court, Golf Links, Etc., Than Ever Before.

An idea of the intensive use of park recreational facilities is to be had from the report of Director of Playgrounds Abeken.

The municipal playgrounds of the city registered an attendance of 633,394 during the season which ended Labor day. The attendance at the swimming pools was 443,126 and the public bathhouses were visited 114,018 times.

The Park Department issued 5715 golf permits, as compared with 5426 issued in 1918, and 22,952 tennis permits as against 20,977 in 1918. The attendance at the tennis courts this year totaled 22,952, as compared with 20,977 last year.

There are 120 teams in the Municipal Baseball League and each has played 18 games this season. The average attendance at each game was 400, making a total attendance of 432,000. The attendance at the semi-finals to be played Saturday and Sunday, and at the finals to be played a week from Sunday, is expected to bring the total attendance to 445,000.

For the first time all of the 1131 lockers at Lindell Pavilion were rented this season. They rent for from $1.50 for individual lockers to $12 for dressingroom lockers which accomodate four persons. The revenue from the lockers amounted to $3251.50.

The Park Department is getting ready for the winter activities, which begin Oct. 1. There will be opened on that date 17 community centers, one in each public school and others at such places as Mullanphy Swimming Pool and Marquette Swimming Pool. Indoor baseball, basket ball, folk dances and other games will be played, domestic science will be taught and in the foreign quarters Americanization will be inculcated into the minds of those not familiar with the language and customs of the United States.

ONLY 5000 OF 35,000 SERBIAN CHILDREN SURVIVED RETREAT

Red Cross Reports on Deaths of Boys Who Went Into Army When it Evocuated.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Of the 5,000 Serbian children sent with the Serbian army in the 1917 retreat only 5000 survived, according to figures verified by American Red Cross workers and forwarded to National Headquarters here. Most of these returned to their homes to find themselves orphans and the Red Cross is seeking to aid them by the establishment of orphanages and other institutions.

When the Serbs realized they must avacuate their country to the Teutons and retreat to the coast boys between the ages of 14 and 18 were called to the colors. Patriotic mothers sent even younger sons to learn the stern business of war, the report said, and into the hardships encountered in the mountains death took a heavy toll.

NEGRO POTATO KING SECURES TRACT FOR MEN OF HIS RACE

H. P. Ewing Gets Opportunity to Work Out "Back to Farm for Negroes" Slogan.

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—H. P. Ewing, known locally as the "potato king," and originator of the "back to the farm for negroes" movement, has a new plan for the betterment of the members of his race. Phil R. Toll, chairman of the executive committee of the Fort Smith Lumber Co., has turned over 35,000 acres of Northern Arkansas land to Ewing for development.

Ewing is now getting together responsible men of his race and returned negro soldiers and expects to people the land with them, and then buy it as they develop it.

The land will be sold in tracts of 40 to 160 acres at prices from $10 to $15 an acre. Buyers will have five years in which to pay. A free agricultural school will be established in the community.

Ewing recently appeared on the local streets attired in a long white canvas coat on which he had his "back to the farm" slogan lettered in big black letters. The slogan expresses a conviction which has grown out of Ewing's own success on a 1000-acre farm at Loring, Kan. He has spent most of the profits in telling negroes opportunity for their race lies in tilling the soil.

RALLY FOR HOLY NAME SOCIETY

41 St. Louis Branches Will Unite Sunday, Sept. 28.

The 41 St. Louis branches of the Holy Name Society will hold a rally Sunday afternoon, Sept. 28, on the grounds of St. Alphonsus (Rock) Church, Grand and Finney avenues. Speakers will include Archbishop Glennon, the Rev. Father N. Franzen, pastor of St. Alphonsus Church; the Rev. Father S. J. Brady, spiritual adviser of the Diocesan Union of the Holy Name Society, and Joseph Kane, a layman.

Seek Contributions for Milk Stations

Mrs. Ben. Jacobs, 5715 De Giverville avenue, chairman of the milk distribution committee of the St. Louis Council of Jewish Women, is seeking contributions so that the work of the milk stations may be continued during the winter and next summer. The two milk stations supported by the council sold milk to school children this summer at 1 cent a glass and crackers at 1 cent for three.

ATLANTIC FLEET LACKS CREWS TO HANDLE SHIPS

Demobilization Leaves Latest Type Ships Without Enough to Keep Up Steam.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Demobilization of the navy has demoralized the Atlantic fleet so far as man power is concerned, it was said today at the Navy Department.

Scores of batleships, cruisers, destroyers and other vessels are moored at navy yards with crews so greatly reduced that in many cases it is dificult and in some cases impossible to keep up steam. Only two battleships of the Atlantic fleet have anywhere near full crews.

Scores of destroyers of the latest type are in navy yards, it was said, with barely enough men aboard to keep them reasonably clean. In some cases they lie alongside larger ships to obtain heat and power. One captain of a destroyer, when ordered to place his vessel to go to sea, reported his crew consisted of five men. An intensive recruiting drive has been launched to remedy the situation.

Christmas Tree at Church.

A decorated Christmas tree was used last week by the Women's Missionary Society at the West Presbyterian Church, Maple and Maryville avenues in the collection of money, clothing and other articles for a Christmas donation to the Koreans. To reach Korea in time for the holiday season, the presents had to be started on their way at once. So the women erected the tree, decorated it, and the members brought their offerings and pinned them on the tree.

Alleged Profiteers Plead Not Guilty.

DAYTON, O., Sept. 13.—Twenty-one lumber dealers and six ice cream manufacturers named in 37 indictments issued by a special grand jury probing Dayton high cost of living conditions, pleaded not guilty in Common Pleas Court today, and gave bonds of $2000 each. The Dayton Lumber Exchange was closed today following the issuing of a temporary restraining order. Trials of profiteering cases are to start Oct. 15.

Gray Hair Tells Tales. Tint It!

TRIAL PACKAGE SENT FREE

Gray hair is a tattle-tale. Don't endure it until you are really old. If at 40 you still feel young, then take the trouble to look young. For to look and feel young is to be young. It is just as easy to keep your hair young and beautiful as to retain your youthful interest in life and people. Tint the gray, faded, streaked strands with "Brownatone," as thousands of women have done.

"Brownatone Is My Best Friend."

This wonderful preparation does not rub or wash off. If you want a delightful surprise, just brush or comb a little "Brownatone" through your gray, streaked or bleached hair and see it change like magic to golden, soft or deep rich brown, or black—any shade desired—the exact color to set off your complexion.

Absolutely Harmless.

"Brownatone" is odorless, greaseless, and positively non-injurious. Guaranteed to contain no lead, sulphur, silver, mercury, zinc, analine or coal tar products. Used for switches as well as growing hair. Two colors: "Light to Medium Brown" and "Dark Brown to Black." Two sizes, 35c and $1.15, at all leading druggists.

SHADOW OF WAR NOT YET LIFTED, PRESIDENT SAYS

Reminds Hearers at Tacoma That War Was Fought by U. S. for Universal Dominion of Right.

By the Associated Press.

TACOMA, Wash., Sept. 13.—The text of President Wilson's address here todaywas, in part, as folows:

"I feel, as I am sure you feel, that we have reached one of the most critical periods in the history of the United States The shadow of the war is not lifted from us, and we have just come out of the depths of the valley of death. I thought it might be useful if I reminded you of a few things, lest we forget. It is so easy with the strong tides of our life to be swept away from one situation into another; to forget the real depths of meaning which lie underneath the things that we are merely touching the surface of.

"Therefore.I thought it would not be impertinent on my part if I asked permission to read to you the concluding passage of the address in which I requested the Government of the United States to accept Germany's challenge of war.

"We shall fight," I said, "for the things we have always carried nearest our hearts, for democracy, for the rights of those who submit to authority to have a voice in their own Government, for the rights and liberties of small nations, for a universal dominion of right, of such a concert of free peoples as will bring peace and safety to all nations and make the world itself at last free.

Dedicated Our Lives.

"To such a purpose we can dedicate our lives and our fortunes, everything that we are, everything that we have, with the pride of those who know that the time has come when America is privileged to spend her blood and her might for the principles that gave her birth, of happiness and of peace which she has enjoyed. God helping her. She can do no other."

"This is the program we started out on. That is the program which all America adopted, and shall we now falter at the very critical moment when we are finally to write our name to the standing pledge which we then took?"

"I want to remind you many other nations were put under a deeper temptation than we. It would have been possible for little helpless Belgium at any time to make terms with the enemy. Belgium knew that resistance was useless. Belgium knew that she could get any terms of advantage from Germany that she pleased if she would only submit. And at the cost of everything that she had Belgium did nothing else than underwrite civilization. I do not know anywhere in history of a more inspiring fact than that.

Belgium Kept Pledge.

"Belgium lies prostrate because she fulfilled her pledge to civilization. Italy could have had her terms at the hands of Austria at almost any periods of the war, particularly just before she made her final stand at the Piave River, but she would not compound with the enemy. She, too, had underwritten civilization. And, this passage which I have read to you, which the whole country accepted as its pledge, is but an underwriting of civilization.

"But, in order to let you remember what the thing cost, just let me read you a few figures. If I did not have them on official authority I would deem them incredible. Here is what the war cost those who were engaged against Germany:

"Great Britain and her dominions, $38,000,000,000; France, $26,000,000,000; the United States, $22,00,0--000,000; Russia, $18,000,000,000; Italy, $13,000,000,000, and the total, including Belgium, Japan, and other smaller countries, $133,000,000,000.

"It cost the Central Powers, Germany, $38,000,000,000; Austria-Hungary, $21,000,000,000; Turkey and Bulgaria, $3,000,000,000; a total of $63,000,000,000, an incredible sum to save civilization.

"Now the question is, are we going to keep safe? The expenditures of the United States were at the rate of $1,000,000 an hour for two years, including the night time. Battle deaths—and this is the cost that touches the hearts—were, Russia, 1,700,000; Germany, 1,600,000; France, 1,385,000; Great Brtain, 900,000; Austria, 800,000; Italy, 364,000; the United States, 50,300, a total of all belligerents of 7,450,200 men dead on the field of battle.

"The total wounded for the United States army was 230,000, excluding those, of course, who were killed.

"The total of all battle deaths in all of the wars of the world from the year 1793 to 1914 were something under 6,000,000. So that, in all the wars of the world for more than 100 years fewer men died than have been killed upon the field of battle in the last five years. These are terrible facts and we ought never to forget them.

Fundamental for World.

"We went into this war to do a thing that was fundamental for the world, and what I have come out upon this journey for is to, ascertain whether the country has forgotten it or not. I have found out already. The country has not forgotten it, and will never permit any man who stands in the way of the fulfillment of these great pledges ever to forget the sorrowful day when he made the attempt.

"The league is not a union of free peoples to guarantee civilization; it is something much more than that, it is a league of nations to advance civilization by substituting something that will make the improvement of civilization possible.

"I call you to witness that our civilization is not satisfactory; it is an industrial civilization, and at the heart of it it an antagonism between those who labor with their hands and those who direct labor. You cannot compose those differences in the midst of war, and you cannot advance civilization unless you have a peace of which you make the fullest use of bringing these elements of civilization together into a common partnership in which every man will have the same interest in the work of his community that those have who direct the work of the community.

Against Rule by Minority.

"This was a war against autocracy, and if you have diordered, if you have disrupted populations, if you have insurgent elements in your populations, you are going to have autocracy, because the stronger is going to seize the power as it has seized it in Russia. I want to declare that I am the enemy of the rulership of any minority, however constituted. I believe for my part that the league of nations covenant is 98 per cent insurance against war. I take it you want some insurance against war rather than none, and if it is not 98 per cent, I dare say you would rather like 10 per cent.

"There is a provision for the constant, regular international discussion for labor problems, no matter where they arise in the world, for the purpose of safeguarding the health of women and of children, for the sake of bringing about these international committees with regard to labor, upon which the happiness of mankind so much depends.

"What I want everybody to understand is this: The first effective impulse toward this sort of thing came from America. And I want to call your attention to the fact that it came from some of the men who are now opposing its consummation.

"It is particularly important to remember, at this moment when some men have dared to introduce party passion into this question, that some of the leading spirits, perhaps I might say the leading spirit, in the conception of this great idea, were the leading figures of the Republican party.

"When I advocated the things in this league of nations, I had the full and proud consciousness I was only expressing the best thought and the best conscience of my beloved fellow countrymen.

"The only things that I have any special connection with in the league of nations covenant are things that I was careful to have put in there because of the very considerations which are now being urged.

Wickersham's Conversion.

"One of the most distinguished lawyers of the United tSates, Mr. Wickersham of New York, who was the Attorney-General in Mr. Taft's cabinet, came over to Europe, I am told, to oppose the things that he understood the American peace mission was trying to accomplish—and what happened to Mr. Wickersham? He was absolutely converted, above all things else, to the necessity of having a league of nations not only, but this league of nations. I need not tell you the conspicuously fine work which his chief, Mr. Taft, has been doing in the same cause. I am very proud to forget party lines, because there is one thing that is so much greater than being a Republican or a Democrat that these things ought never to be mentioned or connected with and that is being an 9American.

"If I wanted to have a joint debate with some man who wanted to put our part in this peace down on the lowest possible level—how much money we were going to make—I could silence him by assuring him that the world is not reassured.

"I believe in my heart there is hardly a man in America if you get really back of his superficial thoughts, who is not man enough to be willing to make the sacrifice to underwrite civilization. Now the nations of the world have declared that they are not afraid of the truth.

"One of the things that this treaty incidentally does is to absolutely invalidate all secret treaties. I hope no attempts will be made to qualify or embarrass the great process, which is inevitable, with surprise upon the fact that men in America above all nations should ever have hesitated to do this great thing."

Welcomed by Children.

Before he went to the Armory, the President was driven to the Stadium, where a choking mass of humanity, including many school children welcomed him. With a seating capacity, of 30,000, the Stadium was packed, except for small spaces at the ends of the horseshoe and thousands more thronged the steps and terraces above.

In a brief address at the Stadium, Mr. Wilson said he was grateful that the children had come out to see because he felt the decisions being made now affected the children more than those of the present generation.

There was a continual roar of cheering after he finished speaking, and until his party had circled out of the Stadium on the way to the Armory.

At the Armory, which was packed, Mr. Wilson was introduced by N. B. Coffman, president of the Washington State Branch of the League to Enforce Peace.

Friend of Wilson Bought Off Village Band at Pasco, Wash.

By the Associated Press.

ON BOARD PRESIDENT WILSON'S SPECIAL TRAIN, Friday, Sept. 13.—When President Wilson's special train stopped for a few minutes at Pasco, Wash., shortly after 9 o'clock last night, a crowd surrounded the private car "Mayflower" and the President came out to shake hands and exchange greetings with them.

When he asked how so large a crowd had gathered without having the band out, Mr. Wilson was told by one of the boys present that "the band's wore out."

Another boy wearing a faded bandman's uniform was thrust forward then and presented as "the sole member of Pasco's brass band." The President remarked that he didn't look as though he had wind enough and then an old inhabitant confided that "he had given the band $15 not to play tonight."

The talk then turned to the prevailing dry weather, Mr. Wilson remarking it was a sandy country.

"Yes," said a man in the crowd, "we have a lot of grit to live here."

RHEUMATISM LEAVES YOU FOREVER

Deep Seated Uric Acid Deposits Are Dissolved and the Rheumatic Poison Starts to Leave the System Within Twenty-Four Hours.

Every druggist in this country is authorized to say to every rheumatic sufferer in this vicinity that if two bottles of Allenrhu, the sure conquerer of rheumatism, does not stop all agony, reduce swollen joints and do away with even the slightest twinge of pain, he will gladly return your money without comment.

Allenrhu has been tried and tested for years, and really marvelous results have been accomplished in the most severe cases where the suffering and agony was intense and piteous and where the patient was helpless.

Allenrhu relieves at once. Immediately after you start to take it the good work begins. It searches out the uric acid deposits, dissolves the secretions and drives rheumatic poison out of the body through the kidneys and bowels.

It's marvelous how quickly it acts. Blessed relief often comes in two days, and even in cases where the suffering is most painful all traces disappear in a few days.

Mr. James H. Allen, the discoverer of Allenrhu, who for many years, suffered the torments of acute rheumatism, desires all sufferers to know that he does not want a cent of anyone's money unless Allenhu decisively conquers this worst of all diseases, and he has instructed your druggist to guarantee it in every instance.—ADV.

MORE BREAD TO LOWER COST OF LIVING URGED

Federal Wheat Director Says Per Capita Consumption of Flour Should Increase.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK.—Revival of the American housewife's war-time conscience in the administration of the family table and the substitution of the wholesome loaf of bread for higher-priced foods such as meats, eggs and butter, as a means of reducing the high cost of living were advocated today by Julius H. Barnes, United States Wheat Director, in an interview during which he commented on the Government crop report for the month of July which shows the unprecedented loss in crop prospects of 221,000,000 bushels.

"The July crop report is very discouraging, of course," declared Barnes. "For several weeks I have tried to get a more general appreciation into the public mind that our wheat prospect was no longer the fabulously favorable one still accepted by certain sections of the press. But it is well to remember that, however disappointing its shrinkage from our hopes, we still have a wheat crop above the average. It will fully supply us at home and probably sufficiently contribute to the food necessities of Europe.

"There is a close adjustment—too close for comfort—between the total world bread requirement and the total bread gain supplies, but there is sufficient, with care. There can be no longer any doubt that the supply and demand position in wheat demonstrates our guarantee price as not maintained above a world level. Any further movement for a reduced flour price must be based frankly upon a policy of food subsidy. In effect this would force national charity on the table of every American whether he would or no. Its effect has been demoralizing to the sturdy self-reliance of every people on which it has been forced since the days of free circus and free bread in ancient Rome. Always it has benumbed production, while today only in stimulated and increased production lies a hope of real relief. Deliberate subsidy of food was not authorized by Congress in the wheat act.

"It is my conception of sturdy Americanism that it desires to pay its own self-respecting way, assured only of a market free from artificial influence and protected against abuse and extortion.

"The American housewife can, however, work out substantial relief in a natural way. The flour consumption of America fell from its normal of 233 pounds per capita to 171 pounds during the last year. This proves conclusively that bread which is cheap and wholesome, was displaced in the diet by higher priced foods. Two hundred and thirty-five pounds of flour per capita would furnish from 30 to 35 per cent of the necessary food values, and this return to normal flour consumption with the consequent saving of higher-priced foods would work out an actual national saving for the year of one billion dollars in the national food bill.

"More than that, the reduction of strain on higher priced foods such as meats, eggs, butter, would, by that very reduction of demand probably cause a lowering of the price level in those foods. Twelve million housewives administered their table during war-times with a war conscience. The same 12,000,000 housewives today could greatly lighten the strain of living conditions by a similar development of social conscience."

GIRL KILLS FATHER ON "LORD'S ADVICE"

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BRISTOL, Pa.—"The Lord told me to do it while I lay in bed last night."

This reason was advanced to Coroner Harvey S. Rue and Bristol authorities by 16-year-old Clara Bartell, who shot and instantly killed her father in the kitchen of their home.

The girl, evidently dazed by what had happened, refused to amplify her statement to the slightest degree.

Convinced that there is some underlying reason for the tragedy other than a mere family quarrel, which was the first cause ascribed, the authorities are conducting an investigation of the family's affairs. The first news of the tragedy came when Dr. H. Bassett of Yardley and William Barker of Newtown were called to the Bartell home. They found Bartell lying on the kitchen floor, face downward, with a bullet wound in the chest. Death had been almost instantaneous.

The victim's wife is almost insane with grief. According to the wife and other children, the husband and father came home from work and at breakfast an argument relative to moving to Philadelphia started. The children want to live in the city to have advantage of the better educational and social surroundings, the mother stated, but the father had long opposed the suggestion, saying that the morals of young people are too often ruined in the cities.

The argument was especially vehement, she said, and was principally between the father and the daughter, Clara. Clara is said to have picked up the shotgun and pulled the trigger. The weapon was fired at close range. Clara was questioned and finally said: "The Lord told me to do it last night while I was in bed."

AGED KENTUCKY FARMER BURNS TO DEATH IN BED

COLUMBIA, Ky.—Green Selby, 70 years old, was burned to death while in bed in his home in Adair County, nine miles from Columbia, while his son and neighbors stood on the outside, powerless as they looked through the window and saw the flames envelope the sleeping man.

Selby, who was partially blind, had sold his farm and household goods and had planned to leave in a few days for Illinois with his son.

Shortly after dark the son went to Glenville, two miles away, leaving his father alone. On his return at 11 o'clock he discovered the house in flames and the roof about to fall in. He said he tried to force his way into the house, but was choked and blinded by the smoke and was almost unconscious by the time he had battled his way out.

Neighbors, hearing his cries, rushed over, but all agreed it meant certain death to attempt to rescue the sleeping man, as the room was a mass of flames and the roof threatened to cave in any moment. He could be seen on his bed. Neither the shouts of those outside nor the roar of the flames aroused him from his sound sleep.

Chicago Negro Acquitted on Rioting Charge.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Spencer Jones, negro, the first person placed on trial in connection with the race riots six weeks ago, was acquitted by a jury yesterday. The police witnesses charged that he fired on an automobile and again on a truck load of policemen. Numerous colored witnesses contradicted the police testimony. No weapon was found in possession of Jones when he was captured after a chase.

TEXAS COUNTY TO SPEND $3,450,000 ON ROADS

Every School and Church Center to Be Served With Good Highway.

FORT WORTH, Tex.—Plans are being worked out to begin immediate construction of an all-county good road system in Tarrant County with the $3,450,000 provided by a recent bond election. The County Engineers, under the direction of the commissioners are mapping out the work to be done. Four large construction gangs will be employed from the beginning, as the County Court desires to complete the new highways at an early date.

The proposed road system calls for $3,000,000 to be spent on roads and $450,000 on concrete bridges and culverts. Every school and church center in Tarrant County is to be served by a good road. There are eight cardinal and subcardinal roads radiating out of Fort Worth to the county lines at present. The proposed system will link these roads up by means of cross-country roads. This will enable a farmer living in any part of Tarrant County to haul his products to Fort Worth or other business centers over a good road.

The United States Government will match the county bond issue with from $250,000 to $500,000. The State Highway Department is planning to aid the county. The roads will be maintained with funds received from the new automobile tax law. The law provides that each county is entitled to 50 per cent of the money collected from its citizenship on automobiles.

Woman Slain With Ice Pick.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Mrs. Carolina Toth, 35 years old, whose body was found yesterday in a clump of underbrush in the northwest outskirts of the city, was mysteriously slain with an ice pick, which the murderer thrust three times into the woman's body, just above the heart. The woman was a cleaner and dyer and recently joined other employes in a labor strike. John Toth, husband of the woman, is a butcher. He said he lived happily with his wife.

EFFECT ON DIET OF HIGH COST OF LIVIN

In Many Families It Has Elin nated Meat and Reduced Its Supply in Others.

Special to the Post-Dispatch

NEW YORK.—The influence the high cost of living on diet h been studied by Dr. Louis G. Harr Director of the Bureau of Prevent ble Diseases of the New York C Department of Health. Dr. Harr reports in the American Journal Public Health that he has investig ed the medical aspect of the econo ic problem in 2084 families.

In studying the immediate effe of the high prices of food on t normal dietary of these families was found that in 807 of them, or little more than 37 per cent, me was entirely eliminated from t dietary. In 388 families, or abo 17 per cent, the amount of me purchased was appreciably reduced.

In 828 families eggs were elim nated from the dietary. This w considered significant in view of t fact that this is one of the fund mental articles of diet for the t berculous. It was found that in 6 families the use of butter was e tirely eliminated, and in 138 t quantity consumed was considerab reduced. The use of sugar w abandoned in 143 families and co siderably decreased in 240 familie

The effect on children's diet w marked. In 296 families milk w entirely eliminated from the chi dren's dietary, in 71 the amount w greatly reduced, and in 293 loo milk was substituted for bottle milk. Butter was eliminated fro children's dietary in 370 famili sugar in 71, meat in 544 and eggs 532.

Results of the study also sho that out of a total of 2183 cases illness recovery from illness was de initely retarded in a little more tha 13 per cent because of the i creased cost of the essentials of lif

The income of the families stud ied ranged from $300 to $5000, per cent being between $300 an $1500.

Show, 5978 Ridge avenue	1.00
P. D. H.	1.00
Total	$6234.86

A half-dozen contributions to the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund since the last list of donations was published, have increased the total to $6234.86. The fund is still being held open for gifts and will not be formally closed until the first of October.

Ruth, Dora and George Ernst, and Judith and Robert Adler of the 5100 block on Kensington avenue, earned $3 for the fund by having a lemonade stand.

Master Harold Freund, one of the devoted South-Side friends of the poor babies, disposed of a cake for $4.50 and gave that amount to the Milk fund.

Six little girls in the 3800 block on Maffitt avenue earned $1.11 for the Milk and Ice fund. The girls were: Alice, Anna and Dorothy Burke, Ruth and Herma Wiedle and Catherine Brennan.

Libby and Esther Hurwitz and Opal Taylor, 27 Lewis place, forwarded $2.65 to the fund, and P. D. H. gave $1.

DENIKINE CAPTURES 9000 MEN

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—The War Office announces a decisive victory over the Bolshevik forces at Tsaritsyn by Gen. Denikine, in which 9000 prisoners, 11 guns and 100 machin guns were taken.

Three Bolshevik regiments surrendered and two others were destroyed.

SUIT FILED TO DIVIDE SANTA CRUIZ LSLAND

Heirs Want to Throw Beauty Spot of the California Coast Open to Others.

By the Associated Press.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal., Aug. 22.—If a suit recently filed in the Santa Barbara County Superior Court is successful, one of the wonder-spots of the Pacific Coast will be thrown open to the public. The suit, which is brought by Aglae S. Capuccio against Arthur J., Fred F. and Albina C. Caire, the Santa Cruz Island Co., and others, involves the ownership of Santa Cruz, the largest of the Channel Islands, which lies within 30 miles of the mainland, opposite Santa Barbara, and is little known because of present inaccessibility.

The island was secured from the Government many years ago by Justinian Caire and his family, who formed the Santa Cruz Island Co. as a holding corporation. On Caire's death, the widow, holding one-half the stock, combined her interests with those of one of her children, thus exercising complete control of the company and the island.

A recent failure to pay the annual corporation tax gave the other heirs an opportunity to attack this control. The suit, it is believed by some of the protesting heirs, will result in the corporation's being dissolved, and the property divided into parcels in accordance with the stock holdings.

Has Good Harbor.

Santa Cruz contains about 67,000 acres. The north side of it is precipitous, a mountain chain running the entire length, but there is a good harbor at the other end. The south side is exposed to the full force of the Pacific, and there is no landing place.

There is a small settlement upon it. Part of the land is devoted to sheep grazing and part to wine grape cultivation, but the greater part is wild.

The waters about the island teem with fish and abalone. For a large part of the shore line the cliffs are honeycombed with caves. Some of these great holes are gaudy with wonderful combinations of colors. The sea rushes in at high tide and the caves are filled with queer sounds likened to the moaning and groaning of giants.

Wild Pigs on Island.

The island abounds in wild pigs, foxes and mountain lions. The wild pigs are descendants of porkers brought to the island a half century ago by Russian seal hunters, who, on departing after a stay of several months, kidnaped a number of Indian women then resident on Santa Cruz. The women were taken to the Arctic lands and formed part of a seal hunting colony there.

Because of the strange and beautiful scenery of the island, it is frequently used as a motion picture background.

The island management has been averse to permitting campers on the island in considerable numbers, but occasional trips are made to it by Capt. Ira Eaton in his ship the "Sea Wolf," with vacation parties. If the island is split up some of the contesting heirs will build a wharf and make a bid for tourist patronage.

AMERICAN WAS MEXICAN'S RIVAL

Mexico Says Peter Catron Was Killed Over a Woman.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The murder of Peter Catron, an American citizen, in Mexico, last month, resulted from rivalry between Catron and Elena Cerquera for the affections of Virginia Villasana, a resident of Fuentes ranch, where the crime was committed, the Mexican Embassy announced yesterday on receipt of the results of the investigation conducted by its Government.

The Embassy announced it had been advised that Cerquera had been located and his capture was expected soon.

Catron was killed near Valles, San Luis Potosi, last July 7, and his murder brought from this Government a warning to the Mexican Government that, if murders and outrages of Americans continued, the United States might be forced to adopt a radical change in its policy towards Mexico.

NATIONAL FEDERATION OF SYMPHONY SOCIETIES PLANNED

Arhtur J. Gaines, manager of the St. Louis Symhony Orchestra, will leave for New York Tuesday to attend a meeting of the managers of all important symphony orchestras of the country, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. It is expected that a national federation of symphony societies will be formed, under which the officers of the various organizations represented will be enabled to meet at regular intervals, compare ideals and arrange exchange dates for their respective orchestras.

Several of the leading orchestra directors of the country will attend the meeing as visitors. Gaines will meet Director Max Zach while in the East, and hopes to be able on his return to announce the general plan for the coming season, which opens Nov. 9. He says that the prospects for the orchestra are the brightest in its history. Twelve civic and commercial organizations have pledged themselves to uprchase all unsold season subscriptions, and a number of business concerns have bought boxes and blocks of seats for their officers and employes.

CARMEN CONSIDERING PROPOSAL

McKinley System Employes Confer Over 68 Cents an Hour.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 13.—Carmen on the Illinois Traction (McKinley) System are considering today whether they will accept the proposal made by General-Manager Handshay in the wage controversy.

Handshey, at a coneference in Champaign, offered the men 55 cents an hour for conductors and motormen to Dec. 1, 1919, and 68 cents an hour for the year following. The men receded from their demand for 75 cents an hour, offering to take 68 cents an hour immediately. The company refused this. Another conference will be called shortly to see if the men and the company can reach an agreement.

PRESBYTERIANS PLAN TO FILL ALL PULPITS

Laymen Will Be Enlisted for Pastoral Service When Ministers Are Not Available.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK.—"No more empty pulpits" is the slogan of the Presbyterian Church in the United States. Under the plans of the Presbyterian New Era Movement laymen are to be enlisted for such pastoral service as the rules of the church permit, and permission will be given for the reading of sermons from the pulpit by lay readers in all cases where no minister is available.

To make this easy for the laymen, the church has prepared and is about to publish a book of sermons especially fitted for this purpose for free distribution to lay readers.

These sermons have been written by prominent pastors and leaders in the Presbyterian Church, including Dr. William Hiram Foulkes, general secretary of the Presbyterian New Era Movement; the Rev. Harmon H. McQuilkin, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Orange, N. J.; the Rev. John Timothy Stone, D. D., LL.D., pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian Church of Chicago, Ill., and the Rev. John McDowell, D. D., recent pastor of Brown Memorial Presbyterian Church, Baltimore, Md., newly appointed head of the department of social service of the Presbyterian movement.

These will be sermons bearing upon the spiritual objectives of the movement. They will furnish pastorless churches with messages by some of the best preachers in the church and will also keep them in touch with the enterprises in which the church is engaged.

The illness of a pastor, the removal of a minister to a new field, and the inability of many small churches to support a pastor for full time, frequently prevent the holding of regular services.

ESSEX MOTOR CARS

Notice the Welcome

A Closed Car Just as Popular As the Touring Model You Know

Given the Essex Sedan

A car-loving public "found" the Essex touring car and quickly made it known in almost every town and hamlet.

The same thing is happening now to the Essex Sedan.

Of course, there are good reasons for those expressions of real affection one hears of every day for the Essex. Time has revealed the fact that qualities which appeal are retained even after the hardest service.

Come and take a ride in this luxurious closed model people are talking about.

What They Say Is a Safe Guide

Now comes this closed model as a representative of our ideas in liveliness and luxury.

People talk about both with equal pride. Be guided by what they say.

Notice how those beautiful square lines distinguish the Essex Sedan. Its exclusive finish gives it a select and popular ownership.

Plenty of room inside those wide opening doors for such a small and handy car. Deft execution of ideas in upholstery art makes it cozy, too. The liberal allotment of spacious comfort would surprise you were you to take a ride.

Rich appearance stamps the Sedan as worthy of the road. It glides along smoothly as a model unit of compactness. Note yourself how it attracts attention on the highways. Hear what people are saying about its performance.

Merits of the Sedan Should Please You

Essex wide range of qualities brings out interesting discussions and comparisons. Owners boast of their good judgment in choosing the Essex because of the appreciable economic maintenance features in its favor.

Moderate in first cost, there is in the Essex that exclusive degree of elegance which has given it prestige.

Noticeable freedom from jolts over rough roads is due to the rigid Essex chassis and substantial assembly.

Perfect acceleration gives the driver a winning confidence when desirous of heading heavy city motor traffic. Just you notice how the Essex takes the lead. It "gets away."

Essex "grit" finds right-of-way anywhere.

Another general comment about it is that it matches up with those expensive and powerful cars—the best on the road.

It is making history in speed, hill-climbing and useful performances. It keeps on "speaking for itself" under all sorts of road conditions.

Close to one thousand Sedans have been sold. There is a big demand. Orders are keeping far ahead of production, the factory tells us. It is advisable, therefore, to place your order without delay.

ARMY MACHINERY NOT AVAILABLE FOR ROADS

Equipment Sought by St. Louis County Must Be Sold Under Law.

By the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Through a legislative inadvertency it is now impossible for army road building machinery to be distributed free to the states as provided in the Postoffice appropriation bill passed last February. In an opinion just received by Representative Newton of St. Louis, the Judge Advocate General of the Army holds that the provision was repealed by the sundry civil act of last June, which directs that the machinery in question be sold.

Newton brought up the matter at the request of the St. Louis County authorities, who received a few army trucks under the act of February and desires that others be made available for use in executing the county's $3,000,000 road building program. After getting the opinion of the Judge Advocate General, Newton urged upon Chairman Good of the House Appropriation Committee the adoption of some measure to give effect to the intention of the House expressed in February.

Good promised to bring the request before the committee, but said that he, personally, with some of the other members of the committee, was opposed to giving away the army machinery. Good argued that the property was saleable and that the Government needed the money that it might bring. He said, however, that he would be willing for the Government to sell the machinery at from 40 to 50 per cent of its value and charge the cost against teh allotment to the State under the Federal road act.

The army has on hand, according to Newton, trucks, graders, rollers and other machinery for road building to the value of about $65,000,000.

WINNERS IN DICE GAME LOSE

East St. Louis Justice Takes Dice, Profits and Then Some.

A dice game in which Joe Butoeac and Michael Radivich appeared to be $40 ahead, each, resulted Friday in each being more than $60 "out." Both live in Zeigler, Ill.

They went to East St. Louis a few days ago, taking their own dice. They shot dice with Steve Brbovich and Steve Sash—with their own dice—and each won $40. The two Steves were not all satisfied with the result, and complained to the police that the dice were loaded. The visitors were arrested on charges of gambling, and pleaded guilty.

Justice Townsend said he would make sure of depriving them of all their ill-gotten wealth, and some more besides, so he fined each $100 and costs. Net loss—$60 and amounts of costs, each—and their dice, which the police kept.

Children to Give Cecital.

Louise Bernero and Anna Sorkin, each 9 years old, will give a piano recital Saturday evening at the Cabanne Branch Library, Union and Cabanne avenues.

BIG LAND OWNERS OF POLAND MUST SELL

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

ROME, Aug. 5.—Unnoticed by the outside world, the Polish Congress or Diet, sitting in Warsaw, has voted a land reform which must find echoes in all Europe. The 400 deputies to Congress, most of whom are peasants and workmen, voted unanimously the breaking up of all large estates.

Henceforth no man may own more than 150 to 750 acres of land. Whether he be a prince or a peasant, 750 acres are his limit. In the former Grand Duchy of Posen, till recently under German rule, where land cultivation has been brought to a point of perfection unrivaled in any country of the world, a man who cultivates according to highest local standards may own 1000 acres; but not more. The present large owners who possess thousands upon thousands of acres must sell to peasants and demobilized soldiers, who have first refusal of land.

Of Great Social Import.

Though it will take years for all lands now in the hands of large proprietors to pass to the agrarian proletariat, the new law, which will begin to work immediately, marks a revolution of extreme social import. The old-fashioned country house with its large farms, its splendid forests and well-stocked stables will gradually pass away.

The old type of aristocratic country gentleman, with a house which was often like a little court, will now give way to small farms, peasants' cottages and to forests, which will become nationalized. The Congress did not think fit to let forests, a national wealth, pass into the possession of peasants who would hasten to cut them down.

Hope to Weld Social Classes.

The economic difficulties are great. But on the whole the reform is received hopefully. It is hoped that in course of time it will weld various social classes together. In Eastern Poland, where the large owner is a Pole and the peasant either Ruthenian (Ukrainian) or White Russian, it should help wipe out old racial hostilities and settle the vexed Polish-Ruthenian question amicably.

The more immediate result will be the demolition of historic estates and manors, but democracy cannot but welcome a reform brought about not by revolution, but by evolution, and certain to safeguard against the importation of Bolshevism from Russia.

CONFEDERATE FIRES TO BURN FIRST TIME IN OVER 50 YEARS

Return Will Mark Twenty-Ninth Reunion of Veterans at Atlanta in October.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ATLANTA, Ga.—The campfires of the Confederacy, quenched more than 50 years ago at Appomatox, will burn again in Atlanta for the first time since the surrender, when the Confederate Veterans hold their twenty-ninth reunion here, Oct. 7-10.

Piedmont Park, covering several acres in the north side of the city, will be turned over to the veterans. Hundreds of Government tents, with Government blankets, Government cots and other Government material, will dot the spacious sward. And, best of all, the reunion committee is placing orders for scores of cartloads of fat pine logs for fires.

Not all of the veterans will stay at the encampment, although most of them wish to do so. Nearly 2000, including the more aged and infirm, will be placed in the homes of Atlanta people, who will have them as their guests. And these old men will journey out to the encampment, only 15 minutes' street car ride from the center of the city, to be with the other "boys" during the day.

Reservations are now being made by the hundreds in Atlanta by visitors who will come to the reunion on the rate of 1 cent a mile which the Government is giving on all roads to any relative of a veteran, whether living veteran or dead, and to all of those connected officially with the reunion.

Requisitioning Continues in Hungary.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 13.—Advices of further requisitioning in Hungary by Rumanian troops were received today by the Supreme Council. On Sept. 10, the reports state, the Rumanians requisitioned 71,425 pairs of shoes from the orphan asylum in Budapest. The great bulk of these were shipped to Rumania.

CONROY'S

Buy a Piano or Player of a Well-Known Make

THERE are perhaps 200 different makes of pianos manufactured in the United States. Of these comparatively few are known by name to the musical public. The balance of them find their way to small stores throughout the country, and hence to that careless public which seeks only to have a piano or player irrespective of its quality as a fine musical instrument.

Here at Conroy's are to be found only such pianos and players as have a national repute—names that have been long associated with the progress of music and in most instances with the happiness of generations.

While price is, of course, a consideration in buying a piano or player, it should nevertheless be regarded as secondary to the quality of the instrument.

The House of Conroy has always been a house of representation as distinguished from a factory agency, and has consequently always been in a position to select the manufacturers it represents.

None, therefore, but instruments of proved worth and of unqualified endorsement are to be seen here.

The following list of names carried by Conroy's should have your attention as embracing the pianos and players preferred by all who value quality first and always.

Conroy's World-Famed Pianos and Players

Knabe, Knabe Ampico,
Angelus, Emerson, Autopiano,
Haines Bros., Haines Bros. Ampico,
Gabler, Hazelton, Kohler & Campbell, Pianista,
Marshall & Wendell, Marshall & Wendell Ampico,
Foster, Brewster, Armstrong, Francis Bacon

Each of these makes commands the respect of the musical world, and in this largest assortment of fine instruments you will find just the one to suit your individual requirements best.

Price inducements rarely represent moving, popular or well-known merchandise. Here every new piano and player is fairly priced and worth every dollar it is marked. You cannot bargain—the Conroy price is just and net.

BIG MOTOR RUN TO OZARK TRAILS MEET

Train of Automobiles Will Travel From St. Louis to Convention at Roswell, N. M.

MONTE NE, Ark.—With the annual convention of the Ozark Trails Association at Roswell, N. M., Oct. 1, 2, 3, as its destination, a relay run of motor cars, constantly augmented in length as it passes from place to place, will, during the six days prior to the convention, travel 1140 miles of Ozark trails and form a memorable procession of good roads boosters.

The run will start at St. Louis and travel through Springfield, Mo., Joplin, Oklahoma City, Tulsa, Ok., Chickasha, Ok., Lawton, Ok., and Plainview, Tex. Three other relay runs will be in progress at the same time with the same destination, one from El Paso, Tex.; another from Abilene, Tex., and the third from Las Vegas, N. M. On all runs, meetings will be held at every point along the routes and brass band music will be a feature.

Tentative plans have already been made at several points along the routes of the big run from St. Louis for entertaining the crowd of better highway enthusiasts, and the journey promises to be a continuous show of music, fun and road-building instruction. Dancing also will form an important part of the program, and several balls en route are being planned.

Large attendance at the convention is assured through information coming to W. H. Harvey, president of the association, at his headquarters here, stating that a bitter contest is brewing over choice of a city for the 1920 convention. St. Louis is understood to be a strong bidder for the next meeting and will be at the convention this year prepared to swing the road boosters to that city next year. On the other hand, several Western cities firmly believe that they are rightful aspirants and are preparing to send large delegations to wage war against Eastern delegations. An Ozark Trails convention is a prize for which every city in this territory is striving and the fight at Roswell promises to be a hot one.

"For 40 Years the Reliable Music Store"

ANALYSIS shows that most business men require too much from their salesmen. They expect salesmen not only to make sales, but to find and develop their own prospects—to do all the educational and missionary work. No wonder their selling expenses are high! All this educational work should be done in advance of the salesman by means of mailing cards, folders, etc., sent out by the sales manager from the home office.

We can plan for you a series of Advertising pieces that will suit your requirements and materially lessen the amount of unproductive work now done by your salesmen.

"Why, Mama, you have two-sight glasses, just like Daddy's!"

Mr. Brown's experience with two-vision glasses, and his fortunate investment in Kryptoks, induced Mrs. Brown to consult her eyeglass specialist. He recommended Kryptoks. There is no ugly line or seam to distinguish them from single-vision glasses. Kryptoks are the only bifocals without line, seam or hump.

KRYPTOK GLASSES
THE INVISIBLE BIFOCALS

Kryptoks do not reveal age. They make one appear younger by enabling the person wearing them to see both near and distant objects as clearly and distinctly as with the eyesight of youth.

NEW MACHINE GUN IS DEMONSTRATED BY ITS INVENTOR

Weapon Weighs 16 Pounds Complete and Fires 480 Rounds a Minute, Working Smoothly With Barrel Red Hot.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON.—At Bisley a demonstration was given of a new machine gun. The gun is the Beardmore-Farquhar light machine gun, and it is claimed that it is the lightest machine gun, that it is the cheapest to manufacture and to use, that it cannot jam, that it has perfect breech locking, that it is well protected against the entrance of dust and mud, that it can be used without any oil, and is, therefore, not liable to go out of action through freezing at very low temperatures or high altitudes, and that the automatic mechanism is never lubricated, is not affected by the heat of the barrel, and will continue to function even though the barrel be kept red hot by continuous rapid firing.

As to the inability of the gun to jam, it is claimed that if any sort of failure occurs due to defective ammunition or other uses, it can be cleared without dismounting any part of the gun. Owing to the spring system there is less strain on the working parts, and there are, therefore, fewer breakages, while fewer spares are required than with any other machine gun.

The gun is the invention of Col. Farquhar, and is similar in its automatic mechanism and breech mechanism to the Farquhar-Hill automatic rifle, which was adopted by the Admiralty in 1915 and by the War Office last year, though the supply to the armies in the field was interfered with by the signing of the armistice.

The weight of the gun complete with mounting is 16¼ pounds; the length of the gun is 49½ inches; the length of the barrel is 26 inches; the weight of the barrel with foresight is 3 pounds 15 ounces, and the number of different components is 152.

Description of Mechanism.

On the front end of the body is screwed the crosshead, of which a downward extension provides a seating for the spring tube, and also for the front end of the trigger guard and rear end of the tube protector. It has a stud on the top, which forms a pivot for the rotary magazine, and trunnions at the sides for purposes of attachment to a fixed mounting, if required for use in aircraft, tanks, etc. There is a body cap attached to the rear end of the body by means of an interrupted screw. The trigger guard is seated, and forms a protection for the bolt carrier. The safety bolt is in the body cap, and when at "safe" locks the trigger lever. The drawbar engages with the sear, and by means of a half-round pin, is disengaged as soon as the sear releases the hammer, so permitting the sear to engage the hammer again immediately the hammer is cocked, thus giving a single shot for each pull of the trigger. The half-round pin has an external lever, by which it can be set for single shot or automatic firing, as desired. The spring tube lies underneath the barrel.

The biped mounting is attached to the spring tube protector, and the legs, when released, swing outward and forward until in position to support the gun. The automatic mechanism is contained in the spring tube. The rotary magazine fits over the stud on top of the crosshead, and is fastened in position by a lever on the right side of the body. This magazine, as at present constructed, holds 81 cartridges in two rows. The gun may alternatively be served by a box magazine, and a special plate with a socket for such a magazine has been fitted. This plate is attached to the gun in the same manner as the rotary magazine, so that the same gun will take both rotary and box magazines. With both types the cartridges are spring-fed, and there is no feed mechanism operated by the gun to cause jams.

Gas-Operated Loading Device.

The self-loading mechanism is gas operated. The power obtained by the explosion of the charge does not act directly on the breech mechanism, but is stored up until the pressure has gone out of the barrel, when the breech may be opened with safety and without unnecessary force. The power is stored in the main spring, which is compressed by a piston which acts towards the breech and is controlled by a catch. The piston is in a cylinder attached to the barrel and connected with the bore by an aperture. The main spring is contained in the front end of the spring tube. When a cartridge is fired gas passes through the aperture in the barrel into the cylinder and forces the piston rearwards, compressing the main spring and putting the catch into engagement with the washer at the front end of the main spring. The breech action is a "straight pull," having a bulk carrier sliding in slots outside the body.

The bolt is made up of a non-rotating cocking piece and a rotating bolt head. The extractor is of the Mauser type and the ejecting mechanism consists of an ejector pin supported by the ejector spring. The strength of the compressed main striker cannot explode the cap until the bolt is locked. The spring is less than that of the extractor or of the cartridge rim, so that separated cases, broken extractors and torn cartridge rims do not occur through the action of the automatic mechanism.

The demonstration at Bisley was given by the inventor, Col. Farquhar. Staff officers from the War Office, experts in machine gunnery, naval and military attaches of the Powers, including America, Italy, Japan, Belgium and China, and an Australian staff officer, as well as by a number of officers and noncommissioned officers of the Guards Machine Gun Corps, were present. Several of the officers present availed themselves of the opportunity of firing the new weapon. The Farquhar-Hill Automatic rifle was also shown and also attracted much interest.

480 Rounds a Minute.

Col. Farquhar demonstrated with continuous rapid fire that the gun is capable of firing at a rate of 480 rounds per minute. An examination of the target showed that in emptying one rotary magazine he put 75 shots out of 81 on to the target. The inventor also showed how to fire single shots and how to change from single shot to automatic fire. Considerable rapidity, by the way, can be obtained by firing single shots. Col. Farquhar explained the mechanism and demonstrated how quickly the gun can be stripped and reassembled. He also gave a demonstration of fire from the hip, and at the request of his audience, fired the gun upside down and sideways. The machine gun which he used had already fired over 20,000 rounds, and Col. Farquhar declared to a Press representative present that although the gun had been thoroughly tested under all sorts of conditions, and every effort had been made to cause it to jamb, the gun had in fact never yet jambed.

The rotary magazine can quickly be filled, and indicates to the firer how many rounds have been fired. There is no kick in the gun.

James Booth in Candy Business.

James Booth, pormer president of the Advertising Club of St. Louis, who was active in publicity work for the Government here during the war, yesterday left the advertising department of the International Shoe Co. to devote himself t othe management of the Booth Candy Shop, 611 Locust street. From 1904 until 1918, when the Government took over the railroads, he was advertising manager for the Missouri Pacific Railroad. He also directed publicity for the Pageant and Masque of St. Louis, held in Forest Park in 1914.

Get Rid of Fat Where It Shows

Do you realize that nothing but good substantial food and plenty of it will build muscular energy and that you must eat and eat heartily in order to retain your strength?

Dieting weakens you and over-exercise tires you because the former retards the development of muscular energy and the latter consumes too much of it. That is why you find the old-fashioned method of fat reduction such a hardship. Why not get rid of your excess fat in the harmless, scientific, easy way by taking a harmless Marmola Prescription Tablet after each meal and at bed time? Marmola Prescription Tablets are prepared in exact accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription, are perfectly safe to use and have been used by hundreds of persons in this country and Europe with wonderful success. Within a short time you can be getting rid of two, three or four pounds of fat a week. No starvation diet or tiresome exercises are needed. You can be comfortable and you can enjoy the food you like and want. Even after taking off many pounds there will be no flabbiness or wrinkles remaining, and you will feel 100% better. Any good druggist can supply Marmola Prescription Tablets at $1. per case or they will be mailed direct in plain wrapper and post paid if you send the price to the Marmola Company, 864 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich.

Presbyterian Workers Wed.

Miss Alma Proske, 4177 Burgen avenue, chief periodical clerk of the Presbyterian Board of Publication, has resigned because of her marriage to the Rev. Paul Lueders, an Evangelical pastor of Edgeley, N. D., which took place Thursday afternoon at the home of the bride. This makes the third vacancy in the same position in recent years by reason of the occupant getting married, it was stated by Manager J. R. Springer. The chief periodical clerk has charge of Sunday school publications and out-of-town correspondence.

DELEGATES TO GO TO OZARK TRAILS MEETING TOGETHER

Run Will Start From St. Louis With Cars From Other Cities Joining on Way Across Southwest.

CONVENTION TO BE AT ROSWELL, N. M.

Drive to Assembly Will Be Made Across Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas, Accompanied by Bands.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MONTE NE, Ark.—An official itinerary has been announced by W. H. (Coin) Harvey, president of the Ozark Trails Association, for each of the automobile relay runs to the annual convention of the association at Roswell, N. M., Oct. 1 to 3. All the runs concentrate in Roswell the night of Sept. 30. Harvey estimates that, with weather conditions favorable, at least 1000 cars will make the runs.

The longest run will be from St. Louis. This will start Sunday morning, Sept. 21, at 8 o'clock. The first day 132 miles will be covered, with a dinner stop at Sullivan, Mo. The first night stop will be at Rolla, Mo.

The next day the run will proceed to Mountain Grove for dinner, where cars from the Memphis, Tenn., line will join in, meeting the main run at Cabool, Mo., at 11 a. m. Laeving Mountain Grove at 2 o'clock, the run will go to Springfield for a night stop.

The third day will take the party to Miami, Ok., for a night stop. En route meetings will be held at Republic, Mt. Vernon, Stotts City, Sarcoxie, Joplin (a dinner stop), Galena, Baxter and Commerce.

Bands Will Join Tourists.

At Vinita, Ok., the dinner stop for Wednesday, delegations from Benton County, Ark., and Pittsburg, Kan., each accompanied by a band, will join the caravan. President Harvey will arrive with the Arkansas delegates. The Kansas City unit also joins the caravan at Vinita. Proceeding through Chelsea, Ok., the run will arrive at Claremore, Ok., for a night stop. The next day's run will be to Chandler, Ok., passing through and holding meetings at Tulsa, Kellyville, Bristow (dinner stop), Depew, Stroud and Davenport, with the night stop at Chandler. The following day, Friday, the 26th, the run will be from Chandler to Chickasha, Ok., through Wellston, Luther, Jones City, Oklahoma City (dinner stop), New Castle, Tuttle, Amber.

Saturday the run will split in two divisions. One section goes by way of Anadarko, Hobart, Lone Wolf and Granite to a night stop at Mangum, Ok. A picnic dinner will be served by farmers of that section to this division. The other division will go through Cement, Fletcher, Lawton, Cache, Snyder, Headrick to Altus, Ok., the night stop. Sunday noon the divisions will join at Hollis for dinner and go on to Childress, Tex. The next day's run will be in two sections, one through Estelline, Turkey and Quitaque to Lockney; the other through Tell, Northfield, Matador and Floydada to Lockney. Then the two will join in the run to Plainview, where runs from Abilene, Seymour and Wichita Falls will join. The last day's run will be over 200 miles of plains to the convention city.

Fun All Along Way.

The run from Abilene will start Monday morning, Sept. 29, and proceed by way of Merkel, Sweetwater, Rosco, Snyder, Justiceburg, Post City, Slaton, Lubbock and Abernathy to Plainview.

Another run will leave Las Vagas, N. M., Monday morning, Sept. 29, and go direct to Roswell through Antonchio, Santa Rosa, Cuervo, Montoya, Tumcumcari, Grady, Clovis, Portales, Elida and Kenna. A run from El Paso, starting Monday afternoon, Sept. 29, will go to Roswell through Alamogordo and Tularosa.

All delegations are expected to arrive in Roswell not later than 7 o'clock the night of Sept. 30. The Tucumcari, N. M., band of 25 pieces will arrive with the party from Las Vegas. In addition to this musical organzation and the bands from Benton County, Ark., and Pittsburg, Kan., other bands are expected to join the runs and the Roswell band will be out to welcome the visitors.

Reports received at the home office of the association here indicate that eleborate preparations are being made along the several routes to receive the relay runners and make the journeys veritable continuous shows of fun, music and entertainment combined with good roads instruction.

Lodge Mass Meeting Wednesday.

The St. Louis lodges of the Independent Order Brith Sholom will hold a mass meeting Wednesday evening in Talmud Torah Hall, Fifteenth and Carr streets, in honor of Dr. Louis S. Rubinsohn, grand master, and Adolph Rosenblum, assistant secretary, who are both coming from Philadelphia to speak about fraternal orders and the Zionist movement. A banquet will follow the meeting.

YOUR DRUGGIST will receive your Want Adds for the Post-Dispatch at the same rates charged at the main office. Try him. He sells other things than medicine. Look around.

INVADING SERBIANS LOSE 106

GENEVA, Sept. 13.—The Serbians invading Montenegro have lost 106 officers and men killed and several hundred wonuded, according to dispatches received here from Laibach.

The Montenegrin losses are declared to have been heavy.

Gas Employes Meet.

The Laclede Gas Light Co. Employes' Mutual Aid Association held its annual meeting Friday evening. A new board of directors was elected. An orchestra, singers and moving pictures provided entertainment.

THE LUDENDORFF AND VON TIRPITZ MEMOIRS

General Byng's Army at Cambrai Stopped Germans in Their Advance in 1918

What Ludendorff Intended Was a Break Through to the North of the Devastated District and Into the Rear of the British Armies in Flanders.

By Gen. Erich von Ludendorff.
Eighth Article.

ON MARCH 20, 1918, along the whole front of the attack, the guns and trench mortars, with their ammunition, were in position behind, in, and in places even even in front of the foremost trenches. It was a remarkable achievement, and at the same time a marvel that the enemy had neither seen anything nor heard any movement at night. At times our batteries were subjected to harassing fire, and ammunition dumps went up here and there. All this must have attracted the enemy's attention. But he observed it all along the front, and could therefore obtain no certain indication.

The divisions had at first been distributed behind the front of attack, but were now crowded together in anti-aircraft shelters, behind the jumping-off places in our foremost lines. This concentration of 40 or 50 divisions (the German division was now about 10,000 men) had not been observed by the enemy, nor had it been reported to him by his highly developed secret service.

The marches took place at night, but the troops sang as they passed through the villages. Such masses cannot be concealed. But no more did the airmen discover the railway transport that had been taking place behind the front of attack since February. It was heavy behind the whole front, but the bulk of it was unmistakably going on behind the line Arras-La Fere, as was reported by German airmen sent up to report.

Nor did the enemy discover anything by other means. I must assume this; otherwise his defensive measures would have been more effective, and his reserves would have arrived more quickly. In spite of all efforts to the contrary, the essence of war is uncertainty; that is our experience, and the enemy's, too.

On March 18 or 19 two men deserted from a trench mortar company. According to notes found by us, or according to prisoners' statements, they are alleged to have given information of the impending attack.

On the other fronts, particularly near Lille and Verdun, artillery activity had increased.

At noon on March 20 G. H. Q. had to face the great decision whether the attack was to commence on March 21 or be put off.

Every delay must have increased the difficulties of troops, crowded together close up to the enemy. Already the tension was very hard to bear. The spiritual pressure of the mass was urging them forward.

Feared Delay of Assault.

And yet, our artillery relied on gas for its effect, and that was dependent on the direction and strength of the wind. I had to rely on the forecast submitted to me at 11 a. m. by my meteorologist, Lieut. Dr. Schmaus. Up till the morning of March 20, strength and direction were by no means very favorable; indeed, it seemed almost necessary to put off the attack. That would have been very hard to do.

So I was very anxious to see what sort of a report I should get. It was not strikingly favorable, but it did indicate that the attack was possible. At 12 noon the army groups were told that the program would be carried out. Now it could no longer be stopped. Everything must run its course.

G. H. Q., senior commanders and troops had all done their duty. The rest was in the hands of fate; unfavorable wind diminished the effectiveness of the gas, fog impeded and retarded our movements and prevented our superior training and leadership from reaping its full reward. This was the predominant opinion about the fog, but a few thought it an advantage.

On March 21, just before 4 a. m., the battle began with a tremendous crash on a front of 45 miles, between Croisilles and La Fere. As regards the Second and Eighteenth Armies (the center and southern forces) the hours had been fixed by higher authority for the main operations, the Seventeenth Army, which was fighting by itself, was left more latitude. Within these limits matters were left to the groups.

For about two hours the whole of our artillery engaged the enemy's batteries, then most of it switched on to trench bombardment, in which the trench mortars also took part. A little before 9 a. m. most of our fire—only a portion being left on hostile batteries and special points—was concentrated to form a barrage. Our infantry advanced to the assault.

Bad Check Near Cambrai

The Seventeenth Army, which had the strongest enemy in front of it, only reached his second line; the barrage had gone far ahead; the infantry had lost touch with it. It remained in this position, lying down, with no artillery support.

During the Second Army's attack, the cooperation between the infantry and the artillery was better. The infantry penetrated into the enemy's second position.

With the Eighteenth Army everything proceeded as intended. It was making good progress.

(The situation thus created was almost the reverse of what Ludendorff sought as he has explained his plans in previous articles. The Seventeenth Army, which ran against Gen. Byng's defense northwest of Cambrai and was stopped, had been ordered, in conjunction with the right wing of the Second Army, to surround the hill positions southwest of Cambrai and then break through north of the devastated region and into the rear of the British armies concentrated in Flanders. The left wing of the Second Army and the Eighteenth Army were to go through the devastated region and support this thrust. As it happened, the main blow intended for the destruction of the British was parried and it was the supporting armies which broke through into the devastated region.)

Seventeenth Army Badly Battered

On March 22 there was little change on the Seventeenth Army front, but the Second, being firmly in hand and led with energy, defeated the enemy and pressed on. The Eighteenth gained a considerable amount of ground. The Seventeenth appeared to give its various tactical groups too much latitude; but for this action of the different formations was too interdependent. G. H. Q. took steps to get the general direction of the fighting taken more firmly in hand.

The result of the situation on the Seventeenth Army front was that the enemy in the Cambrai re-entrant was not cut off, nor could the opposition to the Second Army be indirectly reduced. The latter had been obliged to rely on its own unaided efforts, and had, therefore, not got ahead so fast as was desirable from the point of view of assisting the Seventeenth. And so again Crown Prince Rupprecht's group could not gain ground between Croisilles and Peronne to the extent that had been originally intended.

On March 25 the Seventeenth and Second Armies had passed far beyond the line Bapaume-Combles, fighting hard all the way, the Eighteenth Army had taken Nesle and met with but little resistance. The Seventeenth Army was already exhausted; it had lost too heavily on March 21 and 22, apparently because it had fought in too dense formation. The Second Army was fresher but was already complaining of the old shell holes. It could get no farther than Albert. Its left wing had been more delayed by having to cross the Somme than by the enemy.

Had to Change His Plans.

The Eighteenth Army was still full of fight and confidence; on March 27 it took Montdidier. Soon the enemy formed a fresh front north of the Somme, which was sure to be difficult to overcome.

The original idea of the battle had to be modified, and the main weight of the attack vigorously directed on that point. I still hoped we should get through to open warfare, and kept it in view in my instructions to the armies. But the Seventeenth Army could not get on; the Second and the Eighteenth were still gaining ground. I continued my efforts towards reinforcing the left wing of the Second Army, and to direct it and the Eighteenth on Amiens.

The enemy's line was now becoming denser, and in places they were even attacking themselves, while our armies were no longer strong enough to overcome them unaided. (It was the rapid shift of the French forces westward which countered the plans of Ludendorff at this point.) The ammunition was not sufficient, and supply became difficult. The repair of roads and railways was taking too long, in spite of all our preparations.

After thoroughly replenishing ammunition the Eighteenth Army attacked between Montdidier and Noyon on March 30. On April 4 the Second Army and the right wing of the Eighteenth attacked at Albert and south of the Somme towards Amiens.

These actions were indecisive. It was an established fact that the enemy's resistance was beyond our strength. We must not get drawn into a battle of exhaustion. This would accord neither with the strategical nor the tactical situation. In agreement with the commanders concerned, G. H. Q. had to take the extremely difficult decision to abandon the attack on Amiens for good.

"Brilliant Feat," He Says.

The Entente now attacked at Albert and southeast of Amiens in a disconnected sort of way and achieved nothing. On April 24, after careful preparation, the Second Army made another attempt, with the aid of tanks, to improve its position at Villers-Bretonneux; it got ahead well, but was unable to hold what it gained.

The front between Albert and Montdidier only settled down gradually. From time to time fighting broke out again, and the situation remained permanently doubtful. The other parts of the new front, toward Arras and Noyon, became quiet much more quickly.

The battle was over by April 4. It was a brilliant feat, and will ever be so regarded in history. What the English and French had not succeeded in doing we had accomplished, and that in the fourth year of the war.

Strategically we had achieved what the events of March 23, 24 and 25 had encouraged us to hope for. That we had also failed to take Amiens, which would have rendered communication between the enemy's forces astride the Somme exceedingly difficult, was specially disappointing. Long-range bombardment of the railways establishments of Amiens was by no means an equivalent.

Found Food and Stopped.

However, our troops had beaten the French and English and proved themselves superior. That they did not achieve all the success that was possible was due, not only to their reduced fighting value, but, above all, to their not being in all cases under the firm control of their officers. They had been checked by finding provisions, and valuable time had thus been lost.

Generally speaking, our tactics had proved sound. What had happened in the Seventeenth Army did not necessitate any fundamental changes, although some lessons needed more drastic application. Above all, the infantry must be more extended. At many places machine-gun posts had given us an undue amount of trouble and so caused delay. The infantry groups had often been lacking in initiative, and their co-operation with the companion arms had often failed.

The troops had found special difficulty in reorganizing themselves for defense at the conclusion of the attack, and particularly in recognizing when no further success was to be gained by continuing the attack.

All troops, especially mounted troops, had suffered heavily from bombing from hostile airmen. (American flyers with both the British and French forces had a brilliant share in this work of bombing and so helped hold up the drive.)

It was as yet too early to give a final opinion on the strategical situation; in itself it was by no means favorable. How the G. H. Q. was to deal with it later on could not yet be determined, as we were still in the first stages of the operations.

Situation Not Favorable.

The Avre bridgehead (a narrow hold the Germans had on the south bank of the Avre southeast of Amiens. The French afterwards administered a sharp defeat on the troops exposed here with the river at their backs) was a special difficulty in the tactical sense. The advisability of giving it up was discussed. But as this would have shown the enemy that we had given up any further attack on Amiens we kept it.

The new front had now to be fortified. Some of the played-out divisions were relieved by fresh ones from quiet fronts, the less tired ones were left in the line. Everywhere the greatest attention and care was bestowed on completing the communications in the rear. For the main operation it was, however, of the highest importance to take back troops that were no longer required in the new line for rest, training and improving their discipline. We had to collect reserves for further operation and to repel possible counter-attacks, which could,

Von Tirpitz Claims Jutland Battle as a Victory, but Says It Was a Hollow One

Says Germany Was Forced to Rest Content Upon the Thought That the Damage to Enemy in Struggle at Sea Was Three Times That Inflicted on Own Fleet.

By Alfred von Tirpitz.
Grand Admiral of the German Navy.
Seventh Article.

I HAVE said already that the results of the battle of Jutland made it more clear than ever that we should have risked a critical engagement and ordered our main battle fleet forward in the earlier fight at Heligoland, no matter what British forces were reported or supposed to be behind the light screen which they had thrown forward.

Our losses would have been heavy. Those who urged this upon the Kaiser were true so far as they went, but they lost sight of the fact that battles cannot be fought without losses. What were our losses at Verdun? There we sacrificed tens of thousands because victory at whatever cost in lives would have meant victory complete—or so the grand headquarters believed.

What were our losses in all the great land offensives? Did we ever hesitate to launch a costly offensive on land when we believed it would contribute to our final victory?

The timid policy which held the navy in leash because a decisive blow would have meant the loss of some of our splendid ships and thousands of our seamen was a display of weakness that inestimably lowered our prestige in the eyes of the world—that did even worse, deprived us of the opportunity to wrench from our enemies the full attainment of our aims, which we could not accomplish by the most splendid victories of our land forces alone.

Those men who persuaded him to allow our splendid ships to lie idle in their harbors and the whole structure of our navy to rust and become fertile for the seeds of sedition and revolution sowed by the discontented masses, were indeed the evil genii of the Emperor.

One is appalled at the conception of what might have been done at Heligoland to change the history of the world had we grasped our opportunity, when one thinks that in the unequal fight off Jutland, where we were numerically inferior, our losses were only one-third that of the British. What might have happened had not darkness stopped us, none can tell.

In pursuance of our originally planned policy, on one of our long sweeps in the direction of England, our cruiser forces which stood at considerable distance from our main body encountered numerically superior British cruiser forces off Skagerrack. Notwithstanding we were greatly outnumbered, the German commander, while informing the main body of his location and the known forces opposed to him, closed at once with the enemy.

Results quickly showed that he was justified. Our ships were outnumbered, but individually they were far superior. Our marksmanship was better and our tactical methods were of a higher order. The long years of thorough, methodical training of our navy, under rigorous conditions, and pushed to the limit of activity, began to tell against the comparatively slipshod methods of the British.

In the beginning six British battle cruisers were opposed to our five.

When the first shot was fired the air was as clear as crystal and the fight opened at a range of 15,000 meters (about 16,400 yards). Exactly 18 minutes after opening fire the British battle cruiser Indefatigable was blown up. The explosion seemed to rock the ocean and the loss of life must have been terrific. As yet we had lost no ship and the damage done to the German vessels was inconsequential. It seemed almost too good to be true to the German commanders observing the battle.

The Queen Mary Destroyed.

Meanwhile, we knew that our main force was steaming under pressure to reach us in time to complete the blow which fortune had thrown it in our way to strike and to reach our squadron before the British reinforcements which we knew must be racing over the ocean, could come to the assistance of their battered sister ships.

Just what these reinforcements would be in strength we did not know, but every ship we could dispose of before they arrived would mean so much greater margin of safety for us when they entered the fight.

Twenty minutes after the destruction of the Indefatigable, the Queen Mary went down in flames, to the accompaniment of muffled explosions.

Now the British reinforcements were beginning to arrive. One after another there came into firing range five battleships of the Queen Elizabeth type, the latest, most up-to-date British construction.

Against these overwhelming odds our ships continued to battle. Meanwhile our battle fleet was climbing over the horizon. Upon seeing our main force approaching Admiral Beatty, in command of the British forces, turned about and steamed north.

(British naval writers have pointed out that it was Admiral Beatty's logical course to steer north in an attempt to draw the German fleet to pursue him to their destruction, if the British high seas fleet could be thus encountered.—Editor's note.)

A wireless message from Admiral Scheer to the chief of staff showed that the German commander fully expected to encounter the entire British battle fleet. Nevertheless, with the full consent of the chief of staff, he hastened to engage the enemy with the utmost speed.

During the early stages of the battle the German fleet got into a disadvantageous position which silhouetted our ships against the sky while the British vessels were shrouded in smoke and haze.

Admiral Scheer escaped from this dangerously disadvantageous position by a maneuver which would have been entirely impossible to almost any fleet in the world, certainly to one much less thoroughly trained than the German. Under heavy fire he executed a complete turn about of the entire fleet simultaneously and retreated temporarily.

As soon as he had arranged anew his fighting formation, he again executed a complete turnabout, simultaneously with all his ships, and renewed his attack upon the enemy.

Darkness Stops Battle.

Shortly after this, nightfall rendered any carefully considered fighting formation impossible. It was at this point that the British fleet demonstrated that they felt our superiority. Had they not, they would have kept us at sword's point, fighting desperately not to lose contact with our forces throughout the night. This is axiomatic. Admiral Scheer and the whole fleet expected a renewal of hostilities.

But instead, the British fleet apparently wished to continue the engagement in waters more free from mine fields and decided to steer close to Heern Reef during the night. At daybreak, the straining eyes of our gunners, lookouts and range finders could see no hostile smoke. The sea was clear far and wide. It was a bitter disappointment to them. They had hoped and prayed through the night that they would be able to continue the fight with daybreak.

Airplanes were sent up from our larger vessels and during the morning one of the air scouts reported a new and larger fleet section deploying to the west. This proved to be the main body of the British fleet, but it soon turned and steamed northward.

(The British state their fleet was searching for the German vessels. Why they did not encounter one another still is a matter of controversy.—Editor's Note.)

Thus were we prevented from striking the blow which might have been a deciding factor in the war. Again fate snatched from us the opportunity to come to a decision with the British on the sea. Had nightfall not interrupted the battle the result might have rewritten the world's history.

Boasts of Enemies' Losses.

Ours was the victory, to be sure, but how hollow a victory, when its fruits were denied to us. We must rest content with the thought that destruction which we wrought upon the enemy was three times the loss he inflicted upon us.

(The British reports of the battle of Jutland admit the loss of the ships named by Von Tirpitz. They, however, contend that the German losses were far greater than those detailed in the German official reports. The figures given out by Germany are as follows: British losses: One dreadnought, three battle cruisers, four armored cruisers, three small cruisers and 12 destroyers. German losses: One battle cruiser, one battleship, three small cruisers and five destroyers. The British claim many more German vessels sunk or disabled, but detailed reports are not available.—Note.)

50,000 Dealers Sell Goodrich Tires

The Army of Goodrich Dealers, ready to furnish the User with Goodrich Tires wherever he is, or wherever he goes, means many significant things to him—above other things, a wide-spread, popular approval of Goodrich Tires.

But first it means that 50,000 dealers, more than half in the country, have confidence in Goodrich and Goodrich Tires; that 50,000 men whose business it is to know tires, believe in the skill and sincerity of Goodrich tire making, and the certainty of Goodrich tires making good in actual road performance.

Furthermore, the Dealer like the User, is safeguarded by the frank open-handed certification of Goodrich's More-Mileage Adjustment—6,000 Miles for Fabric Tires—8,000 miles for Silvertown Cords.

The Goodrich Certification measures out—as everything else you buy is measured out—the minimum you, with proper usage, get from Goodrich Tires.

Finally, 50,000 Dealers enlisted to furnish America with Goodrich Tires because they were first to know what the whole motoring world now knows and says, tried desperately to engage the British fleet, but always without success. This aversion on the part of our enemies to meet us i nopen battle should have been sufficient indication to those in supreme authority that our naval forces were more than respected by them.

VON TIRPITZ CLAIMS JUTLAND BATTLE A VICTORY, BUT HOLLOW

Greatest Naval Battle Planned.

Probably had we been willing to risk an engagement off Scapa Flow or near Dover, they would have given battle, but this was too disadvantageous to us, considering the known numerical superiority of the British. We could not be expected to seek them out in their own waters and fight them almost under the guns of their land fortifications. They were the stronger in numbers, almost overwhelmingly so, and they should have sought us out.

In 1918 the Emperor was about to remove the restrictions and allow the navy to strike a blow for Germany. Admiral Scheer had completed plans for the greatest sea battle of the world's history, which probably would have involved the American navy as well as the British. Our high seas fleet was to attack in conjunction with the total force of our submarine strength. Just when plans for this great offensive of the sea were matured, the navy was overwhelmed by revolution and mutiny.

The troops of the Second Army were particularly handicaped by having stuck fast in the western edge of the Somme battlefield. They could find real rest only to the east of our starting line, although in the country they had traversed numerous English hut camps had fallen into our hands undamaged. (The region of which he complains was that devastated by him in the great German retreat of 1917.)

Admits His Loss Was Heavy.

Our losses were not inconsiderable; we had been fighting with large numbers for a long itme. The percentage in the Seventeenth Army was too high; the losses in officers had been heavy throughout. But, besides, rich booty, we had taken some 90,000 unwounded prisoners, and in addition the enemy's battle casualties had been heavy. We could expect to get back many of the slightly wounded within a reasonable time. We had been attacking and had come off well, even in the matter of casualties.

The arrangements for dealing with the wounded had not sufficed at all points, although they had been carefully examined by the Director of Medical Service before the battle. The numerous slightly wounded made things more difficult by the stupid and displeasing way in which they hurried to the rear.

The battle cost me a great deal also. My wife's youngest son fell on the 23d. He was a flying officer, and was at first reported missing. On the battlefield we found a grave with the English inscription: "Here rest two German flying officers." I had the sad task of identifying my son. Now he rests in German soil. The war has spared me nothing.

My journey to the battlefield had taken me through the two trench systems, in which the opponents had faced each other for so long. The impression it made was great; a strip, many miles in width, bleak and devastated, stretches through France, the mark of the war conjured up by the Entente.

GERMAN MINISTRY ESTIMATES WAR COST AT $36,500,000,000

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 21.—Belated news of the losses incurred by German families and organizations, military or civilian, as it is verified, is being placed in the newspapers in the form of obituaries.

The Baron von Wangenheim family recalls its dead in a great black-bordered advertisement in which are named 22 members of the family who have fallen for the fatherland, all except two of them officers.

Similarly the family Baron von Puttkamer, little known in Germany and not as large a family as the Wangenheim, announces the loss of 19 members, ranging from noncommissioned officers to Lieutenant-Colonel.

Individual regiments, divisions and naval units are daily letting their individual losses be known, and they make a formidable appearance, and attest to the bitter severity of the war.

In this connection it is interesting to note estimates of the Ministry of Finance about the cost of the war to Germany. It amounts to about $36,500,000,000, according to the peace-time rate of exchange.

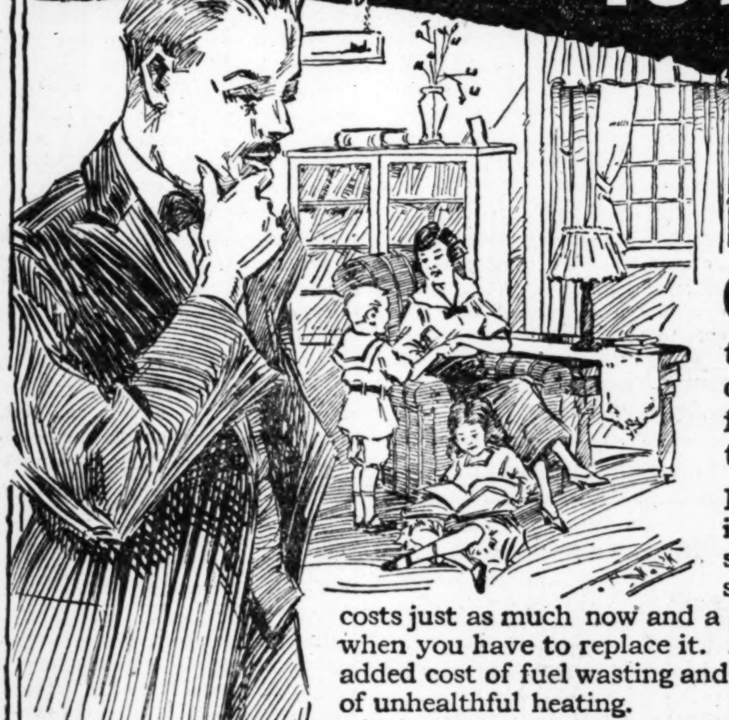
What Kind of a Heating System Are You Going to Install ?



GIVE that question a lot of deep thought now so you can live in bodily comfort and peace of mind this winter.

It's mighty important to install the right heating system at first. For an unsatisfactory heating plant costs just as much now and a great deal more later on—when you have to replace it. And in addition there's the added cost of fuel wasting and the discomfort and danger of unhealthful heating.

Be guided by the judgment of the thousands of home-owners in St. Louis who have installed Mueller Boilers. Let their satisfaction serve as an example in your choice of a heating system.

MUELLER BOILERS

It's easy enough to build a boiler that will give fairly good success in operation. But that isn't the kind you want in your home. You want every ton of coal you burn to give you the biggest possible volume of house-warming heat. A heating system that will last as long as the building, easy to manage, one that doesn't need overhauling at the beginning of every winter.

Mueller Boilers built on scientific principles, embody exclusive features, that make them conform to the demands of the most exacting owners. Let us explain these features to you. We will gladly give you expert advice on your heating requirements and inasmuch as we make heating systems of all kinds we are in a position to give impartial advice that will insure the best possible type of system for your home or building. Come in and talk it over today.

Your Complexion By All Means

A Beautiful Skin and Stuart's Calcium Wafers Have Made Thousands of Girls Happy.

Don't smear the face with creams, lotions, powders and rouge to hide what ought to be real natural beauty. Don't try to hide pimples, etc., but get rid of them by clearing the blood with Stuart's Calcium Wafers. This wonderful beauty-maker has a most remarkable action to naturally seek the skin, dry up pimples, so that the impurities pass off.

In a few days the skin becomes clear, pimples dry and flake off, boils cease, blackheads are gone, yellow muddiness disappears and before you can realize it you have a more beautiful complexion. No creams, lotions, bleaches or other external methods can do this, as all experience has proven. Get a 50-cent box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers at any drug store. Begin today. —ADV.

JUST A DAB OF POSLAM ON SICK SKIN

Just a little dab of Poslam is enough to retard the development of Pimples or to clear an inflamed Complexion. The ugliest red nose has been toned down by Poslam overnight.

When concentrated healing power is needed to help any ailing skin, look for that power in its highest efficiency in Poslam.

Urge your skin to become clearer, brighter, healthier by use of Poslam Soap, medicated with Poslam.—ADV.

After Vacation Peel Your Discolored Skin

Women returning from the seaside with browned, reddened or freckled complexion will be wise in immediately taking up the mercolized wax treatment. Weather-beaten skin had best come off, for no amount of "beautifying" will ever make such skin pretty to look at. The surest, safest, easiest way to shed the despoiled cuticle is with the treatment suggested. Put the wax on before retiring, as you would cold cream, and rinse it off next morning with warm water. Minute particles of scarf skin will peel off day by day, gradually showing the healthy, youthful skin beneath.

One ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, is enough to make any discolored or spotted complexion clear, white and satiny soft. Its action is so gentle, no harm is caused and the face shows no trace of its use.—ADV.

SISTINE CHAPEL SOLOISTS TO SING HERE ON OCT. 30

Pontifical Choristers, Including Artists of St. Peter's and St. John Lateran, Will Appear at Coliseum.

An authoritative exposition of the ancient and noble art of polyphonic singing, which reigned over European music for seven centuries, reaching its climax with Palestrina in the sixteenth century, and which, due to the subsequent rise of harmony, has since the death of Johann Sebastian Bach became almost extinct, will be given at the Coliseum on the night of Oct. 30 by a choir of 60 of the most distinguished soloists and singers of the Sistine Chapel and the Roman basilicas of St. Peter and St. John Lateran.

The first American tour of these artists is made with the blessing of Pope Benedict XV, whose Secretary of State, Pietro Cardinal Gasparri, recently sent the following telegram to the Very Rev. Father Angelo di Santi, president of the Papal Conservatory of Higher Sacred Music, in Rome, and registrar of the visiting choir:

"The Holy Father consents with greatest enthusiasm and hope for the success of this worthy enterprise, and blesses most heartily both the maestri and choirs of the Papal Conservatory of Higher Sacred Music and the distinguished Oratorio Society."

The director of the choir is the Right Rev. Monsignor Raffaelo Casimiro Casimiri, maestro of the musical choir of the patriarchal cathedral of St. John Lateran, and master director of the Polyphonic Society of Rome. He was called to Rome in 1901 to become master of music at the Pontifical Vatican Seminary. His assistants on the tour will be the Rev. Father Giuseppe Ippolito Rostagno, maestro of the choir of the Duomo; the Rev. Dr. Cesare Franco, maestro of the choir of Regia Palatina; the Rev. Dr. Primo Vannutelli, assistant to the boys' choir; and Signor Michele Casimiri, archivist of the Polyphonic Society.

"Finest Boy Soprano."

One of the members of the visiting choir is Luigi di Tommaso Pachelli, pronounced to be the finest boy soprano of the Sistine Chapel, which is the Pope's private chapel at the Vatican. He was the solo singer at the Augustinian Theater in Rome, and took the leading part of Joan of Arc in the oratorio of that name.

This body of singers should not be confused with the self-styled "Sistine Quartet," which is also touring the United States, and which the St. Gregory Musical Society of New York has publicly declared to have no connection with the Sistine Chapel, and to be in fact a body of seculars, well known in Italy as the Roman Quartet. The Society of St. Gregory caused to be published two months ago a statement to the effect that "neither the Sistine Choir, nor any part thereof, is coming to this country for the purpose of giving concerts." Theodore Mitchell, representing the society, has written to the Post-Dispatch that the statement was issued before it was known that Monsignor Casimiri's choir was coming to America, and that this is a "truly representative body from the Roman basilicas." Cardinal O'Connell has consented to serve as patron for the choir's concert in Boston.

The program for the St. Louis concert has not yet been announced, but it is expected to include examples of the classic age of sacred polyphonic music. Polyphony may be roughly defined as a system of musical composition in which two or more independent melodies are woven together into a fabric. It is opposed to harmony, in which there is a single melody, supported by progressions of chords.

The roster of adult soloists includes professors, priests and seminarians. It is headed by Prof. Domenico Mancini, soprano soloist at St. Peter's; Prof. Raffaele Marchigiani, soprano soloist at St. Peter's and the Sistine Chapel; Prof. Giuseppe Marcheggiani, soprano soloist at St. John Lateran; Prof. Tommaso Mori, soprano soloist at St. John Lateran, and Prof. Gaetano Angelelli, contralto soloist at St. Peter's and the Sistine Chapel.

Many Professors in Choir.

Other adult singers are Prof. Virgilio Piccio, contralto; Prof. Engenio Traviglia, contralto soloist at St. Peter's and the Sistine Chapel; and the following soprano soloists of the Sistine Chapel; Leonardo Angeli, Cesare Boezi, Antonio Comandini, the Rev. D. Giuseppe Fiocchi, Giovanni Pastura, Pio Purarelli, and Angelo Salina.

The tenors of the choir are the Rev. Father Prof. Agostino Antodiccia, Sistine Chapel; Prof. Giovanni Calcatelli, Sistine Chapel and St. Peter's; Prof. Alessandro Cecchini, St. Peter's; Prof. Luigi Bellabarba; Prof. Guido de Franceschi, St. John Lateran; Prof. Carlo Fantozzi; Prof. Nicola Fasciolo, St. Peter's and Sistine Chapel; Prof. Angelo Filippini, St. John Lateran; the Rev. Father Prof. Pasquale Funto, St. Peter's and Sistine Chapel; Ignazio Melilli, St. Peter's and Sistine Chapel; Prof. Arturo Morino; Prof. Rinaldo Schenone, St. John Lateran; Prof. Filippo Risolde, St. John Lateran; Prof. Benedetto Tetcher, St. John Lateran; and the Rev. Father Prof. Adelelmo Vitali, Sistine Chapel.

The baritones of the choir are Prof. Vittorio Bellabarba, of St. Peter's; Prof. Augusto Dado, St. John Lateran; the Rev. Father Prof. Attilio Grotto, St. Peter's and Sistine Chapel; Prof. Romano Rasponi, St. John Lateran; and Prof. Aurelio Sabbi, St. John Lateran and St. Peter's. The bassos are Prof. Roberto Bisciani, Prof. Francesco Costantini, Sistine Chapel; Prof. Giuseppe Flamini; the Rev. Father Prof. Antonio Grimaldi, St. Peter's and Sistine Chapel; and Prof. Angelo Pro.

FAIR SOMNAMBULIST HEROINE OF FARCE

"She Walked in Her Sleep" Begins Week at Shubert-Jefferson Tonight.

A young and comely somnambulist, who takes nocturnal strolls along the sixteenth story ledge of a fashionable New York apartment hotel, climbs at embarrassing moments into other people's rooms and incidentally purloins any portable articles that come in the way of her unconscious fingers, is the central figure of a sprightly farce, "She Walked in Her Sleep," which begins a week's engagement tonight at the Shubert-Jefferson Theater.

Other dwellers in the hotel include two young bridegrooms and their jealous brides, a crabbed old inventor who has the secret of a priceless new explosive, and a young doctor. The complications arising from the fair sleep-walker's visits, while clad in attire appropriate for night, to the apartments of these various personages, are said to come in swift succession, with diverting effect. The author is Mark Swan, who wrote the successful farce of last season, "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath."

David Wark Griffith's big spectacular picture, "The Fall of Babylon," begins its second week at the American today. An added attraction is the appearance in person of Kyra, a noted Oriental dancer.

Patricia Collinge Next Week.

Beginning next Sunday night, Patricia Collinge, the original "glad girl" in "Pollyana," will appear at the American in "Tillie," a homespun drama of life among the Pennsylvania Dutch. It is adapted from Mrs. Helen R. Martin's popular novel, "Tillie, Mennonite Maid." The coming of this play so early in the season is due to the fact that George W. Lederer's "Angel Face," originally booked for next week, was recalled from Chicago to New York on account of the actors' strike. Cosmo Hamilton's audacious comedy, "Scandal," will be next week's offering at the Shubert-Jefferson.

Princess Radjah, an Oriental dancer, leads the bill at the Orpheum this week, portraying the story of Antony and Cleopatra for one number, while another is entitled an "Arabian Chair Dance." The Rigoletto brothers and the Swanson sisters have an act called "Around the World;" Master Gabriel, a midget, appears in a one-act comedy called "Little Kick;" and Ivan Bankoff and other dancers will present "The Dancing Master." Edith Clifford, Kitner & Reaney, Corinne Tilton and Frank Jerome are other entertainers on the bill.

The Columbia's chief vaudeville offering for the first half of the week is "Oh, Auntie," a miniature musical revue. The Gayety will present "The Beauty Trust," and the Standard "His Gaiety Girls."

BRITISH PUT OUT WHEN BELGIUM GETS ONLY OKAPI IN CAPTIVITY

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—British naturalists, who have been confidently expecting that the only live okapi in captivity was to be brought to the zoological gardens in Regent's Park, were disappointed today when the news came from Antwerp that the animal had been taken there from the Congo by Dr. Lebrum. It was the gift of Mme. Landaghem, whose husband is in the Congo medical service.

The okapi is the survivor of a distant ancestor of the giraffe. An adult stands about five feet high, and although it has the general shape of the giraffe its neck is relatively shorter and its forelegs are not so high in proportion to the hindquarters.

The sides of the animal's head are light fawn color and the general coloration of the body is a dark purple. The most striking character is that the rump and the upper part of the legs are transversely striped with black and white. It was first known in 1901, having been found in the Semliki forest, haunting low undergrowth and swamps. This particular specimen was in Mme. Landaghem's possession for a number of years and photographs of it received here show it eating out of her hand.

LEAGUE SEEKS MORE MEMBERS

Girls Offered Prizes for Additions to Clubs.

A membership campaign will open tomorrow to double the number of girls now in the Community Service League, the Federation of Girls' Clubs directed by the War Community Service. There are now 34 clubs with 1500 members. Prizes will be given the girls obtaining the most new members. Thrift and Savings Stamps will be awarded the winners, $10 in stamps for the first prize, $5 for the second, $3 for the third and $2 for the fourth. The campaign will close Oct. 15.

Membership in the club is free, and there is no charge for the classes or entertainments. It is nonsectarian, and any girl in the city who wishes to become a member is urged to apply at the War Camp Community Service Headquarters, 108 North Fourth street, to Miss Emily Kneubuhl, director of the girls' division. There will be educational classes, dramatic clubs, dances, public service leagues and out-door sports on the fall and winter program with a big mid-winter sports carnival.

DON'T WEAR BUST PADS

—unless you wish to permanently reduce the size of your busts. Hot, sweaty pads or ruffles break down the delicate tissues and should never be worn. STOP wearing them if you value your figure.

USE THE NATIONAL

to enlarge your busts to their natural size and beauty. EXPANDS BUST INSTANTLY, bringing quick results where all other methods have failed. No matter what the cause of retarded development, THE NATIONAL is the only rational method that will ever restore the size and beauty of the busts.

DEVELOPS "ONE" TO "FIVE" INCHES

This remarkable woman's invention WILL EXPAND ANY BUST to its fullest proportions in a remarkably short time. Even five minutes' use will surprise and delight you. Use the NATIONAL a few minutes daily until your bust measurement is what you desire. That's all. If you want greater development any time, use it a little longer. It expands the bust as long as used, and results are natural and permanent.

REPORTS AFTER USING THE NATIONAL

Five Inches— "Your National in my case has not merely developed a bust that disappeared from some sort of illness, but has actually developed a bust which has never been larger than a child's. Five inches' development seems almost untrue in such a short time, but nevertheless it is absolutely true in my case, which the photo shall prove to you."—Mrs. Allendorf.

Three Inches— "In the three weeks' use of the National I have increased THREE INCHES in size and am delighted."—Mrs. T. A.

Three and One-Half Inches— Dr. Swarthout says: "The first three weeks bust developed 3½ inches."

No Pads and Ruffles Now— "No amount of money could buy my National. I have laid aside the pads and ruffles I have worn ever since I can remember."—Mrs. D. R.

The National is the special developer Dr. C. S. Carr formerly recommended in the "Physical Culture Magazine" as the only safe, reliable method known for enlarging the bust in a natural way. Of this method, Dr. Carr said: "Indeed, it will bring about a development of the busts quite astonishing."

WRITE FOR VALUABLE FREE BOOK

If you want a beautiful, plump, full bust of real firm flesh and blood write us at once. DON'T WAIT! OUR VALUABLE BOOK, containing full information by Dr. Carr, telling how the busts of any woman, whether married or unmarried, may be quickly enlarged to their normal size and beauty, will be sent FREE to everyone in need of development. If you wish the book sent sealed, in first-class mail, enclose 6c postage. NOW—TODAY—write for this free book that will give you more joy and happiness than any single act you can do.

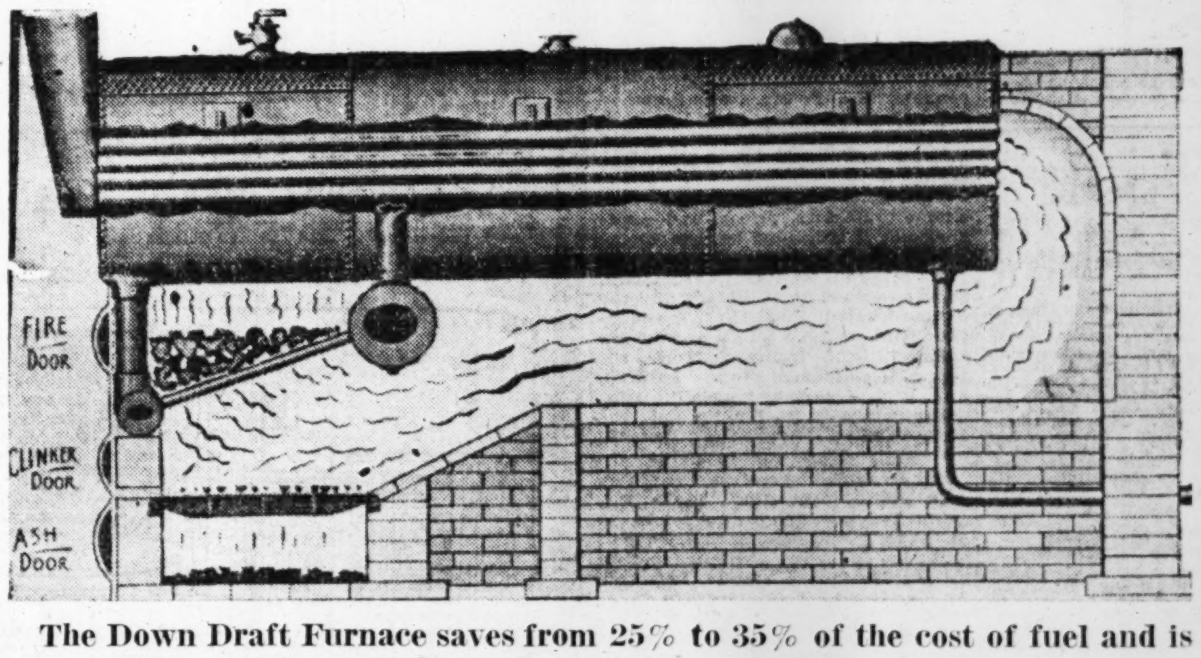
Uncle Sam Says "Save Fuel"

More Than 80,000,000 Tons of Our Coal Going to Europe This Year!

Nooter Boilers Solve the Wasteful Smoke Problem

We are manufacturers of the Famous Down Draft Smokeless Boiler which eliminates practically all smoke when properly operated. Thousands and thousands of dollars are lost annually in St. Louis due to imperfect combustion of fuel, thus producing the dense clouds of thick, black smoke frequently seen and causing an additional loss due to damage of property from soot.



The Down Draft Furnace saves from 25% to 35% of the cost of fuel and is especially adapted to burn the ordinary Illinois and Missouri soft coals found in the open markets of St. Louis.

Ideal for apartment houses in high-class residence districts, breweries and factories of all kinds. We can keep you free from prosecutions for production of smoke. Let us solve your smoke problems for you. Consult us in regard to them. Estimates and specifications cheerfully given.

100,000 horse power now in use.

To Quickly Remove Ugly Hairs From Face

(Beauty Notes)

Beauty-destroying hairs are soon banished from the skin with the aid of a delatone paste, made by mixing some water with a little plain powdered delatone. This is spread upon the hairy surface for 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed to remove the remaining delatone. This simple treatment banishes every trace of hair and leaves the skin without a blemish. Caution should be used to be certain that it is delatone you buy.—ADV.

DISABLED SOLDIERS ARE BEING EDUCATED

Those Admitted to Missouri University Vocational Courses Receive $80 a Month.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo.—Former United States soldiers, sailors and marines, who were disabled in line of duty, have entered the University of Missouri to get an education at the Federal Government's expense. These men will receive from $80 to $150 as long as they satisfactorily accomplish the work prescribed.

The vocational work is divided into two classes, collegiate and noncollegiate. The first class is for those men who have had as much as a high school education. These men are taking preparatory work in journalism and medicine and entering directly in the College of Agriculture and the School of Engineering. For the noncollegiate class, composed of men who have not attended high school, a special two-year course in agriculture has been established. The curriculum calls for practical work on the university farm and runs throughout the year. This course is a combination of the two-year winter and regular four-year courses given by the College of Agriculture.

The University of Missouri has been approved for the training of these men, who are appointed by the Federal Board of Vocational Training, Rehabilitation Division, at St. Louis. Harry S. Jacks, formerly editor of the Columbia Herald-Statesman, is vocational adviser for this division. A. R. Gwinn, a graduate of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture, is in charge of the men taking vocational agriculture.

The appointments are made for one year. A student without dependents receives $80 a month, a $25-a-year allowance for books, and has all university fees and deposits paid by the Government. A married man with no children receives $125 a month; married with one child, $125 a month and a proportionate increase for each child until $150, the maximum, is reached. All must have received an honorable discharge from the service and their disability must have been incurred or aggravated while in service.

CZECHO-SLOVAKIA NOT LIKELY TO GO HUNGRY THIS WINTER

American Experts Say That With Careful Economy There Should Be No Real Suffering.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PRAGUE, Aug. 14.—By tightening the national belt a hole and careful conservation and organization of food supplies, Czecho-Slovakia can weather the winter safely, in the opinion of the American food experts, who have been surveying the country. In fact, Czecho-Slovakia, particularly Bohemia, is said to be a good deal better off than most of Eastern Europe. Her crops will run from 60 to 70 per cent of normal and of certain valuable commodities she admittedly has some for export in return for more needed supplies, such as raw materials, notably cotton.

She has appreciable quantities of oats, barley and hops that can be spared, as well as some sugar and coal, and these last two commodities are felt to be about the most precious in Europe. In return she wants wheat flour and cotton. Her spinning industry is at a standstill and experts claim that she needs approximately 100,000 bales of cotton to supply her needs in textiles.

The oversupply of beet sugar is Czecho-Slovakia's big and valuable asset and gives her a strategic position in Europe. The general situation here is reassuring to the American experts, and while there will be deprivation, they believe that with a well-organized control of foods and close economy there will be no real suffering this winter.

FORMER BULL FIGHTER GOVERNOR

GUADALAJARA, Spain, Aug. 18.—"From the bull ring to the political arena" would make a fitting title to the history of Luis Mazzantini, former toreador, who has just been appointed Governor of this province by King Alphonso XIII.

When Mazzantini retired from the ring in 1903 he was one of the most famous toreadors in Spain. Born in Elgsibar in Northern Spain of a well-to-do family, the new Governor was sent to the University of Salamanca, where he obtained his degree of Doctor in Law. It was during his university days that after a wager with some student companions, he first faced the bull in the arena. He acquitted himself very creditably and the plaudits which he received from the multitude completely turned his head away from dusty law books and stuffy courtrooms. His earnings reached 6000 to 7000 pesetas for a performance. In 1897 he accounted for 168 bulls, for an income of 400,000 pesetas.

Since his retirement Mazzantini has been prominent in local politics. He is a conservative.

FORMER CZAR'S BROTHER SAFE

By the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. [illegible].—Former Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch, brother of former Emperor Nicholas, who was appointed Regent of Russia when the Romanoff Dynasty was overthrown but later was exiled by the Bolsheviki, has succeeded in escaping from the Bolsheviki, together with his secretary and a sailor, according to announcement made by M. Sossionkia, Michael's aid, in the Svenska Dagbladet.

Michael is said to have made his escape in a motor boat, cruising along the River Haini to Irkutsk, from which place he subsequently went abroad and since has remained incognito.

Memorial Park

The Reason and Inspiration

The return of our soldiers—the joyful homecoming—the inspiring reception—the deserved testimonials—the sorrow and grief and woe of those whose loved ones failed to return—the desire to put into concrete form the frequent suggestion of a fitting memorial to those who died in the service of their country.

The decision made to foster and erect a memorial monument—the next step was to find a proper setting—to finance its cost—and to arrange for its upkeep.

What better suggestion than a burial park—dedicated sacred to the memory of the dead—and so was developed Memorial Park.

The founders will erect an heroic monument in honor of America's soldier, sailor and marine dead.

Memorial Way—sweeping in majestic curves a distance of more than a mile throughout the length of Memorial Park—will be lined with memorial trees—one for each dead hero from St. Louis and its immediate vicinity, who died in the service of his country—to keep forever fresh his memory.

The roadways will be named after the hills and valleys, the cities and towns where American boys fought and died in foreign lands.

Suggestions and ideas to assist the founders in this purpose are earnestly solicited.

WOMAN A MINER 50 YEARS

WIGAN, England, Aug. 24.—Mrs. Bridget McHugh, the oldest "pit-brow" woman in the Pemberton coal field, has just died here at the age of 80 years. For more than half a century she had worked at the mines.

"Old Bridget," as Mrs. McHugh was familiarly called, was a hale and hearty, strongly built woman who could use a shovel in filling mine cars as well as any man and who was always looked upon as an expert pit-brow worker, few being her equal.

The shorter working day was unknown to her and sumer and winter, rain or shine, she was accustomed to leave home at 5 o'clock every morning, and was in her place at the coal bank before the whistle sounded at 6. Her day continued until 5 or 6 at night. Mrs. McHugh was a grandmother and two of her sons are employed in the colliery where she worked so long.

Today's Aid to Beauty

Hair is by far the most conspicuous thing about us and is probably the most easily damaged by bad or careless treatment. If we are very careful in hair washing, we will have virtually no hair troubles. An especially fine shampoo for this weather, one that brings out all the natural beauty of the hair; that dissolves and entirely removes all dandruff, excess oil and dirt; can easily be used at trifling expense by simply dissolving a teaspoonful of canthrox (which you can get at any druggist's) in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid—enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. This chemically dissolves all impurities and creates a soothing, cooling lather. Rinsing leaves the scalp spotlessly clean, soft and pliant, while the hair takes on the glossy richness of natural color, also fluffiness, which makes it seem much heavier than it is. After a canthrox shampoo, arranging the hair is a pleasure.—ADV.

How Much Tobacco Will My Heart Stand

A Question Vital to Every Man Who Smokes or Chews

IT MAY COST A PRECIOUS LIFE TO FIND OUT BY EXPERIMENT.

The heart of every user of tobacco bears a double burden. It does its allotted task and then fights nicotine for supremacy. As long as the heart wins he lives; when it loses he dies, but before the final victory of nicotine you pass through many stages of decline and decay and suffer many pangs. Hearts are like human beings—some are stronger than others, therefore some hearts will stand more tobacco than others, but there is a limit to what any heart can stand. The man who puts this additional strain on his heart a dozen times a day by smoking cigarettes, a pipe or cigars—or chewing tobacco—is taking a madman's chance with health and life to lose and nothing to win but the chance that he may not lose them. He is indulging in a costly habit at the expense of precious health. Ask any doctor anywhere and he will tell you that using tobacco is injurious and that it is far better to quit the habit than to experiment to find how much tobacco your heart will stand without serious results.

But the thought of quitting is unpleasant to most men—even to those who know that tobacco injures them—and to really quit takes more will power than they have and causes more suffering than they can voluntarily endure. To quit the habit make it easy for yourself by getting Nicotol tablets and taking them as directed. The habit really quits you and its departure is a pleasure equal to its indulgence.

If you want to know how much easier it is to quit the habit with Nicotol than without it, go twenty-four hours without tobacco and note what an effort it costs you, then begin using it as usual and taking Nicotol tablets. At the end of a week discontinue smoking or chewing for a day and it is probable you will have no desire to resume. At least your desire will be greatly diminished, and another week or two should make it not only possible, but a pleasure, to quit.

NOTE: Dr. Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital, under whose advice Nicotol has often been used, said when this statement was shown to him: "I have known Nicotol to conquer the tobacco habit in less than ten days' time and I can therefore recommend it highly." When the doctor's statement was shown to one of our leading druggists he said: "Nicotol is truly a wonderful remedy for the tobacco habit, way ahead of anything we have ever sold before. We are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the money to every dissatisfied customer, and we would not permit the use of our name unless the remedy possessed unusual merit." Nicotol is sold in this city under an iron-clad money-back guarantee by all up-to-date druggists, including the Judge & Dolph, the Wolff-Wilson and the Enderle Stores.—ADV.

NATIONAL KITCHENS ADVOCATED AS PREVENTIVE OF DISTRESS

Secretary in British Food Ministry Says Consumer Would Not Be Penalized by Plan.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, England, Sept. 12.—National restaurants and kitchens are recommended by C. A. McCurdy, parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Food, for the prevention of distress among the poor of Great Britain during the coming winter. Mr. McCurdy derides the idea that the governmental measures affecting the food situation penalize the consumers.

"Look at our restaurant in New Bridge street," he said. "You can get a good meal there for 2 shillings (48 cents), including soup, fish, meat, two vegetables and dessert, all well cooked and decently served. What private restaurant comes anywhere near this? And our place is not only self-sustaining, but money making. We clear at least £100 ($500) a week, though profits were not all we aimed at. Our aim was merely to show other caterers how to provide cheap food.

"We have no advantage whatever over our competitors. We buy in the open market like the rest. I do not believe that the Englishwoman is inferior to her continental sister in cooking or anything else. British cooking is the best in the world when meat is plentiful and coal cheap, but perhaps is not so readily adaptable to high prices and short supplies common as that of France. It is certain that national kitchens would be of great assistance to many a hard-worked housewife who finds it difficult to satisfy her children's appetites with food costing so much.

"The policy of the Ministry of Food is not to establish restaurants and kitchens itself, but to afford the local authorities and large employers of labor every possible advice and assistance in doing so. Any scheme we approve we will finance with a 10-year loan free of interest and repayable in 10 annual installments."

COURSE IN PRACTICAL SOCIAL SERVICE WORK TO START SEPT 23

Series of Thursday Lectures Is Announced by Missouri School of Social Economy.

"Practical Social Service for Every Day Use" will be the subject of a series of weekly lectures at the Missouri School of Social Economy, 2221 Locust street, by Dr. George B. Mangold, the director, during the term which opens Sept. 23. It will be in addition to the usual courses. It is planned for men and women who do not wish to take up social service work as a profession, but are interested in practical methods and plans now in force in civic, philanthropic and reconstruction work.

Some of the subjects will be "The High Cost of Living and Some Preventives," "Social Service in Your Own Home," "Child Welfare," "After Effects of the War on Daily Livings," "Social Service and Democracy." Lectures will be given from 4 p. m. to 5:30 p. m. every Thursday afternoon.

Courses on Americanization, community service, labor problems, social reconstruction, child welfare, crime and its treatment, settlement work, methods of treatment for broken or depressed families, children's insitutions, factory welfare, public welfare and public recreation are included in the regular school term. A handbook will be sent to all who telephone Bomont 2090.

ALLEN Y. M. C. A. SCHOOL DEAN

Will Have Charge of Business Instruction in Night Courses.

W. A. Allen, of the Treasury Department, Income Tax Division, formerly of Washington, D. C., has been appointed dean of the business courses of the Y. M. C. A. night schools, Grand and Franklin avenues. Joseph Licklider of the D'Arcy Advertising Co. has been appointed to take charge of the classes in advertising and John Raeburn Green, until recently of the State Department at Washintgon, will have charge of the classes in foreign trade. Antonio Kij will have charge of the course in Portuguese.

Alterations providing for a total enrollment of 2500 students have been completed. The faculty in accountancy and business administration of last year has been retained. The St. Louis Association of Retail Credit Men, the St. Louis Ad Club, the sales bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, and the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association are co-operating with the Y. M. C. A. schools in putting on courses in their respective lines.

LECTURES ON "CITIZENSHIP"

Catholic Women's League to Open Course at New Cathedral Hall.

A course of nonpartisan lectures on "Citizenship," the same as that given by the Equal Suffrage League of St. Louis in its ward schools, will be held under the direction of the Catholic Women's League, in the New Cathedral Hall beginning Sept. 22, and continuing for five successive Monday nights.

The program for the opening night will consist of two talks, "Legislative procedure," by Mrs. George Gellhorn, and "Progress of the Woman Movement," by Mrs. Frederic Blaine Clark, executive secretary of the Equal Suffrage League of St. Louis. The league of nations will be discussed during the course.

Mrs. Volney C. Turner, Mrs. Malcolm MacDonald and Mrs. Charles F. Stanley will assist on the opening night. Mrs. Ashley D. Scott, Mrs. Martin Shaughnessy and Miss Grace Taylor, who will act as hostesses at the meetings, assisted by other members of the league.

"Gets-It" Peels Off Corns Painlessly

Off They Come Like Banana Skin. 2 or 3 Drops, That's All.

There's a murderous, painful way to get rid of corns, and then there is the peaceful, glorious "peel-it-off" "Gets-It" way. After you have tried "Gets-It" you will say "never again" to all other methods. This is because "Gets-It" is the only corn-remover on earth that makes corns peel off just like a banana skin. Two or three drops will do the work, without fussing or trouble. You apply it in 2 or 3 seconds. It dries immediately. "Gets-It" does the rest, without bandages, plasters, blood-bringing knives or razors. Get rid of that corn-pain at once, so that you can work and play without corn torture. Be sure to use "Gets-It." It never fails.

Sold in St. Louis and recommended as the world's best corn remedy by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Enderle Drug Co., Pauley Drug Co., Keiffer Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Drug Co. and Winkelmann Chem. & Drug Corp.—ADV.

ALKALI IN SHAMPOOS BAD FOR WASHING HAIR

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff. —ADV.

Cuticura Is What You Need For Your Hair and Scalp

Dandruff kills the hair. Cuticura kills dandruff. Try this treatment. Before retiring rub Cuticura Ointment into partings all over the scalp. Next morning shampoo with Cuticura Soap and hot water. Rinse with tepid water. Dandruff usually disappears, hair stops falling and becomes thick, live and healthy.

Be sure to test the fascinating fragrance of Cuticura Talcum on your skin. Soap, Ointment and Talcum 25c. each everywhere.

CUT THIS OUT

Old English Recipe for Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises.

If you know of some one who is troubled with Catarrhal Deafness, head noises or ordinary catarrh, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. In England scientists for a long time past have recognized that catarrh is a constitutional disease and necessarily requires constitutional treatment.

Sprays, inhalers and nose douches are liable to irritate the delicate air passages and force the disease into the middle ear, which frequently means total deafness, or else the disease may be driven down the air passages towards the lungs, which is equally as dangerous. The following formula, which is used extensively in the damp English climate, is a constitutional treatment, and should prove especially efficacious to sufferers here who live under more favorable climate conditions:

Secure from your druggist 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength). Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. This will often bring quick relief from distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy and hearing improve as the inflammation in the eustachian tubes is reduced. Parmint used in this way acts directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system and has a tonic action that helps to obtain the desired results. The preparation is easy to make, costs little and is pleasant to take. Every person who has catarrh or head noises or is hard of hearing should give this treatment a trial.—ADV.

Anyone Now Can Have Pretty Curls and Waves

Here's a hair curling secret that is decidedly "worth while." At bedtime apply a little liquid silmerine with a clean toothbrush, drawing this down the hair from root to tip. In the morning when you look in your mirror you will be astonished and delighted to find your hair has dried in as beautiful curls as you've ever worn. The waviness will look so natural no one will guess it was artificially acquired.

You can obtain liquid silmerine at any drug store and a few ounces will last a long time. It is neither sticky nor greasy and is pleasant to use. It is doubly useful because of also serving as a beneficial dressing, keeping the hair soft, silky and lustrous. After one trial you will never go back to the barbarous curling iron.—Adv.

3 ILLINOIS G. O. P. HAVE EAR TO SENATE PHONE

McKinley, Shurtleff, and Deneen All but Open Candidates for 1920.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—Three Illinois Republicans are all but announced candidates for the United States senatorship of 1920. There may be others on the way, but the State fair round-up of party leaders produced the following trio, who are to all intents and purposes now in the running:

Congressman William B. McKinley of Champaign.

Former Gov. Charles S. Deneen of Chicago.

Former Speaker Edward D. Shurtleff of Marengo.

Of these three Congressman McKinley comes the closest to being a declared candidate. His campaign organization has been working busily and his Chicago headquarters are soon to be opened. Representative Shurtleff has made up his mind to go and his legislative friends are now busily working for him in the down-state counties.

Deneen Yet Noncommittal.

Deneen is noncommittal, but there is every surface indication, politically, that his senatorial announcement will be made in due time.

All three of these men have been in Springfield this week, and there have been many quiet conferences, but not a single definite statement came from any camp. The disposition of each of the three seemed to be to hold back from anything precipitate.

The absent element has been the city hall crowd from Chicago. Mayor Thompson, who still is Republican national committeeman from Illinois, was not here, and there was no definite word that indicated what the city hall will do on the senatorship. Some of the leaders seemed to think that the hall will support either Congressman Madden or Congresman William E. Mason.

The entrance of Mr. Shurleff as a candidate, which seems to be assured, tends to remove Congressman Copley of the Aurora-Joliet district from the running, inasmuch as Mr. Shurtleff and Mr. Copley are from the same district, and the presumption is strong that the two will not become senatorial rivals. One man who ought to know made the positive statement that Col. Copley has definitely determined not to be a candidate. The Shurtleff condidacy also tends to indicate that Col. B. M. Chiperfield of Canton is not to be a sensational starter. The inside gossip all along has been that Col. Chiperfield will not run if Mr. Shurtleff intends to go.

Waits on Lowden's Race

The hesitation and reticence of the senatorial field to start something seems to have been instigated largely by the uncertainty that prevails over the governorship, and that is due entirely to the brakes that have been applied to Gov. Lowden's presidential candidacy by the Illinois lieutenants of the executive.

National political conditions have been such, it is understood, as to cause the wise friends of all presidential possibilities to hold off for the present in opening a prenational convention campaign and the determination was reached some time ago that no effort would be made during State fair week to inaugurate a hurrah boom for Gov. Lowden here in Illinois.

Had the latter been the program undoubtedly a very large field of candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor would have been found ready to get into the going as soon as it became a certainty that Gov. Lowden himself would not be a candidate for renomination.

The general impression among the politicians was that there will be nothing formidable attempted in any quarter until after the primaries on Sept. 10, when delegates for the constitutional convention will be nominated.

PAINTERS ON SCHOOL ROOF FIND CARVED DATES OF OLD

Men Now Immersed in Business Affairs Cut Them in Slate 45 Years Ago.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MEXICO, Mo.—Painters on the North Central school building this week discovered many interesting names and dates carved in the State shingles on the roof and they recall to the mind of the grown men of Mexico, now immersed in their business, the days of their youth. Men who have since died were among those carved there during their grade school days.

One thing remarkably consistent about the dates was the name of the month. Almost all were either in September when school opened or in May or June when it closed. This indicates that the adventurous youth had not dared to go on the high roof of the school building until he was without the jurisdiction of the teachers or early in the school year when the rules were not so rigidly enforced.

Some names on the slate which had been carved perhaps earlier than some of those that could be deciphered had been worn out by the rain and sleet until only an outline of fragments of the whole could be seen.

Of those decipherable was the name of William Garrett, carved in 1874, which was the oldest. The building was erected in 1873. James Gass, 1878, was the next oldest.

How to Instantly Have a Beautiful White Skin

A Free Prescription Does This for You. You Can Prepare It at Your Home.

New York: It is my own discovery and it takes just one application to get such marvelous results, says Mae Edna Wilder, when her friends ask her about her wonderful white skin and the improved appearance of her hands and arms. You can do the same thing if you follow my advice, she says. I feel it is my duty to tell every girl or woman what this remarkable prescription did for me. Just think of it. All this change in a single application. I never tire of telling others just what brought about such remarkable results. Here is the identical prescription that whitened my skin and removed every defect from my face, neck, hands and arms. Until you try it you can form no idea of the marvelous change it will make. The prescription which you can prepare at your own home is as follows: Go to any grocery and get 10 cents worth of ordinary oatmeal, and from any drug store a bottle of derwillo. Prepare the oatmeal as directed in every package of derwillo and apply night and morning. The first application will astonish you. It makes the skin appear white, transparent, smooth and velvety. I especially recommend it for freckles, tan, sun spots, coarse pores, dark, sallow, rough skin, ruddiness, wrinkles, and in fact, every blemish the face, neck, hands and arms are heir to. If your neck is dark one application of this Derwillo-Oatmeal combination will make it look as white as a lily. It is absolutely harmless and will not produce or stimulate a growth of hair. No matter how rough and ungainly the hands and arms, or what abuses they have had through hard work and exposure to the sun and wind, this prescription will work a wonderful transformation in 12 hours at the most. Thousands who have used it have had the same results as I have had.

NOTE—To get the best effect be sure to follow the complete directions contained in every package of Derwillo. You have only to get derwillo and oatmeal. You need nothing else and it is so simple that anyone can use it, and so inexpensive that any girl or woman can afford it. Druggists and department stores guarantee that there will be a noticeable improvement after first application or they will refund the money. It is sold in this city at all toilet counters under a money-refund guarantee by all department stores and druggists, including Wolff-Wilson, Judge & Dolph, Johnson Bros. and the Enderle Drug Co.—ADV.

Kidney Remedy for 40 Years A Pronounced Success

When kidney diseases have been successfully treated for a period of more than forty years, it is reasonable to assume that the remedy therefore must possess unusual merit. Such is the remarkable record of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy. Without its ability to give relief and benefit its users so that they would continue its use, it could not have existed 40 months, much less 40 years, of its enviable record. Many letters have come to us to prove that it has been a household remedy for years and years. Here is what one grateful woman has recently written:

"I wish to say that your remedies have been used in our family for fifteen years. We are never without a bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy in our home, and it has saved many a doctor's bill. It is a wonderful medicine for all diseases of the kidneys and liver."—(Signed) Florence E. Schmidt, R. F. D., No. 1, Dunkirk, Ohio.

For the elimination of poisons due to impaired kidney action, Warner's Safe Remedy was famous for 25 years before this woman so judiciously began its effective use. There are thousands of people who realize that their general health depends upon their kidneys and have found Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy a reliable family medicine. Forty years ago it was named "Safe" because it is SAFE absolutely, equalizing the work of both the kidneys and liver. Satisfactory results are obtained in the most severe cases, and it is sold by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., and all leading druggists. A sample sent on receipt of ten cents. Warner's Safe Remedies Co., Dept. 245, Rochester, N. Y.—ADV.

Chemist Wins Lasting Gratitude

"I tried several doctors and all kinds of medicine, and had about given up all hope of getting better. I did not think it possible that any medicine could be so wonderful in its effect as Mayr's Wonderful Remedy has proven in my case. You sure have won my lasting gratitude. I could not work at all and had constant pain in my stomach before taking your medicine." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Judge & Dolph's 3 Stores, Enderle Drug Co.'s 5 Stores, Cloughly-Koppenbrink, Cloughly Bros.' 2 Stores, Cloughly-Brown, Pauley Drug Co.'s 4 Stores, H. J. CAPT. M'DONALD TELLS OF FIGHTING IN RUSSIA

Wounded 34 Times, He Was on Several Occasions Near Death at Hands of Bolshevists.

Capt. Alexander C. McDonald, who served in France with G Company, 138th (St. Louis) Infantry, and who has returned to his home, 4863A Natural Bridge road, after service with the American army in Northern Russia, bears 34 scars, having suffered 19 bayonet wounds, two bullet wounds and 13 injuries from shells and hand grenades. He has the French Croix de Guerre for Russian service.

To a Post-Dispatch reporter Capt. McDonald described the hardships of army life in Russia, details of a rear-guard action he fought on snow shoes against Bolshevists, and the plight of his men when entrapped on the Dvina River by a Bolshevist gunboat.

"With several other officers, I was sent to Russia last spring, mainly to protect peaceful people up there from the depredations of Bolshevists, and also to help feed the starving population," said the Captain.

"Arriving at Archangel, I was put in command of A Company, 339th Infantry and ordered to Ustmorg, about 295 miles northwest. We had to march all the way in snow shoes.

British Emergency Rations.

Our only food was the British emergency ration, corned beef, hardtack and lime juice. We remained only a short time in the Ustmorg section, seeing practically nothing of the Bolshevists, who never did any attacking.

"In a short time, we received a telephone message to return to Archangel to prepare to sail for the States. Our instructions were to make the Dvina River and then to float to Archangel on barges.

"The return trip to the Dvina was even worse than the trip up. Our food had by this time almost given out and our feet were in a terrible condition from so much marching in snow-shoes.

"I appointed myself and some other officers the rear guard of the company and made myself the 'point,' that is, the man fartherest to the rear.

"A party of Bolshevists pursued us all the way. One day, when still about 45 miles from the Dvina, I decided to dispense with my snowshoes, which were cutting my feet terribly. I laid my rifle down and knelt to remove them. Just then the advance guard of the Bolshevists came up. I was almost snow blind and did not observe them till they were very close. Before I could rise, one of them kicked me violently in the right side, breaking two of my ribs. Then while I was lying in the snow, all five of them jumped upon me, trampling me and jabbing me with their bayonets. My only defense consisted in kicking out with my snowshoes. Just when I had given up hope for myself, the remainder of my rearguard appeared and in a short time killed the five Bolshevists."

The company finally reached the Dvina and succeeded in getting aboard a barge, after the British gunboats had chased the Bolshevik fleet from the vicinity.

"We were floating down the river behind a British tug when a Bolshevist gunboat was sighted bearing down on us at full speed," continued Capt. McDonald. "The tug cut loose and fled down the river. It looked for a moment as if it was all up with us. Suddenly, however, a British monitor, farther down the river, started to our rescue.

"A battle between the monitor and gunboat began, with our barge in between. To make the situation worse, the barge went aground on a sand bar. I saw it was imperative to get my men off the barge as quickly as possible. With another officer and two privates I stepped over the side and started walking to shore to see if the stream was shallow enough for the company to ford. The water was icy cold. We hardly had taken a step before we stepped into a hole about 12 feet deep. With a private I succeeded in getting back to the barge, but the other officer and private were drowned.

British Win Fight.

"After a long fight the British vessel was the victor. Several tugs came from Archangel and endeavored to pull the barge off the bar, but the attempt was unsuccessful, and we proceeded to Archangel on the tugs."

After arriving at Archangel, where he received the first real medical aid for his injuries, Capt. McDonald sailed to New York.

McDonald is 26 years old, and for several years was in the Missouri National Guard. He received a bullet wound in the knee when fighting with the 138th in the Argonne. After the armistice he was attached to the American embassy in London, where he received orders to proceed to Archangel. He attended the University of Missouri for three years, where he studied mechanical engineering.

GIRL LION TRAINER WITH CIRCUS

Al G. Barnes Wild Animal Show Will Be Here Thursday.

The Al G. Barnes Wild Animal Circus will exhibit in St. Louis four days, starting Thursday. A street parade will be given at 10:30 a. m. on the opening day and at the same hour Saturday.

One of the chief attractions of the show is Mlle Martha Florine, a French girl, trainer of African lions. She is less than 20 years old and started lion training with this circus at the age of 15.

This young woman goes alone into a cage of 30 African lions, which perform various tricks at her bidding, and she ends the act by placing her head in the jaws of the fiercest beast of the group.

THREE AGENCIES HERE SUPPLY JOBS FOR FEES

The Post-Dispatch received several letters from former soldiers complaining that while they could not get satisfactory jobs through the Demobilization Bureau for Soldiers, Sailors and Marines, they had been offered the employment they were seeking by fee-charging employment agencies. The writers objected not only to a system by which they were forced to pay for jobs, but against what they termed exorbitant charges by the fee agencies.

Martin J. Walsh, director in charge of the Demobilization Bureau, told the Post-Dispatch that he also had received complaints, and that he had taken the matter up with several employers in an effort to have more jobs referred to the bureau for the benefit of returned St. Louis fighters. He said that aplicants for jobs had informed him that fee-charging agencies were exacting large commissions from clients for helping them to get positions.

Aside from the Market street labor agencies which supply jobs for day laborers, there are three employment-finding bureaus in St. Louis which charge fees for their services. They are the Bulletin Abstract System Co., Railway Exchange Building; Business Service Co., Chemical Building, and Leigh Bros., Frisco Building. In July the three agencies placed 50 out of 1700 applicants in high grade office positions. The average job paid $100 a month and the fee exacted was $50, or one-half of the first month's salary.

In the same month the Demobilization Bureau received applications for work from 4626 returned soldiers and succeeded in placing 4048 registrants in jobs averaging $75 a month. The Demobilization Bureau has many letters from employers expressing appreciation of the character of help furnished through that bureau.

Fees Charged by Agencies.

R. C. Green, manager of the Bulletin Abstract System Co., told a Post-Dispatch reporter that his company charges 33 1-3 per cent of the first month's salary for jobs paying less than $75 a month; 40 per cent of the first month's salary for jobs paying $75 to $90, and 50 per cent of the first month's salary for jobs paying more than $90 a month. The company allows 10 per cent discount if the fee us is paid in full on acceptance of the position. Persons unable to pay the full fee at once are permitted to pay it in three monthly installments.

The two other companies charge approximately one-third of the first month's salary for jobs paying less than $75 a month, one-half the first month's salary for jobs paying from $75 to $100 a month, 5 per cent of the first year's salary on jobs paying from $1200 to $1800 a year, 6 per cent of the first year's salary on jobs paying from $1800 to $3000 a year, and 7 per cent of the first year's salary on positions paying more than $3000 a year.

Recently, Green said, the fee-charging agencies had placed their services at the disposal of returned soldiers free of charge. Director Walsh of the Demobilization Bureau said that offer was made last week after several letters of complaint by former soldiers had been published in the People's Column of the Post-Dispatch.

"Some years ago a large employment institution was organized in New York City," said Green, "from a fund of $100,000 contributed by several philanthropists. It was to be run strictly on a philanthropic basis. It was not a success, so it was changed to a fee-charging agency and is now one of the most successful and largest organizations of its kind in the United States.

"We perform a good service," said Green. "We are a clearing house between the man and woman seeking a position and the employer looking for a particular man or woman. We save both the applicant and the employer time, money and trouble. We have our expenses the same as other business enterprises and we must charge a reasonable fee for our services.

"The mere fact that we are operating on a fee-charging basis in competition with free agencies such as the Demobilization Bureau and typewriter agencies and business colleges should convince any fair-minded person that we are getting results. Employers use our service because we have earned their confidence."

Fees Not Returned.

In response to complaints that positions furnished by fee-charging agencies are not always permanent and that when a position is lost after the fee has been paid the fee or part of it is not refunded, Green said that was true, but that the agencies, in cases of that kind, obtained other positions for the applicants free of further charge. He referred to records of the company showing that as many as five and six positions had been obtained for a single applicant for the initial fee.

Town Has Citizen "Traffic Cops."

JACKSONVILLE, Ill. — Citizen "traffic cops" are doing the work of paid officers here. They have full power to make arrests, but their duties are said to be more educational than punitive. A Captain directs the work of each squad, of which there are four, one for each of the four wards of the city. Some of the city's most prominent residents are on duty.

An Interesting One-Day Outing Is Tour to Fort Chartres and Return

Aside From Historical Interest Much Beautiful Scenery Is Afforded the Motorist—Roads at Their Best at This Season.

Acting under orders of the French crown, Pierre Dugue de Boisbriant came up the Mississippi with a body of soldiers in 1718 for the purpose of establishing a fort to prevent the Spanish or English from gaining a foothold in the country claimed by France. A high, fertile spot in the American Bottoms, about 45 miles north of Kaskaskia and about 50 miles below the present site of St. Louis attracted the Frenchmen on account of its beauty and fertility, and because the river was narrow enough at this point to allow their cannon to prevent English explorers and soldiers or hostile Indians from going either up or down the river, and here they landed and erected Fort Chartres, which immediately became the seat of government for the vast territory known as Illinois.

The wonderful stories of fertile fields and rich mines in Illinois spread by the famous John Law, brought many of the old aristocracy of France to the New World, and Fort Chartres became the Versailles of America. Magnificent quarters and luxurious living were had by the officers and their families. The splendor of their balls and dinners and the cavalcades of officers and ladies in "velvets and jewels" which on state occasions went to Kaskaskia to attend church services dazzled the inhabitants of the frontier villages.

Stone Fort Built in 1750.

In 1750 Commandant Makarty was instructed to rebuild the fort and the wooden structure gave way to a stone fortification which was at that time the greatest fort in he Western Hemisphere and cost France upward of 1,000,000 francs. The outer walls and bastions covered an area of about four acres and enclosed two officers' quarters, two large barracks, a guard house, storehouse and a powder magazine, all constructed of stone. The outer walls and bastions were 16 to 18 feet high and the gateway which was of cut stone was considered by Pittman and other early travelers to be one of the finest works in stone architecture in the new world. The stone with which the buildings were constructed was quarried from the nearby bluffs and the ruins of the old lime kilns which furnished the lime used in the mortar are still to be seen along the hills about three miles north of Prairie du Rocher. The stone of which the gate was constructed is said to have been brought from France though there are no records that show this.

Although no battles were fought at the fort many expeditions of importance started from its gate and as "a bulwark against Spain and a barrier to England, a protector of the infant colony and of the church which planted it," it answered the purpose for which it was built.

Campaigned Against Indians.

Troops from Fort Chartres participated in many campaigns against hostile Indians of which the most important was that led by D'Artaguette, Count Vincennes and Chief Chicago against the Chickasaws in 1736. The failure of Bienville, Governor of Louisiana to join in this war with the soldiers from New Orleans, as he had planned, resulted in the slaughter of the brave D'Artaguette and all his followers.

Troops from Fort Chartres participated in Braddock's defeat and many other battles of the French and Indian wars.

Fort Chartres continued the seat of French Government for Illinois until 1765 when the English took charge of the territory ceded them by France in the Treaty of Paris and the old stronghold became the residence of the English Commander. It remained the seat of English Government until 1772 when the Mississippi River washed out a corner of one of the bastions of the fort and the English moved the garrison and supplies to the Jesuit College at Kaskaskia which they named Fort Gage in honor of the commander of the English forces in America.

Made a State Park.

The 1913 Illinois State Legislature acquired a 10-acre tract of ground on which was located the ruins of Fort Chartres and made it a State park. The last Legislature appropriated $12,500 to preserve the ruins and the work is now about completed, a force of men having been employed all summer in excavating and pointing up the walls and leveling them off to a height of about three feet, which gives a clear conception of how the fort appeared in the days of its prime. The foundations of the old stone buildings and the cellars and dungeons they contained have been repaired.

The old rock magazine which is reputed to be the oldest building standing intact in the area occupied by the Northwest Territory has been pointed up. Even the roof of this old building is of stone, being more than a foot thick and arched. At the time the Legislature purchased the tract for a State park, the old magazine was being used by a farmer as a place to house his hogs.

The two old wells which furnished water for the pioneers in 1720 are in perfect condition and their moss-covered walls look as though they might stand for another several centuries. One of them has had a new shelter built over it with full equipment, including pulley and buckets for visitors' use. The old gateway and moat are being rebuilt and a short section of wall on each side of the gateway will be built to the original height of 18 feet.

The original stones forming the base of the pillars of the old gateway are being used in constructing the new entrance. The bulk of the rock used in building up the walls and foundations of the buildings was gathered from about the ruins though some was furnished by the quarry of the Southern Illinois State Penitentiary.

Through the efforts of Edgar Martin and William J. Lindstrom of the Architectural Department, and Thomas G. Vennum of the Department of Public Works and Buildings of Illinois, the work of reconstructing this greatest existent relic of the French Empire in America is being done along the original lines as much as possible, their work being guided by historical data they have gathered.

The Mississippi River is now more than a mile distant from the old fort. When built it was situated on the river bank.

ROUTE TO FORT CHARTRES, ILL.

From Post-Dispatch Building go south to Pine street, east to Seventh street, south to Free Bridge. At eastern end of bridge turn sharp left on Tenth street, crossing under Free Bridge approach and paralleling railroad for short distance, crossing it shortly beyond. Road from here is macadam and in fair to good condition to Dupo. From Dupo to Columbia the road is in good condition, being hard-surfaced all the way, with a stretch of a mile and a half of concrete boulevard. From Columbia to Waterloo the road is fair most of the way, but good at stretches here and there. From Waterloo to Burkesville the road is good to fair. For a mile a short distance south of Waterloo the dirt road was being crowned by a grading outfit for a distance of about a mile, making travel slow. From Burkesville through Renault to Prairie du Rocher the roads were in good condition last Monday, though narrow at points and occasionally dusty. At Prairie du Rocher a large grain mill is passed on the right on entering town. At the next corner with a red brick store on the southwest corner turn right to go to Fort Chartres, which is about three miles due west.

To return on the road that follows along the bluff in the bottomland, turn left at foot of long grade north of Prairie du Rocher onto reverse fork which winds along base of bluffs over dirt road in good to fair condition all the way through Maeystown, Vallmeyer and Fountain. From Vallmeyer the important cross roads are marked to Fountain. From Fountain cross bridge over drainage canal and continue ahead, paralleling the bluffs on road that jogs to right and left for several miles, then turns right to the bluffs, following along the base of the bluffs to a point where it branches abruptly to the left with a road coming in from the right. At this point there is a small white frame house on a knoll on the right and a red frame barn on the left. Turn right here, striking macadam road shortly beyond. This road leads into the business section of Columbia. Turn left on Main street, following car track for short distance, and return through Dupo and Cahokia.

NEW MODELS

NEW VELIE "SIX"

The new model Velie "Six," in a five-passenger touring car, finished in blue, has arrived in St. Louis. It came fresh from the factory during the early part of last week and since its arrival has been used for demonstration purposes by the Velie Automobile Co.

One of the important improvements in the new Velie is a change in the motor, which is of Continental construction, and by means of an internally heated vaporizer which superheats the gas before it enters the cylinders permits of the use of low-grade fuel. A four-bearing crank shaft is now used, replacing the three-bearing crankshaft of last year's motor.

The body is straight-line type, blending into a high-beveled cowl with tapering hood and high radiator. Fenders are bevel bordered and the headlights are of octagonal shape. A four-bearing crankshaft is another feature of the new motor, replacing the three-bearing crankshaft of last year.

Improvements in the similar details include a larger gasoline tank with a capacity of 17 gallons, oil cups replace grease cups and splash guards front and rear protect the chassis from mud and water.

There are five body styles in the new Velie line, including five-passenger touring car, four-passenger sport car, four-door, six-passenger sedan, four-passenger coupe and two-passenger roadster.

New Oldsmobile.

A six-cylinder four passenger Oldsmobile coupe of the latest series was placed in the showroom of the De Luxe Automobile Company last week. It is finished in what is termed a midnight-blue with trimmings of white. There is a folding seat in front that folds into the dash. The interior is decorated in gray velour with all metal trimmings in silver finish. There is a dome light and two corner lights for night driving. A foot warmer heated by utilizing exhaust heat is part of the standard equipment. The heater is regulated from the driver's seat by a small lever that operates a damper in a pipe connected with the exhaust chamber.

Other models that are built on the Light Six Oldsmobile chassis are four passenger roadster, five passenger sedan, and five passenger touring car. The five passenger sedan is expected in St. Louis during the early part of October.

"AUBURN "SIX."

The first of the four passenger coupe models of the 1920 series of the Auburn Beauty "Six" was placed on display in the showroom of the Mound City Auto Company last week.

The new coupe, which is of blue-

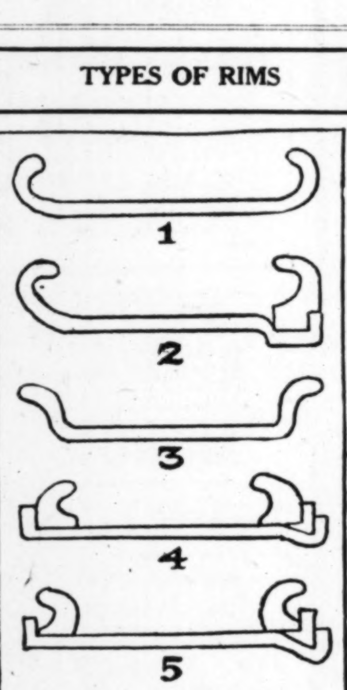
TYPES OF RIMS



A motorist in touring to St. Louis from the West the other day had a blow-out near a small town. The only garage in the little village dealing in tires was unable to supply him with a straight-side tire, which was the type the motorist had been using, although the garageman had the proper size in a clincher tire.

Not knowing that the wheels of his car were equipped with universal rims, the motorist, thinking he could use only the straight-wall casing, bumped along for 10 miles to the next town, a larger place, where he was able to purchase a tire with the straight sides. He told the tire dealer of his experience and then learned he could have saved himself a great deal of annoyance had he been familiar with the rim equipment.

Figures Nos. 4 and 5 show the construction of the universal rim. This has reversible rings, permitting either clincher or straight-wall types of tires being used. When having the rings as in Figure No. 4, the clincher tire may be used, whereas with the rings reversed as in figure No. 5, the rim will accommodate the straight-wall type of tire.

FLORIDA PASSES GOOD ROADS BILLS

All good roads measures introduced by the joint special committee were passed at the extra session of the Florida Legislature just concluded. This includes the measure abolishing the convict lease system, creating a road force, care and maintenance of road forces and a 2-mill tax to meet Federal aid.

CHANGES TO BE MADE IN LICENSE TAG FOR 1920

Missouri automobile license plates for 1920 are now being designed and will embody two important changes, it was stated last week by James J. O'Connor, Supervisor of the Automobile Division of the Department of Secretary of State.

The principal change will be the addition of a dash beginning with license plate 1000 to separate the last three figures from the thousand numerals so that license number 195436, for example, instead of having the numerals undivided as at present will appear in this manner, 195—436.

The police of St. Louis and Kansas City requested this change, saying it would facilitate in the reading of number on the license plates of speeding machines, whether joy-riding or attempting to leave the scene of an accident. The change in the method of numbering is also expected to simplify the identification of cars used by automobile thieves.

Another change will be made in license plates issued to automobile dealers, O'Connor said. During 1920 as was the custom prior to this year duplicate sets of plates issued dealers for their use will be marked alphabetically so that dealers may keep a record of their plates being used by customers.

The colors of the new plate will be announced later.

INSPECT OLD TRAILS ROAD FROM K. C. TO ST. LOUIS

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 12.—E. W. Stephens and Frank L. Martin, president and secretary of the Missouri Old Trails Association, left here yesterday for Kansas City, where they will be joined by State Highway Commissioners A. W. Graham and J. P. Malang and a delegation of Kansas City road boosters, who left Kansas City last night to make an inspection of the Old Trails route from Kansas City to St. Louis.

A delegation of good roads boosters from St. Louis will meet them here Friday morning and make the trip from Columbia to St. Louis, inspecting the route. Meetings will be held in every town on the route and at these meetings delegates will be chosen to the State convention which will meet here on Sept. 18.

The delegation will gather accurate figures as to the number of miles of road built, the number of districts which have voted bonds for the improvement of the route and the number of districts in which bonds have been issued.

MOVIES WILL AID HIGHWAY BUILDING

Motion pictures are to be used extensively by the Government through the visual instruction section of the Department of the Interior to further highways construction, highways safety and other matters of national interest. National automobile chamber of commerce has been requested to secure films from the manufacturers and to turn them over to the Department of the Interior for this work.

MOTOR VEHICLE LIGHTS

To comply with the law which requires the lighting of motor vehicle lights a half hour after sunset, motor cars should be lighted this week as follows:

Today	7:42 p. m.
Monday	7:40 p. m.
Tuesday	7:38 p. m.
Wednesday	7:37 p. m.
Thursday	7:35 p. m.
Friday	7:33 p. m.

BILLION DOLLARS IS TALKED OF FOR U. S. ROAD SYSTEM

Need for Good Roads Is Urgent in Parts Where Most Food Is Produced.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—A billion dollars is the sum now mentioned in a matter-of-fact way in connection with the building of a Federal highways system. Word reaches the national capital that Dr. S. M. Johnson's repeated reference to this large sum at the various stops in the transcontinental journey of the United States army motor transport corps invariably invoked the most emphatic sort of approval. This has been particularly the case in the extreme Western country, where the need of highways is vital and essential to early development. Dr. Johnson, who is a member of the executive committee of the A. A. A. good roads board, thus summarizes the national roads problem:

"The unpaved parts of the United States are held back in their development precisely as are the unpaved parts of a city; and the unpaved part is the part where the food is produced, while the paved parts, especially the cities, are suffering because the unpaved parts lag. To correct social cleavage and excessive costs, we must pave the roadbeds of the lagging regions, and we must do it now. The financial loss, due to operation of our rolling stock upon improper roadbeds is so great that it must not be permitted to continue. The greatness and urgency of the task makes quick action on a large scale an imperative necessity."

Following Dr. Johnson's talk at Ogden, the business organizations of that city wired the Utah Senators and Representatives urging that the amount in the Townsend bill for a Federal system be increased to a billion dollars.

Major Britton Takes Seat as Member of State Highway Board

Platte County Seeks Aid on Six-Mile Stretch of Road to Cost $56,000 Per Mile.

Maj. Roy F. Britton, recently appointed a member of the State Highway Board by Gov. Gardner, to succeed S. S. Pingree, who resigned, attended his first meeting in Jefferson City last week.

At this meeting delegations from seven counties were before the board seeking State or Federal aid. A delegation of 14 members from Stoddard County sought aid in the construction of a hard-surfaced road to Cape Girardeau and another through Scott County to a landing on the Mississippi River where a dock is under contemplation. A delegation was also present from Scott County. They expressed their views on the necessity of hard-surfaced roads in developing river navigation. A delegation from Platte County sought State aid on a six-mile stretch of hard road to be built north of Kansas City at a cost of $56,000 a mile.

Raymond S. Walsh, newly appointed secretary of the Good Roads Committee of the Automobile Club of St. Louis, accompanied Maj. Britton. He said meetings are held twice a month by the State Highway Board to receive delegations from the various counties seeking Federal and State aid in road construction projects.

St. Louis May Be Headquarters for Orange and White Way

A strong movement is on foot to bring to St. Louis the headquarters of the Burlington Way, which is the orange and white marked highway from Duluth, Minn., to the Gulf of Mexico. J. C. Reintges of Granite City, president, and H. C. Wilhite of Greenfield, Ill., secretary of the Burlington Way Association, were in St. Louis Friday en route to Jackson, Tenn., where the eighth annual convention of the Burlington Way Good Roads Association will be held, Sept. 16-17. A. E. Nissen, representative of the American Automobile Association and of the Associated Highways of America, was with them and is strongly in favor of St. Louis for headquarters, because of the central location as a half-way point of this city on the trail. Every pole on one side of the road from Duluth, Minn., to the Gulf of Mexico is now marked with the orange and white stripes. Another route leads from St. Louis to Chicago through Springfield, Ill.

Motor School Opening of Prime Importance to Transport Future

First of Four Great Army Vocational Schools at Camp Holabird, Md., Starts Instruction—To Make Science of Auto Mechanics.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—An event of prime importance in the development of motor transport was the opening on Tuesday of last week of the first of the four great vocational training schools to be established by the motor transport corps. This school is located at Camp Holabird, Baltimore, Md.

The opening of this school is regarded as an event of great significance because of the several features new to army schools and original in vocational training that differentiate this from all other schools in or out of the army. In the use of civilian instructors and the giving of the entire time of the enlisted students to school work alone, it marks a new attitude toward education and training on the part of the army.

Educationally, the establishment of this school is significant as exemplifying largely the new point of view, which holds that the army should be a great teaching force, while to the industries of the nation, and especially to the automotive industry, it brings the promise of a steady supply of men trained systematically and thoroughly in the fundamental trades and fitted to do the highest type of machine and mechanical work.

Strong Staff Secured.

A strong staff of instructors, made of civlian and office experts, most of them graduates of well-known technical schools, has been secured, chief among these being Maj. A. A. Case, formerly professor of applied science at Ohio State University, and Prof. Dean A. Fales, late in charge of the gas engine department of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. An official announcement explaining the scheme of education says:

"Under the plan as formulated for these schools, the 400 men composing the entering class will be put through a preliminary course of four weeks, during which they will be watched closely, given the psychological test and the trade test and receive instructions in the fundamentals of military life. At the completion of this course each man will be classified, and upon that classification will depend his future work in the school.

"Upon the completion of the preliminary course the student will enter upon the real serious business of the school.

Four Courses Given.

"This has been blocked out in four courses, covering all branches of automotive work, from elementary to highest. Each man's progress and ultimate goal will be determined by his own ability, but the system aims at assuring each man just as much instruction as it is profitable for him to receive.

"The four courses are known as: First, school of chauffeurs; second, school of auto-mechanics; third, school of inspector and foreman; fourth, school of automotive engineer. The first course is designed to produce chauffeurs, who will know how to safeguard a vehicle by proper inspections and to make the repairs and adjustments that a driver should make. They will be drilled on the rules of the road and driving in convoy formation and will be fitted to become drivers of fine private cars or truckmasters for commercial concerns using large numbers of trucks.

"The auto mechanics' course is made up of 10 parallel courses of instruction of 16 weeks each. Each of these is founded upon some fundamental trade and is intended to prepare a man to enter a given line of work in commercial life.

Mechanic Is Handy Man.

The courses are for machinists, auto mechanics, ignition and carburetion specialists, battery repairers, welders, tire repair and wheelwrights, blacksmiths and springmakers, sheet metal and radiator workers, wood workers, spare parts men and salvage experts.

"The automobile mechanic of today is usually an ingenious 'handy man,' who has grown up in a small jobbing shop without receiving any fundamental training. The aim of these courses is to give that fundamental training and no man will be considered an expert or 'all around' man who has not had at least two of the first three of the courses listed. In this manner expert auto mechanics will be produced who, at once re-entering civil life, will command the high-wages now being paid to men of the greatest skill.

"The course for foremen and inspectors will be for those men who stand head and shoulders above the others in the work of the preceding courses and who in addition have that quality of human nature which enables them to control the work of others.

Work Will Alternate.

"The school work will alternate with periods of production work in the shops, service parks units or with operating units in the field. This production work will be under production conditions as in any well-regulated factory or truck operating concern, with the difference that the men will be supervised and graded with reference to their fitness to take further school work. Instruction will be given by lecture and demonstration in buildings equipped especially for the school work and set apart from the shops. These will ultimately have a capacity of 1500 students each year.

"The production periods will be spent in the shops, which are huge cement, steel and glass structures covering about five acres and admittedly the best of their kind in existence. The machinery and tool equipment is of the finest obtainable. No educational or manufacturing institution in the world can possibly compete with the motor transport corps in point of plant and equipment in the teaching of automotive mechanics."

ARRANGING FOR ENTRY IN ST. LOUIS BALLOON RACE

J. H. Galloway of the aeronautical department of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. is in St. Louis making preliminary arrangements for the entry of a Goodyear balloon in the balloon races being planned here for Oct. 1.

Galloway will also represent the aeronautical department in the sale of balloon supplies.

Fred Greisinger, manager of the St. Louis branch, said Ralph Upson, head of the Goodyear aeronautical department, would pilot the Goodyear entry.

ACCIDENT RATES FOR AIR JOURNEYS QUOTED BY LLOYDS

As reported from London, air accident rates are now quoted by Lloyds. For a $2.50 premium $5000 can be carried payable on death or loss of two limbs or two eyes. For the London-Paris flight the established rate is 75 cents for each $500; England to Italy, $1.25; England to Bombay, $6.25.—Taylor Field-Montgomery Journal.

MISSOURI AUTO CLUB PLANS FALL MEETING

A meeting of the board of the Missouri Auto Club will be held Tuesday night at 2333 South Jefferson avenue, to arrange for the first fall meeting of the club, to be held Sept. 25. The meeting will probably be at the Riverview Club and will be for members and their ladies.

PRACTICAL PARAGRAPHS.

Magnetized Screwdriver.

A magnetized screwdriver is a great convenience for the man who works about his car. The magnetized tool will pick up screws, nuts, bolts or other metal objects that have dropped into inaccessible places. Again, in setting screws, especially small ones, the magnetized screwdriver may be used by simply holding the screw until it is set in place, and this may be done by one hand if necessary. To magnetize a screwdriver all that is necessary is to hold it close to the dynamo for a few minutes until it is magnetized.

Rod Rattles.

Brake rods or other rods beneath the car sometimes slap against each other or against other metal parts. To locate this trouble have one person drive the car while another sits on one of the forward fenders and listens for the noises. If the horn is gripped tightly and the rattles cease it is reasonable to blame the horn.

Driving on a Flat.

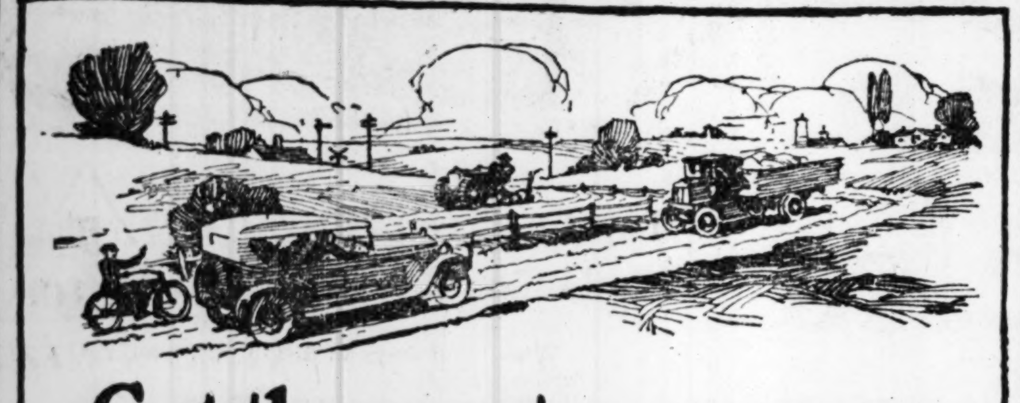
When it is absolutely necessary to run on a flat fire keep the tire in soft dirt if possible. If the trouble occurs on city streets run on the trolley track rather than on cobblestones.

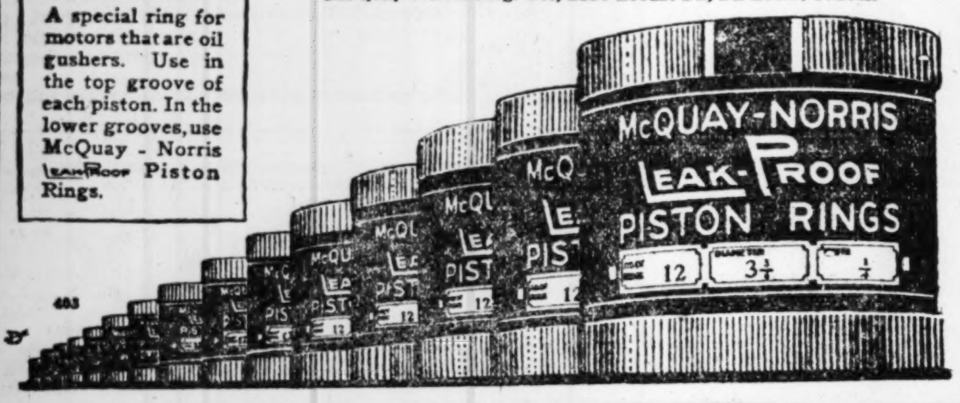
Driving Hints.

There is no need to tell the old driver that railroad tracks should be crossed diagonally to ease the jolt which is bad enough at best, but the new driver will save himself some shaking up by heeding this advice. Again, it will be found advantageous to drive up long steep grades in the country, where traffic is light, in a series of zig-zags, as teamsters do. This lightens the grade and helps the motor.

Soldering.

For any ordinary job wire solder is the easiest to handle and the most convenient. It can be placed right on the spot to be mended and it melts under comparatively slight heat. In soldering anything it should be rigorously cleaned before the actual work is begun. The temperature of the whole job should be raised to the desired point, after which it is easy to run a whole seam with a single movement of the iron. In making a repair the spot desired to be treated should be brought to the proper temperature for melting the solder. It is best to have the job so placed that the molten solder will not run to the other parts of the mechanism, but will lie right in the spot where it is needed.





Get the motor power you pay for

When you pay for gas you pay for power—but you don't get it if your piston rings leak.

If you haven't correctly designed piston rings in the cylinders of your motor, a great deal of the gas you buy will pass by them. This wastes power.

McQuay-Norris Leak-Proof Piston Rings with their exclusive two-piece angle-to-angle interlocking construction act equally all around the cylinder walls. That's the reason you should install them in your car. They increase power—save gas—and by keeping lubricating oil out of the combustion chambers they decrease carbon.

They are made in every size and over-size to fit every make and model of motor. Your repair man can get the proper sizes for you promptly from his jobber's complete stock.

GRANT TRUCKS

Why Shouldn't a Truck be Completely Equipped Electrically?

Automobile Topics remarks on the large numbers of hand lanterns that decorate the front end of motor trucks, shedding a dim but far from religious light—and comments intelligently on the absolute danger of such faulty equipment. And then it sagely remarks "Why shouldn't motor trucks be equipped with electric lights? They would more than save their cost by helping the driver avoid the bad places in the road. And this aside from getting better service from the trucks."

Safety Demands Complete Electrical Equipment

This is what we have said right along. Almost four years ago we took the platform for complete electric starting and lighting equipment in a very certain way by equipping every Grant truck with a first class electric lighting and starting system.

We have gone the limit in this direction. We believe a truck should be as completely equipped as a passenger car. Other makers will see it later.

Grant equipment includes, in addition, the necessary storage battery carried in a cushioned cradle, spot light in addition to head lights, driver's seat, windshield of the rain-vision ventilating type, Pierce governor, Boyce motometer, instrument board assembly including speedometer, oil gauge, ammeter, choker, front fenders, bumper, complete tool equipment, etc.

The accessory man has no use for Grant trucks.

But the man who drives and the man who pays for the truck knows that we are giving the biggest truck value in the world—more for the money in real truck value than anyone else.

Is this what you want? Is this what you believe in? Then come and see us.

Rocher, Ill., a member of the Board of Trustees of the Fort Chartres Association, incorporated in 1913 for the preservation of the old fort, said repair work will be completed during this month and the grounds put in readiness for dedicational exercises to be held during October.

Established in 1722.

Fort Chartres Park is situated about three miles west of Prairie du Rocher, which was settled in 1722 and is one of the oldest towns in Illinois. Nestled at the foot of the bluffs on a tableland from which it takes its name, the old town with a population of about 700 clings to the customs of its founders and its quaint old houses and the hospitality of its citizens makes it a pleasant place to visit.

Prairie du Rocher is situated on the Kaskaskia-Cahokia Trail, which is the oldest road in Illinois, and aside from the waterway was the only means of communication in the early days between the residents of Kaskaskia, Prairie du Rocher, Fort Chartres and Cahokia. Founded long before the Declaration of Independence was yet conceived this old road has felt the tramp of French and English armies; over it Pontiac, the Indian chieftain, led his warriors to the annual council at Fort Chartres; merchants from St Louis hauled their goods purchased at Kaskaskia; George Rogers Clark and his followers from Virginia marched over it. A short distance south of Dupo the trail leaves the bottom land at where was located in the later part of the eighteenth century a stockade called Grand Ruisseau and passes through Columbia, Waterloo, Burkesville and Rénault, traversing rolling farm lands dotted with frame dwellings and buildings that mirror the prosperous condition of the inhabitants.

As the road descends the bluffs several miles south of Renault, a wonderful view is to be had of the American Bottom, the Mississippi River, the bluffs along the Missouri side of the river and back of them in the distance the rolling foothills of the Ozarks.

For the rest of the way the trail has on the left limestone bluffs which in places are perpendicular to the level bottom land and rise more than several hundred feet high. At other points they reach their height by more gradual slopes and are covered with heavy growths of vegetation and forest trees. In other places they break into heavily wooded hollows which are filled during the spring and summer with countless varieties of wild flowers and an abundance of ferns. For natural beauty, variety of scenery and odd formations of rock and earth there is a plenty on this tour for the motorist who doesn't mind traveling on dirt roads which are at their best during this season of the year and dusty stretches.

Returning from Prairie duRocher a different course may be taken by turning to the left at the foot of the long grade where the road leaves the bottom land onto a reverse fork which follows along the bluffs through Maeystown, Valmeyer and Fountain to Columbia, Ill. This route in dry weather affords the motorist most beautiful scenery with excellent views of the high rock bluffs of limestone fringed with woods and vegetation to the right and views across broad expanses of cultivated lands as level almost as a table top with the outline of the river far in the distance to the left. The skyline to the left shows the outline of the foothills of the Ozarks which appear several hundred feet high opposite Prairie du Rocher and diminish gradually in height as one travels north.

Murdock Lake, a well-known fishing resort is located at Valmeyer The lake is about three miles long and is located just north of the town. By making arrangements in advance motorists may obtain meals there. For the motorist with a basket lunch there are many ideal locations where the car may be parked while the occupants fish and eat their lunch.

FENCE TO BE REPAIRED AT "DEAD MAN'S" CURVE

By resolution passed by the Motor Accessory Trade Association at its meeting Tuesday night, Secretary R. E. Lee was instructed to put in perfect repair the 100-foot safety fence at Dead Man's Curve, just north of Manchester avenue on the North and South road. This fence was partly demolished about a month ago when an automobile ran into it.

The fence was erected 10 years ago by association members who contributed about $150 for its erection and painting. This was the beginning almost of the safety-first propaganda in St. Louis. At least two fatal and many minor accidents had occurred before the fence was erected. Since that time there has never been a serious accident there. The fence is to be painted white and a sign to show that it was built by the Motor Accessory Trade Association will be painted on it. This sign will be paid for by H. A. Van Derslice of the Joseph Dixon Crucible Co.

BATTERY MEN TO MEET TOMORROW NIGHT

President H. E. Spoeneman of the St. Louis Storage Battery Trade Association announces that a meeting of that organization will be held at the American Annex Hotel Monday night, Sept. 15, following a dinner at 6:30 p. m. The invitation to the meeting is extended also to nonmembers of the association who are in the battery business. Membership signs are to be distributed to all who attend the meeting.

Protecting the Bench.

The motorist who does considerable bench work may be glad to know that it is possible to protect the bench from excessive wear by placing on it a pad consisting of cast iron disks, hollowed out at the center and filled with lead. This will act as a sort of anvil for a long time and when the lead gets too badly battered it may be removed.

A Post-War Maxwell Gets Many a Longing Look

Maxwell
More miles per gallon More miles on tires

PASSERS-BY, upon seeing a Post-War Maxwell parked at the curb, often stop and look it over.

They are struck by the "atmosphere" of the car, its clean, polished, refined look, its rare symmetry of line, and the evident sincerity in its construction.

Thousands who have the rare fortune of possessing a Post-War Maxwell have been gratified time and again by the silent approval of the man on the curb. But they have a double satisfaction; they know they drive not only a good looking car but a remarkably good acting car.

For there have been a score or more of rather revolutionary improvements in the Maxwell.

They can tell a volume about that easy castering effect in steering which a new type front axle gives, or that perfectly happy and secure feeling that is experienced when the emergency brake is applied (it's on the transmission shaft), or how the car hugs the road as a result of that masterly new rear axle.

When one stops to realize the great virtues of the 300,000 Maxwells that precede this, notes the new improvements, estimates their cost, and observes that the price is only $985 f. o. b. Detroit, he gets a pleasant surprise—but not one bit more than when he takes his first ride behind the wheel.

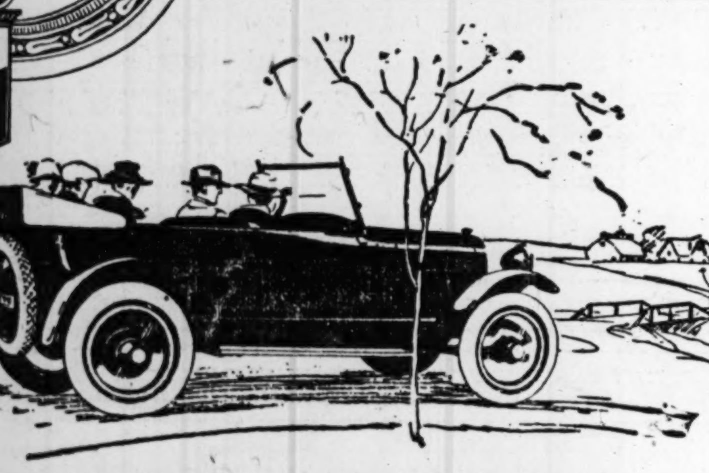
QUALITY NEWELL SAINT LOUIS



PAIGE

The Most Beautiful Car in America

Values

The measure of value in an automobile is the service and comfort it provides.

On that basis we offer the Paige five-passenger Linwood as the best value for all-around family use that the market affords.

It is a thoroughly "sensible" car from the standpoint of both first cost and operating expense.

Manager of St. Louis Packard Factory Branch Gives Views on Service

The important place occupied by improved service in the automotive transportation of today, the facilities necessary to the furnishing of it, the policy that must underlie it, and the system on which it should be standardized, were discussed by P. S. Russel, general manager of the Packard Motor Car Company of Missouri, a direct factory branch, before a meeting of his entire organization last evening.

"Service such as responds to the Packard ideals begins with the designing and building of the vehicle," said Mr. Russel, "and it accompanies the car or truck clear through the factory and distributer organization into the hands of the owner and throughout his entire transportation experience with that vehicle. It is in the mind of he engineer when the first plans are drawn, and it is equally in the mind of the driver when he is properly educated in the use of the product.

"A standard interpretation of this ideal, one that shall be uniform in practice and result the country over, to the end that the owner will realize in his personal experience the transportation values built into his vehicle by the manufacturer, is the moving force behind a series of perfecting processes which the Packard Company is urging on its distributers for the service establishments.

"Everything that promotes the satisfaction of the owner with his Twin-Six or his Packard truck—the distributers' service station, its cleanliness, orderliness and convenience; the stock of parts carried; the tools supplied the mechanics; the personnel of the service staff from executive to washer; the education of the owner-driver and of the employed driver in the best methods of operating the vehicle; the standardization of repair methods so as to effect the greatest economy of the owner's time and convenience and money—everything of this nature is the concern of these improvements which you have recently seen the service force occupied with.

"Packard service begins with a forward look to the day when the future owner, operating the vehicle, will need these organized facilities. Today our service is reaching farther than ever into the experience of the owner. We are doing our best out here, just as they are back at the factory, to reduce the number and frequency of his service requirements. We find our best way is a species of education, so we are offering the owner-driver and the employed driver the benefit of a school in which men who are expert in both the construction and the operation of Packard products are showing the men who own and drive them how to get out of our vehicles all the transportation values that we have built into them.

"We frequently say that a car or a truck is as good as the service behind it, and from that standpoint we can assert with more confidence than ever the leadership of the Packard."

NEW BATTERY DEVISED FOR USE ON TRUCKS

F. C. Brockmeier, manager of the Exide Service Station, 3408 Lindell, has just received word that a contract has been closed with the United States Motor Truck Co., Cincinnati, O., for the use of a new type of Exide truck battery on their next year's product. This is the third contract that has already been closed for this type although the battery has just been placed on the market, the other contracts being with the Mack and Gramm-Bernstein manufacturers.

Brockmeier reports that this is an entirely new departure in battery design. The battery as used on passenger cars takes care of that service very well, but will soon go to pieces if used on solid tire trucks. It was on that account that the Exide factory set to work to design a battery which could stand the most severe service either for a motor truck on a motor tractor. The battery which has been developed for this service has successfully withstood a test of hard blows on a specially designed bumping machine where the regular passenger car type battery would go to pieces after a few thousand blows had been given. One of the new types of batteries is on exhibit at the Exide Service Station."

ASKS AUTO DEALERS TO BOOST GOOD ROAD BILL

"We have just had a letter from the National Highway Council, said Stewart McDonald, president and general manager of the Moon Motor Car Co. of St. Louis, "in regard to the highway bill pending in the Senate. Realizing the importance of highways to all automobilists and to automobile dealers, we have sent a letter to every one of our dealers telling him the texts of the letter which is to the effect that the pending legislaion will, in no way, affect Federal aid in road building. It will rather strengthen the Federal aid in the building of the minor roads of the country. The Senate bill plans for Government engineers to take complete charge of the rebuilding of through highways, that is, the trunk lines.

"We are trying to get this information out so that every motorist in the country and every dealer in automobiles will write to their Senators commanding and urging the passage of this highway legislation."

THIEVES INVITED TO INSPECT THEFT ALARM

LONDON, Sept. 13.—Motor car thieves were invited to attend a recent demonstration here of a device invented by a British naval engineer to check the thieves' activity. So far as known, none accepted the invitation.

The invention consists of a box containing a gong which is adjusted by means of a key. Thereafter the slightest movement of the car will set the gong going, and it will continue its clamor until the car stops.

London's police have been notified of the invention, and in future they will detain the driver of any car whose bell is ringing.

Famous For Its Marvelous Motor

The Year's Most Pleasing New Sedan

THE season offers no other sedan so pleasing in the beauty of its lines and its furnishings, as the new series Chandler Sedan. And there is none that may be compared with it at anything like its price.

The new Chandler Sedan is the highest expression of years of development in the creation of closed bodies. It is beautiful to look at, and most comfortable to ride in. It has style and refinement that must appeal to those who care for the finer things.

This car seats seven persons most comfortably or five when auxiliary chairs are not in use. The front seat is solid, not divided as in previous models, and the window posts are a permanent part of the body, not removable. The windows, however, may be lowered away or adjusted to suit the weather and the wish. The entire interior is upholstered in finest quality silk-plush of pleasing pattern for cushions and plain tone for head lining. Interior fittings are in dull silver finish.

Despite the largest production in the history of the Chandler company, the demand for the new series sedan will quickly consume the production for weeks to come. Your early order will be a safeguard against disappointment.

Ryan is in charge of the distribution of U. S. L. products in 15 States in the south and west including Missouri. He was accompanied by M. F. Grady, a territorial representative.

The next regular meeting of the St. Louis Storage Battery Trade Association will be held at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow at the American Hotel Annex.

George I. Brush, formerly district sales manager of the Olympian Motors Co. of Pontiac, Mich., is soon to become a member of the sales force of the Welling Motor Co., distributors in this territory for the Olympian, Crow-Elkhart and All-American trucks.

J. D. Barth, president of the Barth Motor Car Co., distributors of the King car, drove to the Jefferson County Fair at DeSoto last week where he exhibited a King "8."

L. T. Rogers, formerly connected with the Clydesdale Truck Co., and G. J. Vierling have become associated with the Aldrich-Stephens Motor Co., distributors of Oneida trucks.

The first shipment of parts and a chassis for showroom purposes arrived from the Oneida factory in Green Bay, Wis., during the last week. The chassis has been put on display in the company's showroom. O. W. Davidis, factory representative of the Oneida company will assist in the distribution of the trucks in this territory.

At a meeting last Wednesday of stockholders of the St. Louis Motor Service Co., Kirk M. Roberts was elected president, Tom Baker vice president and W. L. Patterson, secretary and treasurer.

The company has recently expanded in adding a spare part service and gas filling station to their activities in a new building erected at the corner of Leonard and Washington avenus.

President Phil H. Brockman has called a meeting of the directors of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association for the Marquette Hotel at noon Tuesday. The meeting is to consider the fall show and labor conditions in the atuomobile trade.

Sales Executives

From the highest type of salesman—the business getter with a successful record—who feels that his present connection limits his opportunity for development and future growth, we desire replies to this ad.

We are not interested in real estate, stock or specialty salesman, but only in the man who can refer us to several years of road selling success, calling on the jobber and retailer.

Applicants must be more than mediocre salesmen; must be in their thirties and have good health and business poise; possess a strong personality indicative of ability and enthusiasm and be willing to accept assignments in any part of the United States east of the Rocky Mountains.

If you measure up to our requirements you have an opportunity to make a permanent connection with one of the largest and best known manufacturers in the country. Your future is limited only by your own shortcomings and inability to grasp opportunities.

For obvious reasons this "ad" must be run "blind." We will hold your replies in confidence, and, for those who sell themselves in their letter, we will arrange a personal interview.

Expensive To Buy Motor Trucks By the Ton

Look at the Use of a Motor Truck from the Transportation Angle and the Economy of Packard Efficiency is Apparent

STRENGTH is not necessarily a matter of weight in motor trucks or anything else.

For example—there are two ways of making a steel rod strong. One way is by making it bulky—the other is by scientific heat treatment—a stronger rod from one-half to one-quarter the size and weight.

* * *

Motor truck transportation must move goods at the lowest cost—you must be able to figure on the costs beforehand and depend upon their correctness afterward—or there is no science to it.

Motor truck transportation as a science must start with an efficient motor truck.

* * *

To get to the transportation value of a motor truck, you must dig under the pretty paint which covers it.

Just because a truck looks like a brute—built up with tons of extra metal—is no sign it can go the distance or do the work.

They consume nearly as much gasoline and oil without a load as an efficient truck uses when loaded.

They are more expensive to maintain as they grow older, because poor workmanship and uneven quality in material show up to a greater degree the longer a truck is in use.

* * *

Packard trucks are built for transportation efficiency.

Where weight is needed for strength, we use weight—but where it is not needed, no expense is spared in replacing it with whatever science has to offer.

For example, Packard represents the highest heat-treating achievement as applied to commercial vehicles. Parts of a Packard truck, heat-treated, show from 35,000 to 62,000 pounds per square inch more strength than the average of other makes.

Packard quality begins to show from the start off. It shows more and more as the mileage increases. It outlasts the paint by years. There are a hundred thousand economical miles built into every Packard. Many Packard trucks have run twice that.

* * *

Your business man wants, not only low costs, but dependable costs.

Both these, the use of the Packard truck insure him.

To business men who have not yet begun to place trucking on a scientific cost-keeping basis, we offer the services of the Packard Freight Transportation Department.

You need not be a Packard owner to avail yourself of our aid. Packard Service in this respect is without charge and truck owners may use it without feeling under obligation.

CURVES COSTLY TO TRUCK FREIGHTERS

Road Builders Are Urged to Profit by Experience of Railroads in Selection of Locations for Hard Roads.

Rapidly increasing use of country roads by motor trucks is emphasizing the need of great care in the selections of locations for hard-surfaced highways, according to ship-by-truck advocates.

The growing prestige of the motor truck in the short-haul transportation field is based largely on its ability to speed deliveries, it is pointed out. Its ability to function efficiently in this field is lessened on every grade that requires it to go into intermediate gear, and on every curve that requires a material reduction of its speed.

"I believe that in many cases it is not economy to build a modern permanent road on a location made years ago under entirely different conditions," writes Horatio L. Baker in a letter published in a recent issue of the Engineering News-Record. "Railroad engineers have shown the wisdom and economy of expending large sums of money in order to obtain better locations. With the advent of the large, heavily laden motor truck, the principles controlling highways and railroad location have become more closely associated, and the principles governing railroad location should be more closely followed."

Engineer in France.

Baker speaks with knowledge gained by a year of road experience in France as an officer with the Twenty-third Engineers. This experience he gained at a time when the roads were used constantly, day and night by thousands of army trucks on jobs which had to be performed without unnecessary delay.

"The capacity of an otherwise good road under heavy summer traffic," continues Baker in the letter referred to, "is materially decreased by even one grade requiring the use of intermediate gear, and that capacity suffers a further very material decrease during periods when snow and ice are encountered.

"Location is part of the road, and a good location is an absolute necessity in order to get 100 per cent efficiency from any given road surface. The better the surface, the more important the location. The saving in maintenance charges by a proper location, together with the saving in operating expenses of motor vehicles, will be of benefit to all generations, including the present, which must soon decide the question of permanent locations. The cost of a proper location is as proper a charge against the total cost of a permanent highway as the cost of right-of-way is against the cost of a railroad."

In a letter received yesterday by Roy S. Rauschkolb, director of the St. Louis Ship by Truck Bureau, at 3201 Locust street, E Farr, director of the Central Bureau at Akron, O., touches on this phase of the road building and motor truck transportation movements.

Eliminate Grades.

"Those communities that are about to put approximately $36,000 a mile into hard roads," writes Director Farr, "should profit by the experience of the railroads. It should be recalled that many a railroad right-of-way selected in the early days of railroad construction was later remade at heavy expense to eliminate even so much as a 1 per cent grade. Builders of hard surfaced highways should make location selections at the beginning that will stand the test of those economies which time will unfold.

"If the railroad owners learned that the demands of traffic made it more profitable to spend millions eliminating grades and curves than to suffer the loss represented in delayed freight and rolling stock, and in increased maintenance charges, surely motor truck owners—and some day every farmer will own a motor truck—will learn the same thing, if care is not taken in selecting the original locations of hard-surfaced highways.

"It is cheapest in the long run to take bad curves and grades out of the highway before the first hard surface is put down, or to change the location of the roadbed where necessary, even if considerable expense is involved.

"Bad curves and grades mean lessened traffic capacity for a road. Lessened traffic capacity means higher hauling rates. And higher hauling rates mean higher costs to the ultimate consumer.

How We Go At It

First we look into the battery to see if you put water in it.

Then we use the hydrometer which is the one reliable way of knowing the condition of its charge.

Then, if no special cause of trouble appears we put it on the line to see if it will take a charge.

But if there is plain indication of serious trouble we open the battery up and find out exactly what's what.

Don't trust your battery to amateurs or artists in guesswork, who claim they can tell inside condition by outside inspection.

Come here where you find adequate machines and apparatus to really inspect, charge and repair any battery.

The Secret of a Superlative Tire

The whole question of a super-tire is a matter of principles. For there is nothing exclusive in the industry. No patents, no secret formulas prevent a conscientious maker from building the best.

But cost and competition modify ideals. The Brunswick idea is to pay perfection's price and get it.

That has been the Brunswick policy since 1845. And it accounts for the growing preference for Brunswick Tires. Motorists expect the utmost from a tire bearing the name of Brunswick—and get it.

You, too, will be convinced by your first Brunswick, that here is an extraordinary tire, and that more money cannot buy a better.

Better tires of their type are impossible—or better tubes. That we guarantee.

Glass and Nails No Longer Auto's Bugaboo

Tire Filler Banishes Punctures and Blowouts

Slowing down or detouring to avoid the dangers of riding over broken glass, tacks or nails is no longer necessary. The danger has been removed. This is the verdict of over 100,000 owners of cars and trucks who have replaced air in their tires with a new synthetic compound which, according to statements of users, rides like air, without the dangers of air-filled tires, and positively prevents punctures and blowouts.

That the long-sought-for assurance against tire troubles is about to become a universally accepted fact seems certain from the wonderful performance of this new substance, under the hardest kind of tests, under all sorts of conditions, by over 100,000 car and truck owners.

Bits of glass, nails, tacks, sharp stones—all the well-known tire enemies—were run over without necessitating one moment's stop. And as no air is used, no inner tubes are needed; spare tires, spare rims, pumps, jacks, tire tools—all are unnecessary and their cost is saved. Besides, the experience of drivers shows that with this better-than-air tire filler double tire mileage is secured—10,000 to 20,000 miles being the rule rather than the exception.

The substance, known as Essenkay, The Tire Filler, is manufactured by the Essenkay Products Company, Box 139, 220 W. Superior Street, Chicago, Ill. Mr. J. A. Jonson, Sales Manager, is offering a free trial to car owners in territory where it has not yet been introduced. He is willing, he says, to rely on the results of car owners' experience to prove its merits and recommend it to others. It is for this reason the Free Trial is offered to any car owner where there is "no Essenkay dealer." Write Mr. Jonson today for your trial set.—ADV.

MISALIGNMENT OF PARTS IS COMMON CAUSE OF TROUBLE

Wheels Suffer Principally From This Ailment Which Shortens Life of Tires.

Satisfactory operation of the motor car is impossible without accurate alignment of the parts. This is probably known by most motorists, but a few moments' observation at any time of day on Locust street or any other heavily traveled route will reveal the fact that there are many motorists who either overlook correcting such ailments or else do not know about them.

The efficient and satisfactory operation of the various mechanical units of the chassis depend entirely on those units being correctly aligned. Let them get out of line and all sorts of trouble immediately follows. Gear teeth break, intense friction is set up and minor ills quickly grow into major failures until the car must be extensively overhauled to put it on the road again.

The car owner will readily understand that when the vehicle first comes from its maker all the various parts are properly aligned and so run perfectly. When the car is carelessly handled this perfect alignment and balance is quickly lost and trouble begins. If the car owner will devote the same attention to maintaining correct alignment that he is advised to bestow on lubrication, his familiar troubles will never even begin. Consequently he should take this warning to heart.

Excessive Tire Wear.

One of the commonest cases of misalignment is that of the front wheels, which is immediately made evident in an excessive tire wear, which may result in the destruction of the casings in a few miles of running. The alignment of the front wheels is determined by the condition of the steering system, the front axle, the bearings and various minor parts. It is quite possible to throw the front wheels out of line in a hard bump against the curb. The car owner ought to check up—or if he cannot do it himself, have the service station do it—the alignment of the wheels at least twice a year. If the wheels have been subjected to any severe bump, which might throw the wheels out of line, the checking should be carried out regardless of any set time for the operation.

It is possible also for the rear wheels to get out of line, depending on the condition of the rims, the bearings, the axle, etc. Trouble developing in the rear axle is likely to throw the wheels out of line. For instance, if the rear axle is not properly lubricated, mechanical derangements are inevitable and these tend to throw the wheels out of line. It is quite possible by careless driving to throw the rear axle out of line. For instance, if the car is started with the hand brake set, the differential ring gear or an axle shaft may very likely be broken. The strain has simply been too much for the parts and the weakest of them has snapped. If the brake is applied while the wheels are in the air, as they are likely to be much of the time when the car is going over rough road surface, the wheels will be locked when they strike the ground and the result will very likely be a snapped driving pinion. These are simply instances of careless of actually bad driving which are very likely to throw the various parts out of alignment and make satisfactory operation impossible; and be it noted they are simply a couple of instances from many similar troubles that may occur.

Let us examine briefly some of the more important locations where misalignment of the parts may be expected. First, there is the engine and in this unit it is quite possible to throw the connecting rod out of the perpendicular line as regards the crankshaft. When this occurs the piston instead of moving straight up and down in the cylinder rubs against the side wall, wearing the cylinder in an oval form, so that it must be rebored to restore its usefulness. Again, the crankshaft itself may be thrown out of its proper alignment, generally because of wear in the bearings. When this happens the connecting rods will be thrown out of due line, with results as noted above and further excessive wear in the bearings will occur.

In addition to the crankshaft there are a number of minor shafts in the mechanism which are likely to get out of alignment. For instance, if your car is fitted with a magneto and you don't oil the shaft on which the armature runs, rapid wear will result and the shaft will drop out of line. If you forget to oil the bearings of the generator armature the same thing will happen.

The clutch is another unit where misalignment is likely to occur. If the clutch gets out of line with the flywheel it is obvious that there will be trouble. If the rear crankshaft bearing is worn or the shaft for any reason does not fit accurately the clutch is thrown out of line with the inevitable results.

Eliminate Cause First.

Getting back to the transmission the same general principle holds true. This unit embodies various sets of gears set on shafts designed to be absolutely parallel. If one of these shafts gets out of accurate line instantly the gears rasp and growl. The fact that the shafts are out of line prevents the gears meshing smoothly and chipping or breaking of the teeth is almost certain to result. If the bearings on these transmission shafts become worn the shafts themselves will drop out of line and then endless trouble. In cases where these shafts or one of them get out of line it frequently happens that the owner keeps replacing gears, when the basic trouble is a sprung shaft and no replacement of parts does any good until the real cause of trouble has been remedied by realigning the shafts. In other cases the shafts are sprung out of true by a case or housing which has been sprung.

Similarly when a car has been involved in an accident that has sprung the frame out of true it is quite possible that straightening the frame may not put the vehicle back in running condition. It is more than likely that in such a wrench some of the various mechanical units may have been sprung out of alignment, a condition that will not be remedied by merely straightening the frame again.

The really efficient service stations are very particular in this matter of being sure that the mechanical units of a car sent to them are correctly lined up because they realize that satisfactory operation is impossible until perfect alignment is secured. The really efficient and conscientious service stations do this, we say, and consequently it is vitally important to the car owner to entrust his work only to the shop that he knows is reliable and careful. The car that leaves the repair shop without this matter of alignment carefully checked up leaves it only for a little while.

YOU would be amazed if you knew in how short a time the average sale of a Liberty is closed.

As a rule, prospective buyers come to us strongly attracted by the beauty of the car, and the high favor in which it is held by the owners.

With that preference to go on, we leave them largely to their own devices—merely asking that they observe, for themselves, the beautiful steadiness of Liberty performance.

The first delightful ten minutes in which the superior difference in the way the Liberty rides and drives reveals itself is enough to clinch the matter.

Won't you let us show you how true are the kindly things you constantly hear said of the Liberty?

Are Weak Nerves and Lack of Physical Strength Holding You Back in Life?

You Must Have Plenty of Iron in Your Blood if You Want the Power and Energy to Win, Says Physician.

When the crushing grip of worry, trials and care sap your vitality and keeps you from the full enjoyment of home, social and business life—take Nuxated Iron and watch its strength-giving, up-building, effect—it will increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down folks in two weeks' time in many instances.

THOUSANDS are held back in life for want of sufficient iron in the blood," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), New York and the Westchester County Hospital, in commenting on the relation of strong nerves and physical endurance to the attainment of success and power.

"A weak body means a weakened brain; weak nerve force means weakened will power, and like the race horse beaten by a nose, many a capable man or woman falls just short of winning because they don't back up their mentality with the physical strength and energy which come from having plenty of iron in the blood.

"Iron is absolutely essential to enable your blood to transform the food you eat into muscular tissue and brain. It is through iron in the red coloring matter of the blood that life-sustaining oxygen enters the body. Without iron there is no strength, vitality and endurance to combat obstacles or withstand severe strains. Lack of sufficient iron in the blood has ruined many a man's nerves and utterly robbed him of that virile force and stamina which are so necessary to success and power in every walk of life.

"Therefore, I strongly advise those who feel the need of a strength and blood builder to get a physician's prescription for organic iron—Nuxated Iron—or if you don't want to go to this trouble, then purchase only Nuxated Iron in its original packages and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the package. Nuxated Iron has been used and strongly endorsed by many physicians formerly connected with well-known hospitals, Ignace Jan Paderewski, Master Pianist and Nation Maker; Jack Dempsey, Heavyweight Champion of the World; U. S. Commissioner of Immigration Hon. Anthony Caminetti, Judge Atkinson of the United States Court of Claims at Washington and others.

In regard to the value of Nuxated Iron, former Health Commissioner of Chicago, William R. Kerr, said: "From my own experience with Nuxated Iron I feel that it is such a valuable remedy that it ought to be used in every hospital and prescribed by every physician in this country, and if my endorsement shall induce anaemic, nervous, run-down men and women to take Nuxated Iron and receive the wonderful tonic benefits which I have received, I shall feel greatly gratified that I made an exception to my lifelong rule in recommending it."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jacques, formerly Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York City, said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But in the case of Nuxated Iron, I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

No matter what other tonics or iron remedies you have used without success—if you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Nuxated Iron will increase the strength, power and endurance of delicate, nervous, run-down people in two weeks' time in many instances.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended by physicians, and which is now being used by over three million people annually, is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated and does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Drug Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Welpert Drug Co., Pauley's Drug Stores, Enderle Drug Co. and Mecher's [illegible] Stores, East St. Louis, and all other druggists—ADVERTISEMENT.

SOUTH TO HAVE EXHIBIT AT CHICAGO DAIRY SHOW

Gov. Pleasant of Louisiana Will Be Principal Speaker on Southern Day, Oct. 8.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The South is going strong to the National Dairy Show at Chicago, Oct. 6-12. In honor of the visitors from the South the management of the show has announced that Wednesday, Oct. 8, will be Southern day.

Gov. Ruffin G. Pleasant of Louisiana, who will head a large delegation from his State, will be one of the speakers. There will be other prominent speakers, including other Governors, it is expected, and Clement S. Ucker, vice president of the Southern Settlement and Development Organization, which has been co-operating with the National Dairy Show management in arranging for Southern participation in the show with exhibits, moving pictures, etc.

"The South is forging rapidly to the front as a great dairying section," says the show management, "and there will be large delegations of farmers and dairymen from several Southern states at the show this fall, according to advices received by the management. The Southern visitors want to see the latest and best of everything connected with the industry and it is expected that these Southerners will be buyers of good dairy cattle."

Growing More Livestock.

This is in line with information obtained from authorities on Southern livestock interests, which are becoming bigger, better and more important as the development of the coastal plain area stretching from Norfolk, Va., to Galveston, Tex., progresses.

Many persons think of Alabama as a producer and seller of cotton and as a buyer of practically all other agricultural products, but livestock production and shipments from Geneva County, Ala., during the year ending April 1 last show otherwise. The Department of Agriculture is authority for the statement that this county exported 473 carloads of hogs, 98 carloads of cattle, besides large quantities of peanuts, hay, velvet beans and corn during the year, "an output of which many well developed agricultural counties in the Eastern and Northern states would feel proud," says the department.

Despite their large size, these total export shipments of agricultural products from Geneva County in the main showed a decrease from the figures for the year ending April 1, 1918, owing to dry weather and an unfavorable season. An exception to this general rule was the increase in outward hog shipments from 385 to 473 carloads, a gain of about 22 per cent, which shows that the hog business is booming in that part of the South.

"In view of the fact that only 40 per cent of the acreage of Geneva County is now under cultivation," says the Department of Agriculture, "and that furthermore only 40 per cent of this area is producing more than 50 per cent of its actual capacity, the agricultural exports are extremely significant, and indicate that as far as agricultural advancement is concerned, this section of Alabama is yet in its infancy."

A. G. Ingham of Dovesville, S. C., a pioneer in the Southern dairy development and in proving that livestock grows to perfection in the South, is understood to be planning to exhibit prize dairy cattle on what is said to be a record show circuit in Missouri, Illinois, Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia and South Carolina.

MAJOR AND MINOR HANDICAPS

WASHINGTON, D. C.—With thousands of applicants for re-education under the vocational rehabilitation law, the Federal Board for Vocational Education has found it necessary to give preference to those men whose disabilities constitute such serious handicaps as to require immediate attention. The definition of a major occupational handicap in the opinion of the board includes not only loss of limbs, which are comparatively few, but many disabilities less obvious than amputations, but as serious in their consequences.

The standards of the Federal Board for Vocational Education are more lenient than those of any other country, and it will be found that a larger proportion of disabled men will be counted among the beneficiaries under the Vocational Rehabilitation Law in this country than in any other.

Hundreds of men have applied for training, whose disability is almost negligible. For example, men discharged from the navy on account of seasickness have requested training. Obviously, such applications must, under the law, be denied. The generosity of Congress in providing liberal allowances for disabled men in training has led many men, not eligible under the law, to apply at the district offices. After thorough investigation of each case and careful consideration the Federal Board is compelled to arrange first for those men whose handicaps are most serious. The wisdom and justice of this policy, all will admit.

2000 FIREMEN FIGHT OIL BLAZE NEAR NEW YORK

Millions of Dollars Damage Done to Property of Standard Oil Co. at Long Island City.

MANY ARE INJURED; EXPLOSIONS FREQUENT

Recall Signal Sounded for Fire Fighters First Time in History of New York Two-Platoon System.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—More than 2000 fire fighters, perhaps the greatest force ever concentrated in New York at any one point, at midnight are battling with flames which not only caused damage to Standard Oil Co. property in Long Island City amounting to millions of dollars, but resulted in injury to more than two score of persons. It was reported that three men on a fireboat were killed, but at a late hour this had not been confirmed.

The fire, starting early this afternoon from the explosion of an oil tank in the Stone & Fleming works, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil, on Newtown Creek, spread over virtually the entire area of the plant, which covers 20 acres, and thence to the Columbia Distilling Co.'s buildings on the same side of the creek, the Peter Cooper Glue Works and American Agricultural Co.'s plant across the water and the Green Point bridge. At the same time flames, carried across the stream by blazing oil, threatened the Platt works of the Standard Oil on the opposite bank.

Recall Signal Sounded.

The fire spread so rapidly that, in addition to a dozen fireboats and three score fire companies, a signal was sounded summoning back all members of the department who had gone off duty. This is the first time since the two-platoon system was introduced in this city that an emergency has arisen necessitating a recall signal. Every man who could be spared in Manhattan was sent across the East River. When late tonight it became evident little progress had been made in checking the flames, Fire Chief John Kenlon was recalled from his vacation to take charge of the situation.

Despite the constant danger from explosions which they faced, the fire fighters stuck to their posts, retreating only when the heat became intolerable. In the front lines the men worked on 20-minute shifts, refusing to relinquish the fight in spite of severe burns.

In addition to several hundred thousand gallons of burning oil, which darkened the city by day and illuminated it by night, hundreds of tons of coal at the plant caught fire. When naphtha and gasoline explosions occurred, the firemen were forced to fling themselves face downward in the mud and oily water. Their nozzles in the air, they laid down upon themselves a heavy water barrage to protect themselves from the sparks.

50 Tanks Ablaze.

As the flames spread from tank to tank until at 8 o'clock fifty were ablaze, there were several explosions which caused uneasiness to spread among the spectators. Fearing a more serious burst, they would scamper away only to return again to watch the flames. Each tank contained many thousand gallons of oil when the fire started, but plant employes immediately put into operation an emergency underground pipe system and began drawing off the oil to other plants. Blazing oil overflowed, however, from some tanks and ran along the ground, spreading destruction. Some spread along the surface of the creek, but soon burned itself out.

So intense was the heat that occupants of factories near the works and families in tenement houses a short distance away fled, some carrying with them belongings.

The smoke was so thick that employes with a knowledge of the plant were used to guide the firemen. Firemen between tanks were relieved at ten minute intervals. Nine search lights, each of 500 candlepower and having 1800 feet of cable, were set up.

DOCTORS RESENT LIQUOR LIMIT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—A continuous shower of protests against the section of the prohibition enforcement bill which reads: "Not more than a pint of spirituous liquor to be taken internally shall be prescribed for use by the same person within any period of 10 days, and no prescriptions shall be filled more than once," is coming to members of Congress.

Physicians from every section of the country resent this restriction.

TIDE RISES, FLOODS LOWLAND AT GALVESTON

People Flee Into the City—Thirty-Mile Northeast Wind Blowing at 11 O'Clock.

By the Associated Press.

GALVESTON, Tex., Sept. 13.—Local weather bureau reports at midnight said the tide was 6.6 feet, and rising, the wind was 24 miles and from the northeast. The barometer was 29.67, a fall of two points since 7 o'clock.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Reports to the Weather Bureau here from Galveston tonight said the tide was rising rapidly, water was flooding low places on the island and people were fleeing to the city. A 30-mile northeast wind was blowing and the Galveston tide at 11 o'clock was 6.4 feet and rising.

Fifty-Two-Mile Wind Causes Damage at Mouth of Mississippi.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Sept. 13.—First definite reports of damage from the tropical hurricane which struck the Louisiana coast west of the Mississippi River today were received tonight from Burwood, near the mouth of the river. The halyards of the eWather Bureau at that place were demolished by the wind, which reached a velocity of 52 miles. Although definitely determined that it swept inland at a point on the coast west of Burwood, observers tonight still were unable to locate the storm, its velocity or direction. As a precautionary measure the Louisville & Nashville Railroad late today canceled all Gulf Coast trains.

TELEGRAM CAUSES HUNT FOR BEER ON WILSON'S TRAIN

St. Louis Editor's Message Brings Sensation — "Thanks for Tip," Is the Reply.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 13.—A genuine sensation was created among members of the President's party today by a telegram from a St. Louis editor. He asked if there was any truth in the report that "three cases of real beer was put on board the President's train at St. Louis."

The answer that went back to him was as follows:

"Thanks for the tip; everybody aboard is conducting a third degree search for it. Up to date the party has been the dryest thing in any of the States through which it has passed."

HOUSE VOTES MORE MONEY TO MEN DISABLED IN SERVICE

Practically Doubles Compensation Originally Provided and Eliminates Red Tape.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Increases practically doubling the monthly compensation originally provided by the war risk insurance act to disabled soldiers and sailors and members of their families, were passed unanimously today by the House, with other amendments to the act liberalizing its provision and to eliminate red tape in administering the law.

Among the changes in payments provided for total temporary disability are that a single man shall receive $80 a month instead of $30; a man with a wife or a child, $90, instead of $45; one with a wife and one child, $95 instead of $55; and man with a wife and two children or more, $100 instead of $65. Disabilities, it is provided, shall also be rated as partial and temporary, total and permanent and partial and permanent, for which the monthly compensation shall be a percentage of the degree of reduction in earning capacity.

Automatic provisions of the law are extended to cover all men, except those who refused to apply for insurance, who were finally accepted for service during the war. The permitted class of beneficiaries is enlarged to include uncles, aunts, nephews, nieces, brothers-in-law, and sisters-in-law, while the definition of parent is extended to persons who stood in loco parentis to a service man.

GROCER SHOT TO DEATH BY ROBBER IN STORE

William Wiesing Tries to Run Out While Highwayman Is Searching Customer.

A highwayman shot and killed William Wiesing, 38 years old, proprietor of a small grocery store at the northeast corner of Fifteenth and O'Fallon streets, at 10:10 o'clock last night, when Wiesing attempted to run from the store while the robber was holding up a customer. The slayer escaped.

Wiesing, who lived at 1438 O'Fallon street, a few doors east of the store, was waiting on a negro when the robber entered. No other persons were in the store. The robber, a white man apparently about 23 years old, drew a revolver and commanded both to hold up their hands. He began searching the negro's pockets, and as he did, Wiesing made a break for the front door.

Just as he reached it, the highwayman fired one shot, which struck Wiesing in the back of the head, killing him instantly. The negro also ran but the robber did not fire at him. He hesitated a moment, then ran out, jumping over Wiesing's body, and ran north on Fifteenth street.

A number of negroes were sitting on the doorsteps of their homes in the neighborhood, and heard the shot. One of them said he saw Wiesing fall across the threshold of the door, and saw the negro customer run out, and go south on Fifteenth street. A moment later, the white man ran out, and went in the opposite direction, he told the police.

Wiesing was married, and lived with his brother and sister. He was a clerk in the store until two years ago, when he bought out his employer, a man named Tegethoff.

The only description of Wiesing's slayer besides his age, was that he was slender, and wore a dark cap and dark clothing.

The negro customer told persons in the vicinity that the highwayman had taken $20 from him. Later, the negro disappeared, and the police had been unable, several hours later, to find him.

Russian Shot and Beaten.

Morris Goldfader, 48 years old, proprietor of a secondhand clothing store at 903 Morgan street, was shot in the right breast and beaten about the head last night at 10:45 o'clock by a negro whose attempt to rob him in his store Goldfader resisted.

The motorman, conductor and two passengers of a passing Wellston street car were attracted by the screams of a woman living above the store. She had heard fighting in the store. The men from the street car broke a window in the door of the store, which was locked. The negro pointed a revolver at them. They scattered and the negro ran through the door. The motorman fired a shot.

James Cannon, a negro 21 years old, 530 South Twenty-third street, was found in an alley at Eleventh street and Franklin avenue, wounded in the leg. He carried a revolver with two discharged shells in it. Goldfader, at the city hospital, identified Cannon as his assailant.

POISONING CHARGE PUT AGAINST CANDY MAKER

John Sturgis, 64 years old, a candy maker living at 3907 Finney avenue, was arrested yesterday afternoon on a charge of attempting to poison Steve Agian, proprietor of a candy store at 1105 North Vandeventer avenue. Sturgis formerly worked at Agian's place and was discharged a month ago.

When Agian opened his store Friday morning and took the covers off the cans of ice cream, he discovered that some of the cream was black and was covered with bits of a green substance.

Agian called a policeman, who took samples of the ice cream to the city chemist. This morning the chemist reported that the green substance contained strychnine. Agian told the police that a month ago, when Sturgis was discharged, the candy maker told him he "would not run his store much longer."

A search was made of Sturgis' room and a quantity of the green substance found on the ice cream was discovered, the police say. Sturgis' arrest followed. When he was searched a duplicate key to Agian's store was found in his pocket. Sturgis denied that he had poisoned the ice cream.

WATERMELON WITH YELLOW CORE

Senator New, After 10 Years, Able to Tell Wife, "I told You So."

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Ten years ago Senator Harry New happened to mention to his wife, while they were eating watermelons, that he had once seen and tasted a watoenrmelon with a yellow core. Mrs. New doubted the story, and said that all she had ever seen were red. The Senator declared he would prove his truth and veracity by showing his wife, sometime, a watermelon with a yellow heart.

Since that time Senator New has been continuously on the watch. He even tipped off his friends and they have looked long and carefully for a yellow melon. Today an express package came to the Senator's home here. It contained a watermelon, just as green as any watermelon on the outside, but when cut the meat, to the Senator's great delight, was pure golden, without a streak of red. Thanks to one of his Hoosier friends, the Senator now says to his wife, "I told you so."

MARRIED HIM FOR DURATION OF WAR TO GET INSURANCE

Now Negress Wants Divorce Because He Didn't Get Killed—Otherwise He's Ideal Husband.

A negress yesterday visited Judge Cook of the East St. Louis City Court and announced she wanted a divorce. He explained she would have to engage a lawyer.

"What has he done to you," asked the Judge.

"He ain't done nothing to me," she replied.

'Does he support you?"

"I say he do. He works every day and gives me all his money."

"Does he run around with other women?"

"Say, Judge, do you think I would stand for anything like that? No, sir, he don't run around with no woman but me. If he did I'd break his head."

"Does he beat you, hit you with his fists or anything?"

"No, Judge, if he ever hit me I wouldn't need a divorce. I'm puffectly able to take care of myself when it comes to anything like that."

"Well, I'm afraid you have no grounds for divorce. He seems to be an ideal husband. Why do you want a divorce?"

"Well, you see, Judge, I just married him for the duration of the war. He made his allotment to me, and when he got killed I was to get $10,000, and he didn't get killed. I didn't marry him to live with him."

WAR'S CHAMPION STOWAWAY MUST RETURN TO BELGIUM

Mike Gilhooley, 14 Years Old, Loses Chance to Stay in U. S. Because of Crap-Shooting Propensity.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Mike Gilhooley is on his way back to Belgium today on the transport Henderson. Thus ends the fourth attempt of the war's champion stowaway to be an American. Mike, who is 14 years old, has numerous friends among the doughboys of the A. E. F., but his influence does not extend to the immigration authorities.

His inheritance of Blarney helped him to get adopted by a rich New York woman on his third trip as a stowaway on an army transport, but a propensity for shooting craps soon caused him to be returned to the immigration officials.

Mike's father died before the war, and his Belgian mother, he says, was killed by a German shell, which also destroyed his home.

Are you going to the theater or movies tonight? If so, see Page 10, Part 2.

TWO MEXICANS LYNCHED BY MOB IN PUEBLO

Men Charged With Murder of Patrolman Taken From Jail and Hanged to Bridge.

By the Associated Press.

PUEBLO, Colo., Sept. 13.—Two Mexicans were taken from the city jail tonight by a mob of armed citizens, driven in an automobile to the Fourth street bridge at the city limits and hanged.

The bodies were found 45 minutes later by the police. The lynching followed the arrest of two Mexicans charged with the murder today of Patrolman Jeff Evans. The mob entered the police station and held up the desk sergeant and forced the jailer to deliver the prisoners.

The two men, Jose Gonzales and Santos Ortes, section hands, were arrested today. Reports that the men had been transferred to the county jail and that two other Mexicans had been hanged proven erroneous.

BELGIAN KING AND QUEEN TO VISIT ST. LOUIS IN OCTOBER

Chamber of Commerce Announces Invitation Has Been Accepted—Program to Be Arranged.

The King and Queen of Belgium will visit St. Louis during their American tour, accepting the invitation recently extended by Mayor Kiel and the Chamber of Commerce. This announcement was made yesterday by the chamber, following the receipt of a letter from Jefferson Caffery of the State Department.

They probably will be here between the middle and latter part of October. They are due to arrive in New York Oct. 8.

Joint arrangements of the city administration and the chamber will be arrived at within the next 10 days, and submitted to the State Department for approval.

STRIKERS' POSTS ON BOSTON POLICE FORCE DECLARED VACANT BY STATE

Commissioner Curtis to Start Building New Force at Once, Recruiting Veterans of Army and Navy, Without Following Civil Service Requirements.

GENERAL STRIKE IS THREATENED

Increasing Anxiety Felt That Other Unions Will Act to Back Up Policemen—Gompers Had Sent Plea for Men's Reinstatement.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Sept. 13.—Police Commissioner Curtis shut the doors of the Police Department in the faces of the striking policemen today. He announced that he would not reinstate the men who had abandoned their posts.

At evening roll call he made it known that he would proceed at once to build up a new force.

The Commissioner's action followed the strikers' acceptance of the suggestion of President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, that they return to work without demanding immediate union recognition, but without relinquishing any of their claims. It found support in an opinion by Attorney-General Bruce Wyman and a statement by Gov. Coolidge. The Attorney-General held that the police officers, having deserted their posts, had made their places vacant and that the Commissioner could fill them.

Governor Agrees With Wyman.

Gov. Coolidge, at a conference with President John F. McInnis of the Policemen's Union, and other labor leaders, said he would be guided by the opinion of the Attorney-General. To President Gompers he sent a telegram saying that he stood behind the Commissioner's declaration that the men had vacated their places.

The Police Commissioner refused to meet the labor leaders in a joint conference requested by them, but subsequently sent word through Henry F. Long, secretary to the Governor, that he would talk with them, "in my own behalf," on Monday. This phrase was interpreted to mean that he wished to remove any official status from the interview.

By permission of the Civil Service Commissioners, backed by an opinion of the attorney-general, the commissioners will recruit his new forces without civil service requirements, from veterans of the army or navy who are residents of this state.

The new force probably will be better paid than the old. The commissioner said he had submitted to the mayor recommendations for advances in the salaries of patrolmen. The mayor previously had said that he favored increased pay for the police.

The city, restored to virtually normal conditions of order under the presence of the state's military forces, was concerned tonight over the immediate future.

Threat of a General Strike.

The threat of a general strike was in the air. The statement of President Gompers in New York that he supposed Commissioner Curtis was "willing to assume the responsibility for the consequences of his action" directed attention to the next move likely to be made by the Central Labor Union. That body will hold a regular meeting tomorrow night. If its order of Thursday night has been carried out, it will have before it expressions of the attitude toward a general strike taken by most of its constitutent unions.

Vote to Remain in Union.

The policemen's union at meetings this afternoon and tonight unanimously voted, after hearing the report of the committee that saw Gov. Coolidge, to retain their membership in the union. Mae E. Matthews, an officer of the Boston Telephones Operators' Union, told the strikers that the union would vote overwhelmingly at its meeting next Tuesday to declare a sympathetic strike.

Curtis issued an order at 5:45 o'clock this evening discharging from the department the 19 officers of the policemen's union whom he previously found guilty of violating the rule that forbids a policeman to join an "outside union." At the same time he promoted four nonstriking police Sergeants to Lieutenancies and made several other changes in assignments of Lieutenants and Sergeants that are considered equal to promotion.

When the Commissioner was ap-

PRESIDENT SAYS ISSUE IS ONE OF KEEPING OUR WORD

Points in Tacoma and Seattle Addresses to Purposes in Entering War as Accepted by Congress.

ASKS REPUBLICANS TO FORGET ELECTION

Declares He'll Read "Riot Act" to Anyone Whose Course on Treaty Is Governed by Political Conditions.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 13.—Detailing the purposes for which the United States entered the war, as they were set forth and accepted by Congress in his war message, President Wilson told the people of Washington today that the issue squarely facing the country in the treaty debate was whether that program should be carried through or abandoned.

In the first day of his stay of more than a week on the Pacific Coast, Mr. Wilson spoke during the morning at Tacoma and then came to Seattle in time to review the Pacific fleet in the afternoon and address a mass meeting at the Arena in the evening. In both cities he was cheered by crowds that thronged every point of vantage to get a glimpse of him. He will rest tomorrow at a Seattle hotel.

Repeating many of the arguments he has used previously against qualification of the treaty by reservations or amendments, the President again appealed to Republicans of the country to "forget that there is an election in 1920." He asserted his intention to read "the riot act" to any one who let political conditions dictate his course in relation to the treaty.

Seattle's downtown section was crowded to its capacity when Mr. Wilson's train arrived this afternoon and along the line of a two-mile automobile ride through the city there was a roar of cheering. The police had strung ropes to keep the spectators on the sidewalk, but the crowds broke through and shrieking mobs followed the President's car everywhere.

Uniformity of Opinion.

At a public dinner which he attended before going to the Arena, Mr. Wilson said he had been impressed by the uniformity of opinion among the people from ocean to ocean.

"There is no essential division," he said, "in the thought or purpose of the American people. No amount of debate will set them off their balance."

All the world was looking to the United States to put world affairs on a settled basis, he said, adding that the world would not be disappointed. Fourteen hundred tickets had been distributed for the dinner.

At the Arena, which seats 6800, there were few empty seats when the President began speaking, but many were standing. When Mr. Wilson entered, the crowd rose and cheered him for more than a minute, and when he was introduced by Mayor Fitzgerald there was a longer demonstration. On the stage were Secretary Daniels of the Navy Department and Admiral Rodman of the Pacific fleet.

The President began by saying he had heard that one of the former advisers of the German Government saw in some aspects of the treaty a hope for an outcome that might be pleasing to Germany. All over the country it is becoming more and more evident, he asserted, that the pro-German element was pleased at some of the things that had developed in the treaty discussion.

Asserting he had no doubt that in the end the United States would accept the responsibilities in regard to the peace settlement, he said he was fearful of the effects of some of the things that are being said.

Crowd Vainly Tries to Get In

Applause repeatedly interrupted the speech, while outside the hall, a crowd, against which the police had closed the doors, kept up such a roar of cheering that his words sometimes were drowned out. Pounding on the walls and doors, the crowd vainly trying to get in, at last settled down to shouting in unison. "We want Wilson."

The President digressed to remark: "That applause is welcome but is inopportune."

The President was cheered when he said the idea of a league had come originally from Republicans.

"When the Republicans take that road I take off my hat and follow," he continued, "and I don't care whether I lead or not."

Others Jealous of Sovereignty.

Again discussing article 10 of the league of nations covenant, the President declared the United States was not the only nation that was jealous of its sovereignty, and consequently there was not the slightest chance that article 10 would be construed to override sovereignty in that respect.

The President said there was unrest everywhere and he had been concerned by the look of anxiety he saw on the faces of many of those he saw from day to day.

When he cited the Bolshevik regime in Russia and said he was going to vote all of his influence and authority to seeing that no minority gained control in the United States, the crowd again stood and cheered.

PRESIDENT'S LAUNCH IN A COLLISION AT FLEET REVIEW

Craft Runs Into Another at Seattle, but No One Is Hurt—Wilson Sees Armada From Oregon.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Sept. 13.—President Wilson today reviewed the great Pacific fleet from the decks of the history-famed battleship Oregon in Elliott Bay. The review followed the President's arrival from Tacoma and also followed an incident which nearly resulted in serious consequences for the presidential party when the President's launch collided bow-on with a naval whaleboat.

Arriving at the dock it was found the barge of Admiral Hugh Rodman, which was supposed to be awaiting the President, was not on hand. Commander P. W. Foote, personal aid to Secretary of the Navy Daniels, promptly took over a naval launch. Into this launch went the President and Mrs. Wilson, Secretary and Mrs. Daniels, Secret service men, secretaries and newspaper men.

As Cammander Foote ordered the launch shoved off, the small craft heeled over till the port rail was nearly under water. Starting ahead then, the craft ran bow-on into the whaleboat, giving the presidential party a severe jar. The President, however, sat serenely in the aft part of the launch and smiled.

At the close of the review the long line of destroyers had circled the Oregon when Secretary Daniels inquired of Capt. Ivan C. Wettengel, commander of the Oregon: "Do we get under way now, Captain?"

"Just as soon as the destroyers have all passed," the Captain replied.

"The destroyers are hove to," President Wilson put in.

Capt. Wettengel took a look, faced about and, touching his cap, said: "Aye, aye, sir."

Later the President signed the various visitors' books of the Oregon.

POLICE STRIKERS IN BOSTON WILL LOSE THEIR JOBS

prised that the strikers were willing to return temporarily if given their former status and without relinquishing their affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, as requested by Samuel Gompers, Curtis said: "In all these matters I act according to law as expressed to me by the Attorney General."

The only disturbance today was the killing of Gustav Gaist, 21 years old, of Dorchester, by a guardsman. Acording to the police Gaist and his brother, Vladimar, resisted a guardsman who told them to move on, and attempted to seize his rifle. Several other guardsmen rushed to his aid and in the struggle two shots were fired. One struck Gaist, the other Mrs. Mary Jacques of Back Bay, who happened to be standing near. She will recover.

Gompers Places Entire Blame on Commissioner Curtis.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, placed the entire blame for the Boston police strike on Police Commissioner Edwin Curtis in a statement issued here tonight.

"The situation in which the policemen found themselves today was provoked and practically forced upon them," the statement said, "by the autocratic action of Police Commissioner Curtis, who at any time might have honorably settled the dispute by such action as is naturally expected of a public official in his responsible position."

Gompers sent a telegram to Gov. Coolidge tonight asking him to take a broad view of the situation and give the opportunity for a cool, deliberate consideration "when the passions aroused shall have subsided."

"The question at issue is one of assumption of an unwarranted and autocratic position of the Commissioner of Police, who is not responsible to the people of Boston, but who is appointed by you," the message said.

House Bill Would Prevent Strikes by Policemen.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Prevention of strikes by policemen in the District of Columbia and of Government clerks all over the country is the purpose of a bill introduced today by Representative Blanton (Dem.), Texas.

This does not prevent district policemen from organizing, but if they strike they would be automatically discharged. The bill is limited to policemen of the District of Columbia because the Federal Government has no authority over officers of municipalities generally.

The bill recognizes the right of persons employed in the civil service of the United States to organize for improvement of conditions and of compensation, but adds the following:

"Nothing in this act shall be considered to permit or authorize membership by any employe of the United States of its territories or the District of Columbia, in any organization or association obligating, authorizing or permitting said employes to engage in any strike or proposing to assist in any strike against the United States, or any officer, bureau or department thereof, nor shall it be construed to authorize or permit any organization or association of said employes to affiliate or become affiliated with any other organization or association which obligates them to engage or agree to assist them in engaging in any strike."

FRANCIS TO BE HERE SEPT. 26

Dinner in His Honor Will Be Given at Missouri Athletic Association.

David R. Francis, American Ambassador to Russia, who is in the United States on leave of absence, will return home the first time since his arrival in this country on Friday, Sept. 26. Arrangements for a dinner in his honor were made at a meeting yesterday of Mayor Kiel, James E. Smith and P. V. Bunn of the Chamber of Commerce and E. C. Andrews of the Merchants' Exchange.

The dinner will cost $5 a plate, and will be held at the Missouri Athletic Association. Francis is expected to tell St. Louis, for the first time, of his experiences during the revolutionary days of Petrograd, an account which heretofore has only been given before the congressional committee.

PROF. MURRAY DENIES PACT TO AID FRANCE

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Sept. 13—Prof. Gilbert Murray whose knowledge of British diplomacy, like his integrity, is of the first order, is indignant over the efforts in Germany and in certain quarters in England to make out that there was a secret treaty or agreement between England and France pledging England to support France in a war against Germany and that the denials of the Asquith Government on this subject were untrue.

"The facts are well known," said the Professor. "In 1905 the French Government alarmed at what seemed to be an aggressive attitude on the part of Germany, directed Ambassador Paul Cambon to ask Sir Edward Grey, then minister of foreign affairs, for a definite promise of military support in case of an unprovoked attack by Germany. Grey refused both on the constitutional ground that no British foreign minister had the power to give such a promise and on the ground that in the event of danger of war arising the Commons and the country must be free to decide at the actual time whether or not they would have war. Prime Minister Sir Henry Campbell Bannerman, whom Grey consulted, took the same view and M. Cambon entirely accepted it.

"Then M. Cambon put forward his second point. 'Granted' he said, 'that you cannot give any pledge binding the country beforehand, still it is obvious that the danger of an unprovoked attack by Germany is a real danger. Suppose it occurs and suppose then that you wish to come to our aid.

"You will not be able to do so unless we have made beforehand some joint study of the situation. I do not ask you to agree to help, but I do ask you to consider with us beforehand what form your help may most effectively take if you do give it. It will be too late to consider such questions when the time

Grey agreed, again after consultation with Campbell-Bannerman, that it would not do in case of a German attack to be taken unprepared. Conversations followed between the French and English staffs and plans were made for the landing if necessary of an expeditionary force. At the same time Secretary Grey wrote a formal letter and received a similar letter from Ambassador Cambon stating definitely that the conversations and discussions of contingent plans in no way constituted a pledge. If an English force was ever sent it was to consist of six divisions.

"Now comes a statement by M. Pokrowsky, official Bolshevist editor, that in a private interview between Secretary Grey and the Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. Sazonof, in 1912, Grey assured Sazonof that England was bound by a secret agreement to support France in case of a war with Germany. Pokrowsky was not present and omits to say what is his authority. As a matter of fact his statement is demonstrably wrong. It is clear from the diplomatic correspondence of July, 1914, that the French Government knew of no such agreement. As late as July, 1914, two years after the alleged interview described by Pokrowsky, Paul Cambon was asking Grey to make such an agreement and Grey was refusing. It is equally sure from the diplomatic correspondence that M. Sazonof knew of no such agreement simply, of course, because there was none."

MEXICANS SEIZE TWO AMERICANS

Mining Men and Payroll Taken From Train in Chihuahua.

By the Associated Press.

CHIHUAHUA CITY, Mexico, Sept. 13.—Dr. J. M. Smith and E. Monson, believed to be American mining men, were captured by a band of 10 armed mounted Mexicans nine miles from this city early today, according to an authentic report received here tonight.

They were taken from a mining company train, which was robbed of the payroll of the Buena Tierra mines.

RAILWAY WORKERS SAY CUMMINS BILL MEANS REVOLUTION

Heads of Organizations Unite in Denouncing Anti-Strike Provisions of Railroad Control Measure.

ALL IN FAVOR OF PLUMB PROPOSAL

Campaign for Favorable Congress to Adopt "Comprehensible and Constructive" Plan Is Referred To.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—Denouncing the anti-strike provisions of the Cummins bill for railroad control, heads of all the organized railway workers of the country joined here today in a formal declaration that its enactment would "spell the birth of revolution."

Signed by the chiefs of the four great brotherhods, the heads of ten other unions and the American Federation of Labor—all of whom sponsor the so-called Plumb plan—the declaration disclaims being a threat, but is announcedas a "statement of obvious fact." At the same time it makes reference to the plan of the railway men to campaign for a favorable Congress.

Attributing to the railway workers only a belief in "the consent of the governed in industry as well as in politics," the declaration says more than two million men have presented to Congress "a comprehensive and constructive" plan for the solution of the railroad problem; have engaged able counsel to represent them and have resolved to avail themselves of every possible channel of the government to win a hearing for it before the bar of public opinion."

The right to strike, the declaration sets out, is a last resort inherited from American free institutions and traditions and to prohibit it would be "madness." The proposal contained in the Cummins bill is charcterized as "cynically disregardful of the public welfare," and "a step calculated only further to increase the dificulties that confront the nation."

UNITED MINE WORKERS INDORSE PLUMB PLAN FOR RAILROADS

Cleveland Convention Also Proposes Alliance With Trainmen's Brotherhoods for Joint Action.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., Sept. 13.—The United [illegible] Workers' convention today in[illegible] the Plumb p[illegible] for nationalization of railroads, pledged the support of the miners' organization to [illegible] its enactment, and invited the railroad brotherhoods to join with them in an alliance for joint action, to be later extended into an economic alliance with labor organizations in other basic industries

Assurances were given that the railway organizations were now ready to act with them

Glenn E. Plumb addressed the convention before the adoption of the resolution, explaining at length the Plumb plan as affecting railroads and the possibility of its application to mining and other basic industries.

"We have, however, not a chance in the world to pass the Plumb bill through the present Congress," Plumb informed the miners.

BLIND MAN AMONG 14 ACCUSED OF GAMBLING WITH CARDS

Police Judge Discharges All Defendants Because There Was No Evidence of Playing for Money.

Police Lieutenant Stinger, in charge of the gambling squad, was in police court yesterday to prosecute 14 men, one of whom was blind, on a charge of playing cards for money in Joseph Cavasine's restaurant at 1318 Franklin avenue.

The blind man, William Harris of 4028 Page boulevard, denied he was playing cards and Stinger did not explain how he could have done so with the ordinary cards produced in evidence. Harris admitted that when arrested he said to Stinger that it was no crime to play cards, as he understood from a newspaper which was read to him that Mayor Kiel played poker.

Judge Mix discharged Harris and the other 13 defendants, as there was no evidence cards had been played for money.

BADLY BEATEN BY CONDUCTOR

William Cluskey, 47 years old, a shoe cutter, living at 915 Westgate avenue, says that when he boarded an Olive car at Sarah street last night at 9:30 and gave the conductor a quarter, he received a plugged nickel in his change. In the altercation which followed Clusky was badly beaten by the conductor, Carroll Combs, 23 years old, who lives at 1050 Hamilton avenue.

Cluskey was taken to the city hospital suffering from a fractured nose, a black eye and numerous bruises on the face. He is held a prisoner there, while Combs is locked up at the Laclede Avenue Station. Each is charged with disturbing the other's peace.

LAWSON AIR-LINER, WITH NINE ABOARD, REACHES NEW YORK

26-Passenger Craft Makes Flight From Syracuse, 313 Miles, in 2 Hours 47 Minutes.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Interrupting their bridge game from time to time to observe the cloudscapes through the windows of their cabin fusilage, four passengers reached Mitchel Field, Mineola, this morning aboard the Lawson 26-passenger air liner in a flight that occupied two hours and 47 minutes. It left Syracuse at 8 o'clock, and the distance traveled was estimated at 313 miles.

The passengers were protected from the rush of wind created by their transit at 111 miles an hour by celluloid windows smoked to guard against the sun glare. In the pilot's seat sat Alfred W. Lawson and Charles Cox, assistant pilot. They had dual controls, so that when either got tired the other could run the ship alone.

The passengers were Mr. and Mrs. Walter Carrier of Syracuse, Miss Anne B. Cowne and John Cullum, the latter two representing Syracuse newspapers. Vincent Buranelli was the engineer, and Carl Schorny and Alfred S. Suini, mechanics. Altogether the craft carried nine.

It was more than a flight from Syracuse that the plane finished at Mineola, for it has been on the go pretty steady for the past month, ever since it left Milwaukee for Chicago. It flew from the Windy City to Cleveland, then to Toledo, to Buffalo and Syracuse.

KANSAS CITY RAILWAYS AGREES TO HALT INCREASE OF FARES

Mayor Announces Three Verbal Promises Made by Traction Corporation Head.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 13.—After a conference today between President Kealy of the Kansas City Railways Co. and Mayor Cowgill, the latter announced thae these points had been agreed upon verbally by the railways official: 1. That there shall be no further increse in fares; 2, that there shall be no discrepancy between fares on the Missouri side and the Kansas side (this point to be dependent upon the Kansas side arbitration); 3, that within 30 days it would have equipment sufficient to give "standard service" on every line that would be satisfactory to the city officials and to the public.

Qualifying the first of these points, Mayor Cowgill said it was to be interpreted that the company would not take advantage of the 8-cent fare granted it by the Missouri Public Service Commission.

Further conference will be necessary, the Mayor admitted, on the point that promises this city the same fare as the Kansas side, which, as it now stands, would mean a 6-cent fare here. It has been reported unofficially that the Federal Court arbiters on the Kansas side would sanction the 6-cent fare. There is indication that the company expected to get a 7-cent fare on the Kansas side.

The "standard service" promised under the third point will be possible, the Mayor said.

An ordinance passed by the City Council requiring jitneys to take out a liability bond, which will put hundreds of the 1000 cars operating out of business, has not been signed by the Mayor.

SOLDAN HIGH SCHOOL TO HOLD CONSTITUTION DAY EXERCISES

Public Is Invited to Meeting Wednesday Night—Attendance of Boy Scouts Is Requested.

A meeting in observance of Constitution day will be held at Soldan High School, Union boulevard and Kensington avenue, Wednesday night, under the auspices of the Bar Association of St. Louis. The public is invited, and the attendance of Boy Scouts is requested. The names of speakers will be announced later.

A proclamation issued last week by Gov. Gardner requested that Wednesday be observed as Constitution day, and that public gatherings be held throughout the State.

REFUSED TO TAKE $50 REWARD

The refusal of Police Sergt. Joseph T. Logan, Mounted District, to accept a $50 reward because of sympathy for the family of the man he had arrested as a deserter was brought to the attention of the Police Board yesterday by Lieutenant-Commander E. A. Brooks of the navy recruiting station.

After the arrest Sergt. Logan found that the father of the prisoner was a tubercular patient at the city hospital, leaving the mother and a 9-year-old son without support. The Sergeant not only reqeusted the Government not to pay the customary reward to him, but asked that it be used for the benefit of the family. He also made arrangements with the Red Cross to take further care of the family.

Pershing Acknowledges Telegram.

A telegram of thanks has been received from Gen. Pershing following his arrival in New York by Alfred Fairbank, manager of the Southwestern Division of the Red Cross, in reply to greetings telegraphed the General upon his return. Gen. Pershing's telegram follows: "Please convey my sincere thanks to the Red Cross Chapters of Missouri, Arkansas, Texas, Kansas and Oklahoma for their cordial message of welcome and appreciation which I deeply appreciate as an evidence of their good will."

Bones in Vacant Flat Not Human.

Several bones found in a flat at 768 Bayard avenue, when Mrs. David L. Allen moved into the place early in the week, have been examined by M. C. Woodruff, Health Department diagnostician, who believes they were the bones of a calf or other animal and not from a human body.

JAPANESE DEFENDS SHANTUNG ATTITUDE

Peace Delegate, Interviewed Here, Says His Nation Will Return Kiauchau.

Yosuke Matsuoka, secretary in the Department of Foreign Affairs at Tokio and a member of the Japanese peace delegation, passed through St. Louis yesterday on his way home from Paris, and gave to the Post-Dispatch a statement regarding the Shantung question from the point of view of his Government. He declared that even if Japan had kept Kiauchau and the other German concessions in Shantung, she would have been depriving China of nothing, as these areas, although situated in China, were German territory.

Matsouka spent most of his youth in this country, and says that he considers Portland, Ore., as his second home. He attended high school at Oakland, Cal. Returning to Japan at the age of 21, he finished his education in Tokio, and entered the Foreign Office 15 years ago. He was sent to Paris last January with Baron Makino, second Japanese delegate to the peace congress.

Regarding the peace treaty and the league of nations, Matsuoka says that while these instruments are not perfect and represent compromises in many ways, yet he believes they also represent a step in advance toward the idealism of international justice, and certainly not a step backwards. They will be so regarded and acted upon in Japan, he was emphatic in saying.

Why Japan Delays Action.

The reason Japan has not ratified the treaty as yet, he explained, was due to the delay requisite for making a careful translation of the bulky tome into Japanese. The Japanese Emperor has sole power to ratify without consulting the House of Peers or the House of Representatives, but he will be advised by the Privy Council, consisting of 40 of the most eminent subjects of Japan.

Matsuoka pointed out as a fact almost unnoted in this country that the British Government, in submitting the treaty to Parliament for ratification, took a step never before adopted in the history of England, where the Government has had sole authority to conclude treaties.

"A nation which can accomplish so tremendous an innovation without the least fuss," he said admiringly, "which can quietly set so epochal a precedent, is a race worthy to have an unwritten Constitution."

"Japan's position with regard to Shantung," his interview begins, "may be stated as follows:

"Japan entered the war at the very beginning, as an ally of Great Britain, and drove the Germans out of their fortified base in Shantung, at a cost of 1800 lives, not to speak of the money spent. The reduction of this German stronghold, together with the capture of the German bases on the South Sea Islands, was largely responsible for cutting off at the roots the German marauding expeditions in the Pacific, the Indian Ocean and the South Seas.

Took Shantung From Germans.

"The leased territory of Kiauchan, although geographically situated in China, was to all intents and purposes German territory. Japan took this German territory, with other German concessions and properties in Shantung, from the Germans and not from the Chinese.

"But Japan proposes of her own free will to restore Kiauchau to China and to dispose of other German rights in Shantung along lines which will be conducive to co-operation between the Chinese and the Japanese. The question after all is very simple, and the undertaking, seen in this light, is certainly fair, if not magnanimous, on the part of Japan.

"Some persons seem to have doubts as to whether Japan will carry out her promises or not. In this regard I should like to say that Japan has not been and is not in a position to act in the matter until the ratification of the Treaty of Versailles takes place, whereby Japan may acquire definitely the rights that Germany possessed. Of course, Japan cannot dispose of Kiauchau and the other German concessions until she actually and legally acquires title thereto.

"I believe, knowing the American mind, that the Americans will suspend judgment on this question until Japan herself has had an opportunity to prove herself.

Japan's Valiant Struggle.

"Apart from this particular phase of Far Eastern affairs, I may say that Japan, which is only a little larger than the State of California, with perhaps less natural resources, has been fighting and struggling for the past half century, amid European and Asiatic intrigues. Without in any way meaning to be boastful, I believe Japan can justly claim credit for a fair success in her struggle to preserve herself and to preserve the Far East in general from outside encroachments. The 50 years' history of Japan's valiant struggle, with what little resources she has had, deserves, I trust, the sympathy, if not the admiration, of every true American.

JAPANESE PEACE ENVOY INTERVIEWED IN ST. LOUIS

"Among the Western Powers, America has contributed most to the upbuilding of modern Japan. The Japan that has emerged as one of the great world Powers out of an almost hopeless struggle, with all the odds against her in the beginning, is in part an American handiwork. America and Japan, together with China, will no doubt be the great determinating factors in molding the character of the coming civilization on the Pacific. When we realize that awful responsibility, every thinking man should put forth his best efforts in bringing about a sound and healthy understanding among these three nations.

"I trust that the American people, who have contributed so much in the past towards helping Japan to her feet, will still have faith in Japan, and co-operate with her in the great task of finally uniting the East and the West."

ORDINANCE FOR COMPULSORY MEDICAL TREATMENT IS VALID

The validity of a city ordinance, requiring compulsory medical examination and treatment of certain women was upheld yesterday by Circuit Judge Hall, who denied the petition for a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of a woman who was arrested Aug. 9 and who now is under medical treatment at the detention hospital.

The ordinance was passed last July at the request of the Federal Government, for the protection of soldiers and sailors. The woman was arrested on written complaint made by a sailor.

DAY'S SALES OF ARMY FOOD NEARLY $2900

Tenth Ward Improvement Association Estimates Number of Persons Served at 2000.

Sales of surplus army food at the Tenth Ward Improvement Asociation's store at 3908 South Broadway, steadily increase, yesterday's total being nearly $2900, according to Arthur Stoehr, president of the association. This is the largest amount taken in on any day of the sale

There were about 400 persons waiting when the sale began at 9:30 a. m. A policeman stated that he saw an old man with a basket waiting outside the store at 4:30 a. m. Many in the line waited for hours. Several husbands who had been brought along by their wives to carry the food home, were seen attempting to persuade their wives to leave the line on account of the long wait, but they were unsuccessful. The line did not disappear until 3 p. m.

Not more than one can of cocoa, one can of pineapple or one package of raisins could be purchased by the same person because of the small quantity of these goods on hand. The supply of pineapple was exhausted before 11 o'clock. It was announced that 200 cases will be on sale next Wednesday, when the sale will be resumed.

Raisins were 10 cents for a 15-ounce package; 25-ounce cans of assorted jam sold for 24 cents, and 8-ounce bottles of vanilla extract sold for 33 cents. Of a total of 804 cases of all kinds of goods, 15 cases remained at the close of the sale.

Members of the Tenth Ward Improvement Association assisting at the sale believed that more than 2000 people were served. Veterans of the Spanish-American war, they say, are most enthusiastic over the sale because of the pork and beans. "If I had been given such beans as these during the war, I'd have thought I was in heaven," said one veteran as he purchased a case.

ITALIAN TREATY REPORT SAYS ALLIES CANNOT TRY WILHELM

Commission Declares Crimes Attributed to Him Were not Contemplated by Law.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Thursday, Sept. 11.—Luigi Luzzatti, former Premier, presented today to the Chamber of Deputies a report of the Parliamentary Commission entrusted with the examination of the peace treaty with Germany.

Concerning the trial of former Emperor William the report says:

"Crimes attributed to the former Emperor were not contemplated in any penal code. Nobody can be called to answer and be punished for acts which when committed did not constitute a crime contemplated by law. The society of nations may establish for the future the criminal status of offenses against international morals or disregard of treaties, lay down the procedure for judging the culprit and provide for the penalty, but Count Hohenzollern's accusers cannot appoint judges, and it is impossible to ask Holland to extradite her guest for political crimes not within the purview of present treaties. The former Emperor must be placed in a condition where he can do no further harm but the eternal ideals which guarantee public and private law must be saved.

HOOVER RETURNS, SAYS LEAGUE IS A PRESSING NEED

DECLARES BOLSHEVIK DANGER HAS PASSED

He Tells Questioner Crest of High Prices Has Been Reached and Downward Tendency Shown.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Herbert Hoover, former Director-General of Allied Relief, came home today after five years' service abroad, during which he distributed more than 600 steamship or 3,239,988 cars of foodstuffs valued at $770,795,000 to starving Europe.

"I hope never to go back to Europe again," he declared in a statement soon after he landed from the Aquitania. "Since August, 1914, I have devoted my entire time and energy to war work and with the exception of nine months I spent the entire five years away from my family. I have no plans other than to go home. All of my official activities having been completed, I am once more a 'common or garden variety' of American. I am not a partisan and am not in politics in any form."

The last statement was elicited by a question as to whether he approved mention of his name as a presidential possibilitiy.

The task of America in Europe now is greater than before the armistice, he declared, adding that it was chiefly economic and had to do with the restoration of trade and commerce, to accomplish which the United States should extend ample credits through "normal commercial methods," and not by Government action.

"If we are going to market our normal exports next year," he explained, "we shall have to extend these credits."

Hoover declares he favored the league of nations idea and that that there could be no stability obroad until "peace is actually established." He said the crest has been reached in high prices for food and that for more than a month there had been a downward tendency. He approved the Government price of $2.26 a bushel for wheat as a world level, although in Europe wheat now is bringing $2.75 a bushel.

Bolshevism on Wane.

One great need of Europe and Asia Minor at present, he said, was milk for 4,000,000 emaciated and under-nourished children. Herds of animals have been depleted by the war and no one could tell how long it would take to restore them. Certainly all Europe faced an acute milk famine for at least a year.

One hopeful sign of conditions abroad, Hoover said, was the subsidence of the wave of unrest. The danger of Bolshevism, economically and politically, passed last February, he said, and it was rapidly disintegrating as a philosophy. The Hungarian situation also, he said, was "clearing."

Discussing speculation in food, here and abroad, Hoover said he did not think international action against profiteering was necessary. He was of the opinion that there were economic reasons why prices should fall of their own weight. He explained that a large amount of speculation was based on the assumption that there would be an abnormal demand for food in Central Europe as soon as peace came. There was such a demand, he said, but Central Europe, lacking the gold or products to pay for the food, was "tightening its belt" and going without.

"Can Germany pay its indemnity and live?" he was asked.

"That no mortal soul knows," he replied. "Certainly she can't pay unless she is given an opportunity to restore normal conditions and procure raw materials. Europe is filled with anxiety with the prospect of the withdrawal of our intervention. Every Government lodged a protest at the withdrawal of our economic administration. The delay in making peace has had a terrible effect over there.

Favors League As It Is.

"I stand for the league of nations as it is or as nearly as it can be obtained. The peace treaty is constructed around the idea of a league of nations instead of the idea of a 'balance of power.' If the league of nations is not carried through, the whole treaty, in my opinion, will fall to the ground. Attempts may be made even after the league of nations is a fact to re-establish the 'balance of power;' but they would be sure to die."

Questioned about the honors which had been offered him by a number of European rulers in recognition of his services, Hoover said:

"I have refused to accept every button in Europe and I have not brought home with me a single decoration. I have accepted three or four honorary degrees of Doctor of Laws from universities, but that is all. I am of the opinion that decorations and medals should be reserved for soldiers who have distinguished themselves on the field of battle."

BOY, WHO WITH SEATMATE AT SCHOOL, IS MISSING

BERT BRADBURY ...

TWO BOYS MYSTERIOUSLY MISSING SINCE TUESDAY

Gilfred Hildebrand and Bert Bradbury, Each 12, Disappeared After Leaving School.

Although private detectives have run down many clews, no trace has been found of Gilfred (Freddy) Hildebrand of 4001 Lucky street, and Bert Bradbury, 4069 Lincoln avenue, two 12-year-old pupils of the Bates School, Spring and North Market street, who disappeared last Tuesday afternoon.

On the night of the day following the disappearance the Kinloch telephone at the Bradbury residence rang and when Mrs. Bradbury answered she heard a voice, which she believed to be that of her son, say: "Is that you, pop?" Before Mrs. Bradbury could reply the telephone connection was broken.

Mrs. Bradbury believes that her son was prevented from talking to her.

Another feature which adds mystery to the case is the statement of other pupils that they overheard Bradbury tell his seatmate, Hildebrand, that he had to see a lady after school. Bradbury's parents say that they have no idea as to the possible identity of a woman who might have had occasion to see the boy after schol.

Neither of the boys had any funds, so far as their parents know, when they left school.

WIFE CONFESSES SHE KILLED NEGRO FOUND ON VACANT LOT

Says She Knocked Him Down With Hatchet When He Reached for Revolver During Quarrel.

Following 15 hours' questioning, Mrs. Ida Murdock, 38 years old, a negress of 3215 Lawton avenue, confessed to Lieut. Gunn at the Laclede Avenue Police Station last night that she murdered her husband, Oscar Murdock, 45, a Pullman dining car conductor, whose body was found at 5 a. m. yesterday on a vacant lot adjoining 3330 Pine street. She said she used a hatchet, inflicting seven wounds on the face, neck and hands and causing a fracture of the skull.

The woman stoutly denied all day yesterday that she knew anything of how her husband met his death, but the police persisted in questioning her, as blood stains and evidence of a struggle were found in her house.

She said her husband came home from a trip at noon Friday and complained he could not find $116 which he had hidden in the house and demanded that she account for it. He left the house, she said, and returned in the afternoon, again demanding that she account for the money. He left and returned a second time, at 10 p. m., and quarreled with her until 1 a. m., when she said, he threatened to kill her.

He advanced toward a closet where he kept a revolver, she said, and she seized a hatchet and knocked him down. He arose and fled from the house, according to her story, and she followed him to the lot where his body was found, hacking him as he ran.

KANSAS CITY WOMEN CHARGED WITH MURDER ARE ACQUITTED

Three Defendants Maintained Woodruff Was Shot by Negro—Jury Deliberates 5½ Hours.

By the Associated Press.

OLATHE, Kan., Sept. 13.—Emmet L. Thomas, Mrs. Blanche Brown and Mrs. Margaret Love of Kansas City, charged with the murder of Herbert G. Woodruff, Thomas' partner in a garage, were acquitted by a jury here today. Six ballots were taken during the five and one-half hours' deliberation, the first showing seven to five for acquittal, it was said.

The murder charge grew out of the killing several weeks ago of Woodruff when the party of four had made an automobile trip into an unfrequented part of Johnson County, Kan., adjacent to Kansas City.

WEISENBERGER WILL SPEAK

Will Discuss City Building and Advertising Convention.

Because St. Louis is preparing a municipal advertising campaign to begin Jan. 1, 1919, there is general interest on the part of civic organizations here in the community advertising departmental program of the fifteenth annual convention of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World to be held in New Orleans from Sept. 21 to 25.

The President of this departmental is C. F. Hatfield, and the secretary is Harry M. Crutcher, both of St. Louis.

On the pragrom for the first day is W. B. Weisenberger, secretary of the Publicity Bureau of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, who will talk on "Merchandising Methods as Applied to City Building."

HAY POINTS OUT WHAT WILSON WON AT PEACE PARLEY

Replies to Assertions by U. S. Senator Johnson in Anti-League Speeches, in Address to 250 Women.

SAYS AMERICANISM IS ISSUE IN FIGHT

Four Big Principles Obtained in Covenant Declared to Mean Extension of American Influence and Power.

Charles M. Hay, St. Louis lawyer, speaking before 250 business and professional women at the luncheon of the Town Club, 755 Century Building, yesterday, replied to assertions made by Senator Hiram W. Johnson in his speeches here Friday.

He answered Senator Johnson's charges that the British Empire has six votes to one for the United States in the affairs of the league of nations. He showed that the British Empire has but one vote in the council, the governing body of the league. In the assembly of the league, the United Kingdom and five self-governing dominions have each one vote, but these six votes can be vetoed by the one vote of the United States or any other nation, since decisions of the assembly must have the unanimous concurrence of the council members.

He furthermore pointed out that the separate representation of the British dominions in the assembly is a concession to the dominions, and not to the mother country, England, which might prefer to vote them as a unit if they were not too independent to be handled in that manner. There is no more certainty, Hay argued, that Canada or Australia would vote with England on a given question than there is that Brazil would vote with the United States.

Hay began by replying to Johnson's charges that President Wilson had been a loser in the game of diplomacy at the peace conference. He said, in part:

How the President "Lost."

I heard Senator Johnson's speech at the City Club. His personal references to the President I pass by. The Senator's feelings seem to be hurt. After months of silence under malign attacks the President talks back. That isn't fair! This spoilt child from California has been slapped by a bigger boy and now he runs to tell his mama!

"He says the President, to use a far-Western phrase, 'sat in the other fellow's game,' and as usual, lost. Let's get the picture. The President sat at the table with the representatives of the Old world order, playing for a better order. With men whose countries have believed in the arbitrament of the sword, he played for arbitration and discussion. At the end of the play he comes back with covenants pledging the nations to the peaceful settlement of all disputes.

"With peoples who have believed in arms and armaments as guarantors of peace, he played for disarmament. He comes back with their solemn recognition of the evils of great armaments and their signature to a practicable plan to accomplish disarmament.

"With governments that believed in the doctrine that might made right, he played for the recognition of the sanctity of the rights of great and small alike, and he comes back with the nations pledged to respect the territory and independence of each other and by their combined might to protect each other.

"With ministers whose pockets were bulging with secret treaties he played for open covenants. He comes back with this covenant in the treaty:

Every convention or international engagemnt entered into henceforward by any member of the league shall be forthwith registered with the Secretariat, and shall, as soon as possible, be published by it. No such treaty or international engagement shall be binding until so registered.

"These are but a part of his achievements. But these things were won, and won while the men for whom he played—some of them, th Johnsons, Lodges, Reeds and Borahs—were slipping cards to the other fellows. But for their betrayal he would have won more. Let us not permit them now to lose us what has been won. Remember these are the big things:

1. Peaceful settlement of disputes.
2. Disarmament.
3. Preservation of the rights of peoples, great and small alike.
4. Open treaties.

Four Great American Principles.

"These are American principles. For them we have stood throughout our history. The other nations now stand ready to accept them. Their acceptance by the other nations will mean an extension of America's influence and power in the world. Will America suffer professional politicians, masquerading as Americans, to lead them into a betrayal of these sacred principles as the world stands ready to accept them? Yes, the fight is on the issue of Americanism. The burning question is: Shall America be true to the principles that have made America great and extend those principles through the world, or shall we surrender and be driven into a course and policy for which the Old World has stood, and with which humanity has been cursed?

"He inveighs against article 10, saying that it 'freezes the world into immutability,' 'makes the world a static world.' If he had read Article 10 he knows that that statement is not true. There is not a line or a syllable denying to any people the right to change its territorial or political status by internal force or by agreement and peaceful negotiation. This is the language:

The members of the league undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the league. In case of any such aggression o rin case of any threat or danger of such aggression, the council shall advise upon the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled.

"Note the language, external aggression. In other words, the nations undertake to secure each other against international robbery. This covenant no more prevents internal changes in government than the law against burglary of homes prevents the housewife from moving the furniture.

"True to the anti-league orator's form, he fanned the flame of prejudice against England. First he declared her a bankrupt, anxious to secure a partnership with this one solvent nation, and then denounced her as the world's great landlord, zealous to secure our aid in the protection of her wealth.

What England Agrees to Do.

"Let's see what England, among other things, agrees to do:

1. Peacefully to settle all disputes that may arise between her and any other country. See Article 15.
2. To co-operate with the nations to reduce armaments. See Article 8.
3. To respect and to help preserve the territory and political independence of every other nation. See Article 10.
4. To register and cause to be published every treaty hereafter made with any nation, agreeing that no secret treaty shall be binding. See Article 18.
5. To undertake to secure just treatment of the native inhabitants under their control.

"What selfish thing has England to gain by these agreements.

"But it is said that England has six votes to our one. If it is meant by that statement to convey the idea that England has six times the voting power in the league of nations that the United States has, the assertion is an absolute and unqualified falsehood.

"Senator Johnson went through the New England States deliberately leaving the impression that the British empire had six votes in the council, as against one of the other eight nations represented in the council. He left the impression by just the sort of misleading, and I say deliberately misleading, statement that he made before the City Club yesterday. He did not have the fairness to call his hearers' attention to the provisions of the constitution granting the voting power in the council, and in the assembly, to the nations given voting power. I call your attention to these provisions, section by section. I challenge you to read them and analyze them. Here are the provisions:

"In the governing body, the council, the British Empire has one vote; the United States, France, Italy, Japan, Belgium, Brazil, Greece and Spain, each has one vote. In the assembly, the British empire has one, Canada, Australia, South Africa, New Zealand, India and the other nations, each has one.

"Now, the assembly, under the league constitution, can pass upon two classes of matters, in which we might be concerned: First, a matter not the subject of dispute between the nations; second, matters in dispute.

The Voting System.

"If the assembly acts upon some matter not in dispute, then its action must be by unanimous vote of the entire assembly. Hence, any one nation can prevent action by the assembly upon the matter. The smallest country in the world, is therefore, as powerful as the greatest. England's six votes, granting for the moment thatthey may all be termed England's votes, are no more effective than our one vote.

"In fact, England proper, assuming that England proper will always be wanting to put something over, might be checked in her endeavor by the vote of any one of her colonies. Hence, by increasing the number of votes in the assembly, arbitrary and unjust action at the instance of any one power is rendered all the more difficult. This applies to England as well as to all other countries. Hence, it is difficult to see what special advantage England may hope to secure in passing upon this class of matters, in view of the rule prescribed in article 5, requiring unanimous voting.

"Turning now to matters in dispute, either party to a dispute may refer the matter either to the council or to the assembly. If the dispute be referred to the council, then the council may institute an inquiry and make a finding of fact, with recommendations thereon only upon and every member of the council, exclusive of the parties in interest. If the matter be referred to the assembly, then the same action may be taken by the assembly upon a majority vote, but such majority vote must be concurred in by all the members of the council, exclusive of the parties in interest. Hence, it is apparent that upon a matter of dispute, before England proper can secure a recommendation against a nation by the assembly, she must secure a majority of the assembly and every member of the counsil, exclusive of the parties in interest.

"Upon this matter, it is the contention of the President that if England were interested, none of her colonies could vote. Hence the six votes would count no more than one vote, since none could be cast. But let us grant, for the sake of argument, that only England proper would be excluded, and that the colonies would vote. Then England must secure, with the aid of her colonies, a majority of the assembly and every vote in the council. Hence, whether the matter of dispute be referred to the council alone or to the assembly, England cannot escape the unanimous vote of the council; she cannot avoid the check that may be imposed by any one country.

"Furthermore, before England can be considered as having an undue advantage in the assembly itself, we must presume that the colonies will always vote with England. This, I submit, is a rather violent presumption. So far as our influence in the assembly, as compared with England's, is concerned, it is a no more violent presumption to claim that the Central and South American states would vote with us, than to presume that the colonies would always vote with England.

Own Colonies May Call England.

"But note this further significant thing: Since Canada, Australia and the other self-governing divisions of the British Empire are made members of the league, any one of these members may call England to account before the league of nations and ask for an adjustment of a difficulty by the league council or assembly without dealing single-handed with England. Must not any fair-minded man admit that this arrangement will lead to a greater and greater degree of independence of the colonies from the mother country? It would be much to the advantage of England proper to be able to cast the full weight of the entire British Empire by the single vote of England than by the granting of a separate vote to the divisions of the empire.

"Would any American wish to extend to any part of this republic the right to vote against this republic upon any issue? Will any American have the effrontery to say that it would be to our advantage to extend the power to any state in the Union to vote against us upon any issue that might arise? I prefer that the vote of America be a unit vote. I would prefer to take no chances upon a division in our own country. If gentlemen would tell the exact truth, they would inform the people of this country that the votes given the colonies and dominions of the British Empire are given, not upon the request and at the instance of England, but upon the request and at the instance of the colonies and dominions themselves. They do not want England empowered to cast their votes upon all issues.

"In the light of this analysis, can there be any excuse for gentlemen with eyes to see and a tongue to speak, who will seek to prejudice the people by such a perversion of fact and argument? Such efforts are as contemptible as they are inexcusable."

"Flu," if it Reappears, Will Not Be as Severe as Last Year, Dr. Blue Says

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—"Will the "Flu" come back this year?"

This question, being asked by thousands of scientists and millions of laymen throughout the world, is discussed by Surgeon-General Blue of the Public Health Service in an official bulletin in which it is said the plague probably will reappear but not as severe as last winter.

"Probably, but by no means certainly, there will be a recurrence of the influenza epidemic this year," says Gen. Blue. "Indications are that, should it occur it will not be as severe as the pandemic of the previous winter. City officials, state and city boards of health, should be prepared in the event of a recurrence. The fact that a previous attack brings immunity in a certain percentage of cases should allay fear on the part of those afflicted in the previous epidemic.

"'Influenza is spread by direct and indirect contact. It is not yet certain that the germ has been isolated, or discovered, and, as a consequence, there is yet no positive preventive, except the enforcement of rigid rules of sanitation and the avoidance of personal contact. A close relation between the influenza pandemic and the constantly increasing pneumonia mortality rate prior to the fall of 1919 is recognized. It is now believed that the disease was pretty widely disseminated throughout the country before it was recognized in its epidemic state.

"Contrary to the opinion expressed frequently during the early weeks of last year's pandemic by a number of observers, the studies of the public health service indicate that the epidemic was not a fresh importation from abroad. Careful study of the mortality statistics of the United States shows that there were a number of extensive, though mild forerunners, during the previous three or four years."

STOVE COMPANY MANAGER DIES

Julius Hartig, 54 years old, of 3220 Indiana avenue, manager of the A. G. Brauer Wholesale Stove and Furniture Co., died at 3 p. m. yesterday at the Lutheran Hospital, following an operation.

He had been in the employ of the company 34 years and had a wide acquaintance in the trade. He is survived by three brothers and three sisters. He was a Mason and a bachelor.

CAMPAIGN OPENED TO GET ADHERENTS TO "PLUMB PLAN"

St. Louis Railway Employes in League Will Join in Organization's Appeal for Favor by Congress.

PLANS ARE GIVEN MUCH PUBLICITY

Dues Are $1 a Year for Individual Members and Each Lodge or Local Is Expected to Pay $10 for Charter.

An active campaign has been instituted among the St. Louis railroad employes to swell the membership of the "Plumb Plan League," a nation-wide organization formed to urge adoption by Congress of the process evolved by Glenn E. Plumb, a Chicago attorney, for the permanent settlement of the transportation problem, by retiring private capital from control and giving the classified rail workers substantial representation in the management and operation of the lines.

Printed matter setting forth the aim of the league is being widely circulated, and the official publications of the leading railway bodies are strongly urging both the plan and the campaign. The dues for the individual members are placed at $1 per year, while each lodge or local will be expected to pay $10 for membership.

Space in Official Journal.

In its September number the official journal of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, one of the newer branches of the organized transportation workers, a liberal space allotment is given in a sweeping indorsement of the plan and the members generally are urged to get in and bring their friends.

As there are nearly two million men in the railroad organization and many thousands of lodges and locals, a very large campaign fund will result, if all enter the league.

Wall street and private ownership are severely handled in most of the literature and there are hints of trouble, if the railroads are restored to their owners. Some of the pointed paragraphs in the League circular appearing in the current number of the Carmen's Brotherhood follow:

"The Plumb Plan League has been formed for the purpose of uniting in a single organization the millions of patriotic and home-loving American citizens who believe that the time has come when the public must take over the railroads of the country.

"The financial panic which it is formed to prevent is threatened by the demand of the railroad interests for the return of the railroads to private control on terms certain to result in disaster.

"This crisis which endangers the workers and the general public is a menace to the progress and prosperity of the people of the United States.

"The leading financiers of Wall street and the most prominent railway 'executives' declare that this crisis is coming unless their wishes are complied with. Other equally competent authorities assert that the plans of the railroad interests are certain to result in disaster if the railroads are 'given back' on their terms."

"Not a Fair Test."

Part of the literary activity of the League, it appears from the circulars, will be directed to convince the voters that the present management of the lines and systems is not a fair test of Government ownership. The issue may be carried into the next presidential campaign.

"Our fight is the fight of the whole people," it is declared, "but it is our duty and privilege to serve, like the minute men of 1775, as the advance guard in the struggle for economic independence, which is to be fought in the halls of Congress this year and perhaps in the presidential campaign next year."

The recently formed Brotherhood of Railway Clerks in the Labor Day parade carried banners asserting their approval of the plan and protesting the suggestion that there was any similarity between the Plumb plan and the Russian soviet system.

Railroad officials, when questioned concerning the activity of the employes for the plan recently placed before Congress, declined to make any comment.

Among the employes affiliated with the different unions there was also a disinclination to say anything about the campaign. A large number, however, said that they would support it as the best plan offered for the adjustment of the whole question.

JITNEY DRIVERS PAY U. S. TAX

Service Car Men Complained Competition was Unfair.

About 500 drivers of automobiles, who have been using their cars for jitney service without having paid the $10 license required by the federal government, have been brought in by Deputy Collectors of Internal Revenue in the last three weeks and required to pay the license, plus a $2.50 penalty.

The activity of the revenue officers was upon complaint of service car drivers that they were being submitted to unfair competition.

CHICAGO MAN GOES SIGHTSEEING HERE AND LOSES HIS ROLL

If Edward J. Burke, a traveling salesman from Chicago, wanted to use the literary style of his fellow townsman, Ring Lardner, to tell about what happened to him in the big city of St. Louis Friday night he might go about it something like this:

Dear Al: Well, Al, here I am in St. Loobie, and I am in bad too Al, which shows that a fella can still have his littel joke, though I ain't in what you might call a joking mude.

When I arr. here I come to the Hotel Statler like I always go to a 1st class place, and I was setting in the lobbie dropping out how the Socks was going to clean Cincy, when a fella in the next chair started up a consersacion. I never rebuft nobody that way, and when I seen he wanted to talk to somebody and dropping it out that he was loansome I dropped my cloak of reserve, and he told me he lived here and started telling me his family histry, and I humored him and when he ast me to let him show me the town that night why I seen he was one of these fellas that always wants to show you their town, and I graciously concented.

Well, Al we went to a dance hall around Grand and Olive, and this fella he picked up two peaches and what I mean they was peaches. Well pretty soon I says in a joke, well my name ain't Mr. Terpsichore, and where can we get a drink and put some life in the party. You know me, Al.

So then we went to a place and got some drinks and what I mean they was drinks and they had enough kick to make a field gool on every shot and I hope to tell you they did. Well, Al, I taken a couple and I come two the fella and the girls was gone, and Al so was my watch and chain and knife and my sparkler and 75 seeds as we say in slang in Chi. And what I mean they was gone. So you see that's what hapens when you try to be magnaminus and democratic. So Al if you could let me have a little so I can get out of this hick town everything will be jake, and the sooner the quicker, as the fella says.

SALES FOR FIRST 4 DAYS OF FUR AUCTION REACH $7,250,000

Sales for the first four days of the International Fur Exchange auction approached a total of $7,250,000, it was announced last night.

Seven hundred silver fox went for about $176,500, and gray fox, swift fox and lynx were the other chief items. Lynx skins numbered 6500 and brought about $295,000. Australian furs, including opossum, ringtail opossum, wallaby, wombat and red fov, will open tomorrow's session.

The fur dealers were guests last night at a bear steak dinner given in their honor by Funsten Bros & Co., at Hotel Jefferson. About 550 guests attended. The evening was enlivened by a cabaret that ran past midnight.

NEW TAXIPLANE ARRIVES

Taxiplane flying about St. Louis will be resumed today from the field at 7400 Delmar boulevard. James L. Giffin, former Lieutenant in the air service, arrived yesterday after a flight of 10 hours and 54 minutes from Dallas, Tex., with a new airplane which will be utilized while repairs to the original ship in the service, which was damaged in a forced landing 10 days ago, are being completed.

A large number of St. Louisans are said to have asked appointments to fly at $1 a minute.

TEN NOTABLE ARTISTS COMING

Ten recitals by noted artists, to be known as the American Concert Series, are announced for the Odeon on the nights of Oct. 21, Nov. 27, Dec. 9 and 23, Jan. 6, March 2, Jan. 20, Feb. 3 and 17, and March 17.

The soloists thus far engaged are Percy Grainger, pianist; Maud Powell, violinist; Frieda Hempel, soprano; Harold Bauer, Pianist; Louis Graveure, baritone; Clarence Whitehill, baritone; and Mayo Walder, violinist. The promoter of the series is C. M. Bergmann, formerly connected with L. H. Mudgett of Symphony Hall, Boston.

MAN FATALLY INJURED BY AUTO BLAMES SELF

Criminal Carelessness and Homicide Verdicts Returned by Two Coroner's Juries.

Shortly before he died from the effects of being hit by an automobile, William Marshall, 83 years old, said to those around him:

"It was my own fault; I walked in front of it."

The machine was that of J. J. O'Toole of 6433 O'Dell avenue, a private watchman, and the accident occurred at 9:30 p. m. Friday, in front of Marshall's home, 3209 Morganford road. He died yesterday morning. O'Toole was told to appear at the inquest tomorrow.

Two Coroner's verdicts, one of criminal carelessness on the part of a truck driver and the other of homicide at the hands of unidentified persons, were found at inquests into automobile fatalities yesterday. An inquest into two other deaths from an automobile accident was continued until tomorrow to permit the police to inquire into the sobriety of persons involved.

Benamin Seet, 26 year old, chauffeur of 1445 St. Louis avenue, was held responsible in the case of William Ligibel, 6 years old, 2040 Clark avenue, who died at the City Hospital Friday from injuries suffered when run over by Seet's truck in front of 218 South Jefferson avenue Thursday afternoon.

Testimony Shows He Fled.

The testimony developed that Seet fled from the scene after turning the injured boy over to a bystander. Seet testified that he intended to surrender to the police after transacting some important business. His identity was learned through the license number on the truck which was noted by James Makres, owner of a restaurant at 218 South Jefferson.

In the case of Herman Cherry, 56 years old, shoeworker, of 5374 Geraldine avenue, who died Friday at the City Hospital from a fractured skull, it was reported that he was found unconscious in the street at Talcott and Florissant avenues Wednesday night after a Ford touring car, occupied by several men, was driven past the corner at high speed.

Report From Police Ordered.

The inquiry into the case of William McCormack, 50 years old, a railroad foreman, of 500 Veronica place, who died at 10 a. m. yesterday from injuries suffered Thursday night in an automobile collision in which John Grote, 32 years old, a barber, of the LaSalle Hotel, was killed and seven other men were injured, as well as the inquest into Grote's death, was continued when Thomas J. Bradford, another East St. Louis railroad man, who drove the car in which McCormack was riding, testified that the members of his party had been drinking whiskey and near-beer.

Bradford said that he himself had not been drinking. The police were ordered to investigate the condition of the men at the time of the accident and to report to the Coroner tomorrow morning.

Grote was in a car driven by Joseph Geegan, 3507 Laclede avenue. Bradford was arrested after the accident and ordered held for the Coroner. The deaths of McCormack made the fourth automobile fatality in two days, and the sixty-first since January 1.

ARMY ENLISTS 183 MEN HERE

Educational Opportunities Attracted Recruits During Last Month.

One hundred and 83 men have enlisted at the St. Louis Army Recruiting office within the last month, it was announced yesterday. Of these, 105 have said they were entering because of the educational opportunities offered. The subjects they desired to study, and which they will have opportunity to pursue in the army, include machinery, radiotelegraphy, pharmacy, typewriting, photography, electricity and carpentry.

Fifty-five of the men had seen previous service, most of them overseas, and these said they had derived benefit from the army, especially in a physical way.

WILSON FORGETS FACTS, JOHNSON, AT KANSAS CITY, SAYS

THRONG CHEERS HIM AS NEXT PRESIDENT

Demonstration Continues 16 Minutes as Speaker Begins Bitter Attack on League and Its Sponsor.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 13.—A demonstration which lasted 16 minutes and rivaled his St. Louis reception greeted Senator Hiram W. Johnson of California here tonight.

Convention Hall, the largest auditorium in the city, was crowded and many were turned away. The crowd stood while it cheered, waved flags, and sang patriotic songs. There were shouts of "Johnson is the next President."

The meeting was under the auspices of the local chapter of the League for the Preservation of American Independence.

Senator Johnson in his address vigorously attacked the peace treaty and league of nations pact. He declared the league covenant the most important question that had confronted the American people since the Civil War.

"We are at the crossroads of our tational destiny," said Senator Johnson dramatically. "One road leads to sinister European and Asiatic complications. The other is the straight and narrow path of patriotic Americanism. We want to take the straight and narrow path. That is the only safe course."

"I dare say that this country has never been isolated, financially, commercially or socially, from the rest of the world," the Senator continued. "Our only isolation has been geographical because of the great oceans on our east and west coasts. God gave us these great oceans, and neither the league of nations nor Woodrow Wilson can dry them up."

"An Infamous Nostrum."

He described the league of nations covenant as "an infamous nostrum," which the President promises will cure every ill.

"President Wilson went to Paris with certain idealistic principles, but came home without any of them," said the Senator. "When the people learned of the President's failure at Paris, America held an inquest over its dead hopes."

While Senator Johnson was speaking, Major-General Leonard Wood, commander of the Central Division, and formerly commander of Camp Funston, Kan., appeared on the platform and was cheered by the crowd.

"We say to Mr. Wilson," Senator Johnson added, "make any secret treaties you desire, but you can't guarantee them with the blood of American boys."

There were loud cheers of "impeach Wilson" from hundreds in the crowd when Senator Johnson, after dramatically summing up his objections to the league, shouted:

"Let us end the whole rotten business by defeating the entire pact."

He praised Senator Reed of Missouri.

Senator Johnson was welcomed to the home of Senator James A. Reed by a nonpartisan citizens' committee of 100. R. E. Ball, a Democrat, called the meeting to order and introduced E. E. E. McJimsey of Springfield, Mo., a Republican, who acted as chairman. Among the 600 out-of-town visitors was Gov. Allen of Kansas.

"It is difficult to think that the President spoke otherwise than ironically in much that he said to you here in Kansas City," said Senator Johnson in beginning his address.

"His opening sentence, forgetful apparently of other utterances and of the facts, assumes a like forgetfulness on the part of our people."

His initial remark to you was: 'I came back from Paris bringing one of the greatest documents of human history. One of the things that made it great was that it is penetrated throughout with the principles to which America has devoted her life.'

"The facts, the inexorable facts, make the issue with Mr. Wilson. The American principles to which we were devoted, and which he so eloquently voiced, open covenants, freedom of the seas, guarantees of reduction of national armaments, impartial adjustment of colonial claims, destruction of every arbitrary power, self-determination, no special alliances, justice to the weak, no people to be handed about from sovereignty to sovereignty as if they were property, no territory to change hands except for the happiness and liberty of its people, were one by one sacrificed to old-world diplomacy and the secret bargains of our co-belligerents.

Secret Treaties Rewritten.

"The treaty, in its dealings with territories and peoples, simply rewrites the secret treaties of which the President says he never heard until he reached Paris. At Paris, the President said to Dr Williams, the Far East expert of the United States, and this is testimony given before the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate: 'That the war seemed to have been fought to establish the sanctity of treaties, and that, while some treaties were unconscionable, at the same time it looked as though they would have to be observed.'

"Is it necessary to deny that the President's treaty, observing and carefully following unconscionable secret treaties of which he knew nothing, is 'penetrated' throughout with the principles to which America had devoted her life?

"Nor is this all. We know from the admission of all parties, including the President, that the other American peace delegates protested against the infamy of the Shantung decision; and yesterday the testimony of Mr. Bullitt, one of the President's appointees at Paris, clearly indicated the adverse opinion of the present treaty. His remark that Secretary of State Lansing said the American people would never accept it if they knew its contents, is significant and ominous. The President's enthusiastic exclamation about the great document and its penetration with American principles was perhaps not intended to be taken seriously. The facts—the inexorable facts—make the issue with Mr. Wilson.

"Again, to you," the President said: "We wanted disarmament, and this document provides in the only possible way for disarmament by common agreement They promise disarmament and promise to agree upon a plan.'

Britain's Refusal to Disarm.

"But what the President should have added is what is admitted by all, that disarmament under the league of nations is wholly optional. Great Britain has refused to surrender one jot of her supremacy of the seas or her naval armament.

"There is no disarmament provided for by the league. The league may simply suggest disarmament, but compliance with the recommendations is optional with the members. Mr. Wilson's words imply that disarmament is accomplished by the league. There can be disarmament in but one way, and that is by disarming.

"The members of the league, even the United States, are not only not disarming, but are providing for the largest armies and navies in their history. Mr. Wilson is now asking Congress for a standing army of 576,000 men, with universal military training for the 19-year-olds, costing practically a billion dollars a year, and this at a time when he is ushering in the millennium with the league of nations. The facts—the inexorable facts—make issue with Mr. Wilson.

A pathetic and eloquent plea for Armenia was made to you, an appeal which touched the hearts of all of us. He said substantially that the Armenian situation could not be handled because of words piled upon words, debate following debate. And yet Armenia is neither touched nor mentioned in the German treaty. The Turkish treaty dealing with the subject is known alone to Mr. Wilson. He has in writing refused to give the American people or the United States Senate any information concerning it.

Says Wilson Forgot Egypt.

"His subtle appeal to prejudice the Senate is not only unjust, but wholly unfounded.

"Mr. Wilson, in the exaltation of the moment, forgot the Egyptian delegates, arrested and detained at Malta until he had recognized England's new protectorate over Egypt. He forgot our allies, the Chinese, begging and imploring for the justice he had promised them. He forgot Persia, protesting, taken over almost in his presence by Great Britain.

"He forgot Ireland, suffering under centuries of oppression, knocking at his door and begging only a hearing from the men who were creating his new world order. The facts—the inexorable facts—make the issue with Mr. Wilson.

"In his peroration, Mr. Wilson exclaimed, 'I have come out to fight for a cause. That cause is greater than the Senate; it is greater than the Government.'

"We, too, you and I, are fighting for a cause, but the cause is not greater than the United States; it is the United States.

"Last night, for the first time, the President attempted a justification of the provision of the league giving Great Britain six votes while the United States has but one. He says, in effect, that the disproportionate voting power is of no consequence because each vote in the council has a veto. Why then Great Britain should have been given six votes is not apparent. Perhaps because it is of no consequence this preponderance has been so strenuously insisted upon by Britain. But the veto power by no means removes the objection. Any matter of dispute in the council may, by either party, be removed to the assembly. In the assembly hall members vote, except those who are parties to the dispute.

Fears Britain's Six Votes.

"Suppose Japan and the United States in controversy finally came to the assembly of the league. There, both Japan and the United States standing aside, Britain, with her offensive and defensive alliance with Japan, which both countries insist will be in full force, notwithstanding the league, will cast six votes. And while the council requires a unanimous vote, the assembly, exclusive of the members of the council, requires for action but a majority vote.

"But the influence of a preponderance of votes may often turn the scale. Take the familiar example of our juries, where unanimity is required. Suppose upon a jury six votes are one way, one another, the remainder impartial. It requires no argument to demonstrate the power of the six. The veto power, too, is not such a potent weapon as the President suggests. At Paris, in the peace conference, any one of the big five had that veto and a unanimous decision was required. Nevertheless, the Shantung decision was rendered, and apparently was easily obtained by the four who decided it against the one, our President protesting.

"There is neither defense nor justification for giving Great Britain six times as many votes as the United States. It was simply an additional instance when the practical diplomat got what he wanted from the man who sat uncomprehendingly in the diplomats' game. Six votes for Britain, one for the United States, is a challenge to our self respect, an affront to our patriotism. It will be the test of the Americanism of the men who must finally pass upon it.

"Mr. Wilson closed his address with a panegyric upon his fighting qualities. Would that he had had them in Paris. He told you finally he was a covenanter. I am an American."

At the conclusion of Senator Johnson's speech there were calls for Gen. Wood, and he responded, speaking briefly of the plans and purposes of the American Legion.

35TH DIVISION BANQUET AND REUNION SEPT. 26

Anniversary of Argonne Drive Selected for Affair at Hotel Jefferson.

The sand blizzards of Oklahoma will be revived, Cheppy again will be captured, Vauquois hill will be stormed and reduced to nothing, Baulny, Exermont and other obstacles in the now famous career of the Thirty-Fifth division will be overcome once again at the first annual reunion and banquet to be given by members of the division at the Hotel Jefferson, Sept. 26.

The date selected will be the anniversary of the opening of the Meuse-Argonne offensive in which the division played a brilliant part.

Every soldier and welfare worker who was affliated with the division at any time since it organization, either in America or abroad, is invited to attend, and, according to Major Norman B. Comfort, chairman of the Committee on Arrangements, this will be one occasion where rank will count for naught. Majors and privates, corporals and colonels, will sit side by side at the banquet table all on the same status of American citizens.

The list of speakers also will be chosen, according to Major Comfort, with reference to titles.

Reservations for the banquet, Major Comfort said, can be made at the Hotel Jeferson either in person or by mail, but all reservations must be in by Sept. 21. The dinner will be $3 a plate.

Among those invited to speak are Governor Gardner, Governor Allen of Kansas and Mayor Kiel.

Colonel Bennett C. Clark will be toastmaster.

Clair Kenamore, author of the recently published history of the division, "From Vauquois Hill to Exermont," has been named historian.

Thomas K. Skinker, father of Capt. Alexander Skinker, killed in action, is chairman of the Gold Star committee. The nearest relative of each man killed in action is invited to attend both the reunion and banquet.

Major James L. Barngrove, chairman of the Silver Star committee, will take care of the wounded men.

ILLINOISANS START MOVEMENT FOR EMPLOYERS' FEDERATION

Propose Organization to Present Views of Manufacturers Collectively at Washington.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—An actual start toward federation of employers of the country, as recommended by the recent "our coutry first" conference, was made by the Illinois Manufacturers' Association, which sponsored the conference by appointment of a committee representing 50 organizations and with Charles Piez, former head of the Shipping Board, as chairman.

The committee will ask chambers of commerce, agricultural and other bodies to endorse the resolutions adopted at the conference which included expressions deploring the spread of radicalism, urging a return to old-fashioned thrift and federation of employers.

"Manufacturers are awakening to the fact that they have got to present their own views collectively at Washington if they expect to get what is due in the way of legislation," said Piez in stating that the purpose of such a national union of employers would be "to look out for the interests of business."

BETHMANN-HOLLWEG FOR PEACE IN 1914, SAYS SCHEIDEMANN

Quotes Former German Chancellor as Approving Effort With English and French Socialits.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Friday, Sept. 12.—Philip Scheidemann, former German Premier, declared recently at Cassell that Dr. Theobald von Bethmann-Hollweg, former Imperial Chancellor, asked him to work with English and French Socialists in behalf of peace in November, 1914, according to the Vorwaerts. Scheidemann is quoted as follows:

'In November, 1914, Hugo Haase and I visited Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg to notify him that the social democratic faction was planning a peace demonstration in the Reichstag. Before the whole world and full of consciousness of the enormous responsibility, I here now, for the first time, make public what the Chancellor told Herr Haase and myself on that occasion. Dr. Bethmann-Hollweg said:

" 'Gentlemen, I earnestly request you not to undertake this step publicly at this time. You may rest assured such a demonstration would only strengthen the war determination of our foes, for according to all reliable reports an impression already is prevailing abroad that Germany it at the end of her resources. If it is possible for you to work with English and French socialists in the interests of peace do so.' "

Herr Scheidemann added that the governing board of the party "labored ceaselessly" to get in touch with the socialists of hostile countries, but all atempts failed because of the negative attitude of the English and French members of the party.

MARKET .·. AND .·. FINANCIAL .·. NEWS

CORN 10 TO 27 CENTS LOWER FOR THE WEEK

Slump in Hogs and Favorable Crop Report Cause Sharp Selling; Oats Weak.

Unexpected enlargement of the Government estimate of the 1919 domestic yield of corn had an intensely bearish effect on corn here last week, and so, too, did th esteel workers' strike ultimatum. Compared with week ago, corn prices at the close yesterday showed a fall of about 10½c to 27c. Oats were down 5⅛c to 5⅝c.

Both the Government crop estimate and the steel workers' ultimatum took the corn trade by surprise. Private advices had given no indication that there would be any important change from the official forecast issued Aug. 1 regarding the corn crop. Notice, therefore, that 70,000,000 bushels increase was probable led to a rush to sell corn.

Industrial unrest later became the dominating factor, with attention first centered on chances of a nation-wide strike of stockyard and packing house employes. Then came the steelworkers' ultimatum, and with other strike disturbances recurring, discouraged holders were forced to liquidate on a nearly constant decline in values. To help along the decline hog values also slumped nearly $2 for the week, and at one time were off $3. Low record prices on the 1919 crop of corn were touched yesterday when the September option fell 8½c, following a drop of 8c Friday.

Oats sympathized with the weakness of corn, notwithstanding that the Government crop report as to oats favored the bulls, and receipts are very light compared with last week. Yesterday's market was weak and nearly 3c off from Friday's close.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

Cash corn was 8½c to 11c lower here yesterday and in light demand.

SEPTEMBER CORN SHOWS LOSS OF 62 CENTS SINCE JULY 10

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—Downward readjustment of values to meet new crop and peace conditions made rapid progress today in the corn market. Demand was lacking except from profit-taking shorts. Prices closed heavy 2⅞c to 10c net lower, with September $1.35 to $1.35½ and December $1.19¾ to $1.90⅝. Oats finished 2⅝c to 3¼ c off and provisions varied from a 52c decline to a 12c advance.

Liquidation on the part of holders of corn was evident from the outset. September delivery, representing what remains of last year's crop, was especially weak, but most of the trading took place in the new crop months, neither of which broke to a sensational extent. Before the day ended, September showed 62c a bushel decline since July 10, whereas the extreme setback of deferred deliveries was 45 to 54 cents. Nevertheless, both December and May today touched the lowest level yet this season. Attempts to rally the market were checked by the bears putting all the emphasis possible on the fact that values were still far above a pre-war basis.

Oats, like corn, fell to new low-record prices for the season, despite improved demand from seaboard.

Provisions reflected grain weakness. Subsequently, though, an advance in the hog market operated as something of a counter balance.

Builders' Suppiies.

Current market prices on builders' material in wagonload lots, to contractors, curb deliveries, city of St. Louis:

Mississippi River channel sand, per ton, $1.90; Meramec River sand, per ton, $1.95; coarse gravel, per ton, $1.75; binder gravel, per ton, $2; river run gravel, per ton, $2.10; roofing gravel, per ton, $2.20; coarse torpedo gravel, per ton, $2.20; fine torpedo gravel, per ton, $2.45; Portland cement in cloth bags, per bbl, gross (including a charge of 60c for 4 cloth bags), $3.15; bulk lime, per bu. (80 lbs.), 60c; finish hydrated lime (50-lb. paper sacks), 55c; Mason's hydrated lime (50-lb. paper sacks), 45c; cement plaster (15c cloth sacks included), per sack, $1.05; finish plaster (15c cloth sacks included), per sack, $1.05.

Dry Goods.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Cotton goods were steady today with a firmer tendency. Yarns were quiet with prices irregular. Linens were very firm and in short supply, with knit goods quiet.

PENALTY AFTER TOMORROW ON INCOME TAX INSTALLMENT

Less Than 50 Per Cent Have Made Payment, Others Facing Five Per Cent Increase.

Tomorrow will be the last day on which income tax installments for the third quarter of the year may be made without penalty for delinquency. All payments placed in the mail any time tomorrow will be within the time limit.

The penalty for delayed payment is a five per cent addition to the tax, with an increase of one per cent for each month it remains unpaid. Payments sent by mail should be addressed to eGorge H. Moore, collector, Custom House, St. Louis.

Thus far less than 50 per cent of those subject to the tax have sent in their remittances or paid in person. This is a smaller percentage than at the other installment periods.

MONUMENT DEALERS INVITED

Convention of 1920 Sought for St. Louis.

An effort is being made by the St. Louis Convention and Publicity Bureau, Chamber of Commerce and the Advertising Club of St. Louis to bring the convention of the Associated Retail Monument Dealers in 1920 to St. Louis. Should the convention be held in St. Louis it is expected that there will be about 2500 in attendance and in conjunction with the convention an exhibit will be held in the Coliseum showing the progress of the trade. The convention will be held the first three weeks in August.

The St. Louis Retail Monument Dealers' Association met at the Hotel Statler Friday night and after the meeting gave a dinner in honor of G. W. Colwell, chairman of the executive committee of the national association. F. Suddrath, president of the Missouri and Kansas State Association, urged him to select St. Louis as the place for the convention.

COTTON 5 TO 15 POINTS LOWER IN LATE TRADING

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—There was considerable Southern selling at the opening of the cotton market this morning. First prices were 3 points lower to 7 points higher and active months sold 10 to 18 points below last night's closing figures during the first few minutes, with December touching 28.67c.

Except for the Southern selling there was very little pressure, however, and as soon as the early orders had been executed prices firmed up on covering for over the week end.

Early advices indicated little change in the storm threat and the census report showing domestic mill consumption of 502,536 bales for August, against 534,971 last year was fully up to expectations.

Cotton on hand Aug. 31 was: In consuming establishments 1,136,539 bales of lint and 262,656 of linters, compared with 1,215,832 of lint and 153,661 of linters a year ago; and in public storage and at compresses 1,851,096 bales of lint and 224,954 of linters, compared with 1,804,500 of lint and 115,698 of linters a year ago. Cotton spindles active during August numbered 34,187,310, compared with 33,601,305 a year ago.

Exports amounted to 473,872 bales, including 5,186 bales of linters, compared with 287,450 bales, including 12,644 of linters in August last year.

Nervousness over the storm situation was increased by reports that hurricane warnings had been issued for Houston tonight and December contracts sold up to 29.10, or 22 points net higher. Later fluctuations were irregular under realizing with the market closing steady at a net decline of 5 to 15 points or about 30 points off from the best.

VERY SHARP DECLINE IN THE HOG MARKET

Prices Close $1.50 to $1.75 Lower for Week After Being Down $3.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Week.
Cattle	39,698	26,176	46,276
Hogs	54,034	44,490	40,163
Sheep	15,598	13,230	12,546
Horses and mules	6,407	9,118	3,789

There has been considerable speculation regarding the present slump in livestock values here, but nothing in the form of a definite conclusion has been reached regarding a stopping place for values on cattle, hogs or sheep. Liberal receipts continue to come, despite the price declines.

Steer values for last week are a $1 lower, save for a few good cattle around $15 and over, which are 25c to 50c lower than a week ago. A few loads of 1383-pound steers at $16.50 Tuesday topped the market and bulk of sales were plainer, grades selling around $9 to $11.50. Westerns were plentiful and in spots they showed a $1.25 reduction from Monday. It was a slow market throughout.

Butcher cattle slumped sharply also. With the exception of a few fancy light heifers finding outlet through St. Louis butchers and a few packers, values on the medium classes were $1 lower. Good cows suffered in the same proportion. Canners were cut 50c to 75c and bulls showed a break of $1 in most places, leaving values from $3 to $4 lower than the high time three weeks ago.

Cattle to return to the country were poor sellers all week. No buyers to speak of showed up. There is a feeling of unrest among feeders this fall. None appear to be willing to take a chance, not knowing what the market will be this winter, and for this reason buying has been light. Good feed crops were figured to stimulate buying in this department but failed. Values on stock cattle are $1 lower. Veal calves sold up to $21 this week, a new high-water mark, but in late in the week the market dropped back around $2, with a top of $19.

Excessive hogs receipts here caused the market to drop sharply the forepart of the week, trade striking a $3 lower level on Thursday than last week's close. Later, however, a big part of the decline was recovered and yesterday, best hogs sold for $18.25, indicating a fall of around $1.50 to $1.75 per cwt. Preference is strongly for hogs under 210 pounds. Bulk sell at this time from $17@17.65, best light to medium from $17.50 to the top, heavier hogs weighing 210 to 225 from $17.25@17.50, extremely heavies $16.25@17, and lights from $16.75@17.25. Pigs closing about $2 lower with best from $16@17, medium $14.50@15.50, trashy to fair $13.50@14.50. Roughs from $13.50 to $15.25 at close.

Receipts of sheep and lambs were exceedingly heavy at other western points, but light here, totaling about 14,000 for the week. Market advanced 25c to 50c early in the week, but closed about like a week ago. Market active on anything with quality, but very slow on medium and plain grades. Choice lambs quotable from $15.25 @15.50, good $14.50@15, plain to medium $10@14, and culls $7 to $8. Fat sheep sell at $8, canners and choppers $3@6, fat bucks $6@6.50 and breeding ewes $10@13.

Unable to withstand the pressure caused by continued heavy receipts of native horses, market showed a lower trend the current week on all other than top southerners. Plainer classes of southerners made up a large portion of the receipts and it was a case of supply being greater than the demand. Throughout the week, however, there appeared to be ample demand for the best southerners. Both because of the limited demand and light receipts, eastern trade was very limited in volume. Several cars of westerns were sold from day to day, although the big range sales are billed for next week, supply for which is indicated at over 4000 head.

One of the local commission firms has made arrangements to buy horses for the French market and this will prove a good outlet for the better kinds of stock.

Receipts of mules were comparatively large, supply running very heavily to the plainer types, for which demand was very limited. Fat smooth cotton mules and large animals with good flesh sold in fair order, out movement was extremely sluggish on the off-grades notwithstanding the low range of prices put into effect. Shippers are advised to leave the commoner stuff in the country at present until market here shows some improvement.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

WIDE PRICE SWINGS A FEATURE OF THE WEEK'S DEALINGS IN NEW YORK

Speculative Stocks Jump Up and Down at Every Session—Yesterday's Market Was Strong and Higher.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The Evening Post, in its weekly financial review, says:

"Considered in the light of Stock Exchange experience the upward and downward swings of 5 to 20 points within every few hours, in those industrial shares which now monopolize the daily trading, would be taken to mean that the great mass of the capital stock of these companies is held in comparatively few hands. On no other supposition could this week's fluctuations in their prices—going so far as advances or declines of 10 per cent, over night—be explained at all. The question naturally follows who holds them?

"The speculative public always has an answer ready for such a question. The answer is, that powerful capitalists are so convinced of the value of the shares that they have invested their personal capital in them, that they will not part with their holdings, even on a most inviting bid, and that they are buying more the higher the prices go. It is a plausible theory from the outside public's point of view, the market bears it out. All that is necessary is for the little speculator to buy more and hold it for the rise.

"Nothing is more familiar in the history of the stock market, than precisely this reasoning, under precisely such circumstances, and nothing is more certain than that the idea is a complete halucination.

"Stocks of this sort are bought on credit; the higher they go, the larger the burden on credit. The greater the outside speculative following attracted, the more insecure that basis of credit grows. To the present generation of 'plungers' in the 'miscellaneous industrials,' this view of the matter presents itself as something quite apart from the visible facts of the situation. To anybody with more than half-a-dozen years experience in Wall Street, they are pretty nearly axiomatic.

"The central authorities of our banking system have some considerable responsibility in the matter. The responsibility is certainly not less, in view of the fact that the rediscounting privilege on Liberty Loan collateral has at times undeniably been used to accumulate funds for stock speculation. In years before the war, the European central banks accepted such responsibility. Usually they put up the Central Bank's rate of rediscount when the speculators were running amuck. Sometimes, as with the president of the German Reichsbank, when he announced in 1906, almost the highest rate in the institution's history, they publicly declared their purpose of stoping the speculative mania by whatever means were at their disposal.

"To a large extent the hands of the Federal Reserve Board are tied. This is especially so in the case of rediscounts based on war-bond collateral; for which low rates of a continuing sort were fixed, with a view to attracting larger subscriptions to new war loans. That policy, which was then excused on the ground of wartime necessity, was in an economic way absolutely unsound and, it is bearing fruit in the present speculative inflation.

"It was a policy which, for an obvious reason—the tacit contract of the Federal Reserve Banks, with bona fide subscribers who are still paying for their bonds with accruing income—cannot be suddenly abandoned. Yet, it would certainly seem that, if the Reserve Board, therefore, merely folds its hands and does nothing in such a situation as has come to exist in Wall Street, it will at least have failed to enhance its official prestige.

"The question is now bound to be asked with increasing insistence, whether it is not time that the Reserve Board's highly tentative steps of June 20, and July 9, in this matter, should be followed by further and considerably more emphatic action."

New York Curb Market

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The Broad street curb market showed an irregular and alternating tone all through the week, with no important changes to lower levels except in some of the petroleum shares. Several new issues appeared in the outside market, among them Chandler Motor new stock, "when issued," which ranged from 102 to 92, with a rally to 94; and Maxwell-Chalmers, "when issued," which sold at 67 to 62. National Motor Bus was another new stock, sales being made at 7¾ to 7½.

Most interest was shown in the independent oil stocks, especially in the last half of the week, when many of these issues made sharp advances. General Asphalt became the most prominent feature, advanicng to 90, against 78, its low price of the week. The preferred ranged from 121 to 135. Commonwealth sold at 59, and the "rights" wer traded in at 50¼. The Sinclair issues were fairly well held, moving up over 2 points and then losing nearly all this gain, with the market position continuing about 1 point below the price of Sinclair Oil on the Exchange.

Indian Packing, which attracted attention when it first appeared on the curb, was a weak nature, falling fromm 30¼ to 26¼. American Marconi was traded in on a large scale on several days, moving up 7 points with the buying attributed to General Electric affiliations and to interests concerned in the English company.

This movement was accompanied by reports that new appliances and adaptations have been decided upon which are expected to materially extend the field of wireless operation.

Following is a list of the day's highest, lowest and closing prices for the most active stocks dealt in on the Broad Street Curb:

London Review.

Special Cable Dispatch to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Sept. 13.—"The foreign exchange situation is manifestly affected by the delay on America's part in ratifying the treaty which presumably is keeping back American bankers from adopting remedial schemes. Germany, in particular, must suffer greatly if she cannot soon get large imports of raw materials. The unprecedented depreciation of the mark, which measured by sterling now sells for less than 2½d. is a chief obstacle to industrial recovery.

"Some of the English trades are anxious to buy marks, but gloomy reports coming by way of Poland, as to social and political developments in Germany, prevents substanial purchases. Almost everything depends upon imports of raw materials and getting rapidly to work.

"Our own labor situation is resolving itself into a conflict between the moderates and the extremists among the wage earners. The former clearly recognize the absolute necessity of increased and cheaper production in this country. A triumph of the hotheads here, or on your side, would mean a world-wide catastrophe, and even possible starvation in some quarters, because of the paramount necessity that productive forces, impaired by five years of war, make good some of the loss.

The Labor Situation.

"Financial circles recognize that vital importance attaches to Lloyd George's handling of our labor and economic problems, for victory of the extremists or semi-Bolshevists in this country would instantly react elsewhere.

"Details of British foreign trade in August may throw some light on present tendencies.

"Of £39,000,000 increase in import over August, 1919, £20,000,000 represented foodstuffs, including £4,500,000 for grain and £7,000,000 for meat. Value of imported raw material was £21,000,000 larger. In this way, it embraced an increase of £1,400,000 for timber, £9,250,000 for cotton and £5,250,000 for wool. Value of manufactured articles was down nearly £3,000,000 in spite of an increase of £4,000,000 in leather manufactures.

"Out of a total increase of more than £4,000,000 in exports, more than £30,000,000 represented gain in the value of manufactured articles. Exports of iron and steel manufactures were £2,750,000 larger; other metals, £1,000,000; machinery, £2,000,000; cotton, £7,000,000, and wool, £6,000,000. Neutral countries figured largely as purchasers.

"This months figures may possibly be affected by the recent removal of restrictions upon imports, thus conceivably increasing our excess of imports over exports. The general trend now largely depends upon American ratification of the peace treaty."

DETAILED REPORT OF DAY'S TRADING IN WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Stocks recorded highest quotations of the week during today's brief session, the market reflecting the favorable turn in the labor situation. Equipments and oils were most active at advances of 2 to almost 10 points, but Steels, Motors, Shippings and Tobaccos were not far behind.

Textiles, Leathers, Coppers and Food Shares participated more moderately with various miscellaneous issues.

Rails were backward at the outset, but developed marked strength in the later dealings especially transcontinentals and several minor issues, notably Wheeling and Lake Erie. The closing was strong. Sales approximated 475,000 shares.

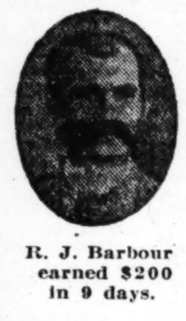
Can You Do What This Man Has Done?

The Wonderful Story of R. J. Barbour



R. J. Barbour earned $200 in 9 days.

One year ago R. J. Barbour was a failure. Through an unfortunate business adventure, the result of many years' toil was swept away. At the age of 60, his life was turning out to a mere struggle for existence. Says Barbour, in describing his experiences:

"My last unfortunate adventure was in the real estate business. Through an unscrupulous client my earnings were swept away.

"But I turned the tide of failure into success. My average earnings for the last year have been considerably more than $100 weekly—I intend to make $6000 this year and have the time of my life while doing it."

What is the secret of Barbour's success? How did he jump from a failure to a good position—into an entirely new line?

Free Book Tells You How

Write for a copy of "Success at Sixty," written by Barbour himself, that gives the whole story of his success.

The Continental Plan

"What man has done, man can do again." The Continental plan of jewelry selling offers every salesman the possibilities of increasing his income. Continental Dependable Jewelry is sold direct to stores handling general merchandise, drugs, dry goods, hardware and similar lines. There are many valuable features of dealer co-operation, such as an introductory advertising campaign, liberal credit terms, free display case and dealer helps that stimulate the dealer's sales. Of all lines of business during 1919, jewelry has shown the greatest percentage of increases, with an extremely heavy demand at this season. Our salesmen are backed by an aggressive advertising campaign in the leading trade journals all over the country.

Salesmen Wanted

Right now we need capable, energetic salesmen. The positions can be made unusually profitable, as we are now at the busiest season. If you are looking for an opportunity to put your enthusiasm and energy into full play and to achieve the things you have long wished for, write us at once for the story of Barbour and the details of a merchandising plan that is bringing success and profit to salesmen and merchants all over the country. We have some valuable territory open now—tomorrow may be too late.

The Way These World's Series Prices Soar Is Enough to Make the Purchaser Sore, Too

Nehf Gives Only Three Swats and Cards Lose, 2--0

Four Men Reach First Against Southpaw and Not One of Them Gets to Second.

HORNSBY'S BREAK HURTS

Failure to Tag Statz Stealing Paves Way for Giants' Runs in Sixth Frame.

Arthur Nehf, the Giants' star left-hander, who came from the Boston Braves for four players and cash, yesterday set the Cardinals down with three hits, and as a result, the Knot-Holers were shut out in the second game of the series, 2-0. Only about 3000 of the faithful turned out.

The "break" that lost for the locals came in the sixth inning. With two out, Fletcher singled and stole second. Arnold Statz, the greatest golfer in the national pastime, beat out a bunt. On the next play, Clemons had Statz stealing by 15 feet, but Rogers Hornsby who took the throw failed to tag the runner. That lost the old ball game as George Kelly followed with a safety on which Fletcher and Statz tallied.

But with Nehf hurling as effectively as he did yesterday, there's no telling when Rickey's men would have been able to score off him. Throughout the nine innings, only four men saw first base, and not one got as far as second, much less third. That's how Nehf was working.

Hornsby Safe on Error.

Starting the second inning, Hornsby, first up, was safe on Fletcher's fumble. He got no further as McHenry and Clemons flied to Statz and Mollwitz rolled out.

In the next round with one gone, Jacobs singled through Frisch, but Schultz and Heathcotte both went out on short flies.

After that Nehf retired the Cardinals in one-two-three order until with one out in the seventh, Hornsby counced a hit off Fisch's shins. McHenry and Clemons followed with outfield flies.

Joe Schultz opened the locals' portion of the ninth with a single to left and Jack Smith was sent in to run for him. Smith immediately gummed it by being picked off first, Gonzales to Kelly.

Jacobs Hurls Good Game.

Elmer Jacobs pitched good ball during the six innings he toiled. Up to the fatal sixth, when Hornsby's break lost the game, he had allowed only two hits, although seven of McGraw's athletes had reached first. But when a hit would have meant a run, Jacobs was master of the situation except in the round, which already has been related.

Southpaw Bill Sherdel went to the hill in the seventh and blanked the Giants in two rounds. Then Casey Tuero, who has this season appeared in 41 games for the Cardinals, hurled the final inning. One hit was made off him.

Goodwin to Pitch Today.

Marvin Goodwin, who has won his last two starts, is scheduled to face the Giants in the final game of the series today. It will be the final appearance of the McGrawmen here this season. Jess Barnes is down to fling for the second placers, who gained half a lap on the Reds yesterday.

New Infielder Reports.

Walter Kimmick, semipro infielder from Pittsburg, reported to the Cardinals yesterday and broke into the game as a pinch-hitter in the eighth, when he went up for Sherdel. He popped to Fletcher. Before the game he worked out at shortstop and showed up in good style.

Statz Has a Busy Day.

Arnold Statz, the Holy Cross recruit, who is playing right field for McGraw with Ross Young injured, had a busy day yesterday, catching eight flies. He turned the feature play of the game, when he ran from right center all the way across the foul line for Lavan's foul in the eighth.

Pat Moran Pulls Two Miracles in One Year

Works a Wonder in Winning With Reds

Teaches Left-Hand Batters to Hit Southpaws

Few Believed Veteran Cincinnati Manager Could Take Club That Had Failed Many Times and Win With It.

Almost All Experts Held That a Club With Five, Sometimes Six, Left Hand SwingersWould Be at Mercy of Portsiders.

The following article is by way of introducing Pat Moran, whose club undoubtedly will represent the National League in the world's series. Ball players win world's championships; but only after some canny manager has inspired them with the spirit of victory. Moran's case seems to prove that a leader is to be valued for his understanding of his men rather than for his schemes of play.

PAT MORAN, 43 years old, and hero of the greatest double-play ever pulled in baseball, towit: William Baker to John McGraw to Garry Hermann, has proven the real "miracle man" of the 1919 season. For leading a band of cast-offs—players who have been with other major league clubs—Moran at present has practically clinched the championship of the National League.

Thoroughness more than anything else has made Moran a success as a manager. During his playing days he was never considered a real star. But he was always a reliable catcher. His greatest worth came in his ability to develop pitchers. That was his main task while with the Cubs and before he became manager of the Phillies in 1915.

Moran always talks baseball. That's his way. While he does not run rough-shod over his players, he nevertheless has the respect of every man on his club. When a player makes a costly mistake, Moran does not ride him. He calls the tosser aside and gives him a lecture.

That has been Moran's style with the Reds. Frank Bancroft, who has been connected with baseball for more than 40 years, says, that he considers Moran "one of the greatest managers in baseball today."

When in the spring Moran found himself over-burdened with southpaw batters, he did not start scouring the country for right-handed hitters. Instead, he inaugurated a morning practice session in which his southpaw batters did nothing but hit against left-handed pitchers. Result: Today his lefthanders are just as apt to break up a Kithouge's hurling as any of his right-hand clouters.

Moran's sterling qualities as a coach of pitchers also have been brought out forcibly. Walter Reuther, southpaw, at present the leading pitcher in the National League, was considered not good enough for the Cubs. But under Moran he has developed into one of the best in baseball. The same goes for Hod Eller and Jimmy Ring. Both were good pitchers, but today they are stars.

One of the chief mottos of Moran is "to play the game ahead of you first."

Moran, who has proven a success with two clubs that were not figured upon as real pennant contenders, says that there is no golden rule for a manager to follow to be successful.

Just Work—That's Moran's Secret.

"A manager to be successful must be a hard worker. He must have the confidence of his men, who will work hard for him. That is the real secret of the success of the Reds this year. We have all worked hard and I have been able to give them the benefit of my two decades in professional baseball.

"As leader it is my business to give orders and these are always carried out. Not by the 'mailed fist' method, as I do not believe in that style, but as one friend to another. The players carry them out because they have confidence in me.

"But the one real secret is work. Baseball, just like everything else, is a business. You cannot succeed in business unless you work. The same principle applies to the national pastime."

The rise of the Reds has been one of the real sensations of the national pastime in 1919. Moran took a club, which with few exceptions was the same as that which finished third in 1918 with a 58—50 record in a city which never had a pennant winner, and went to the front at the start and has remained there throughout the greater part of the season.

When the crucial series with the Giants was played, Moran's men won four of six and thereby practically clinched their right to play in the world's series.

Even Old "Sal" Is Going Good.

Sensational pitching from Reuther, Sallee, Ring and Eller, with good relief duty from Fisher and Luque, coupled with timely hitting and reliable fielding, have been the main reasons for the success of Moran's club.

Moran received his baptism as a manager in 1915. The players of the Philadelphia club, after Charley Dooin had been deposed, sent a request to William Baker that Moran be made manager. The request was granted and his first season he won the pennant. Since then he finished below 500 only once, in 1918. Moran won for the Phillies with a mediocre team and one great pitcher—Grover Alexander.

Last fall, Moran was released by the Phillies and Jack Coombs made manager. He signed with John McGraw as coach. But when the Reds received no answer from Christy Mathewson concerning his return from France, Mora nwas offered the place as manager. McGraw allowed him to go.

A brief history of Moran reads as follows: Born Feb. 6, 1876, in Fitchburg, Mass., where he resides during the off season; weight 175 pounds, height 5 feet 10½ inches. Started playing in 1895 with semi-professional club; with Lyons, Mass, 1897-98; Montreal, 1899, 1900; drafted by Braves and with team until 1905, when he was traded to the Cubs; remained with Cubs until 1910, when he was sold to Phillies. Remained with Phillies as coach until 1915, when he was made manager, and managed club until he was deposed last winter.

PAT MORAN.

Moran's Rccord as Manager of Phils

DURING the four years that he was manager of the Phillies, Pat Moran won the pennant his first season, finished second in 1916 and 1917, and last season, with a club that had lost Alexander and Killefer, come home sixth. During his stay at Philadelphia his clubs won 323 games and lost 257, for a percentage of .557. Record of the Phillies under Moran:

YEAR.	Pos.	Won.	Lost.	Pct.

1917	2	87	65	.572

Lowdermilk Wins Game for Chicago

White Sox Sluggers Pound Zinn, Naylor and Kinney and Give Grover Victory.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 13.—Philadelphia was ahead today until Witt muffed Lowdermilk's pop fly in the third, after which Chicago's sluggers opened up an attack that won them an easy 8-to-2 victory. Brilliant infielding by the visitors made the game interesting. In the sixth Chicago scored two runs on the squeeze play, with Schalk bunting and Risberg sprinting home from second, while Galloway held the ball waiting for somebody to cover first. The score:

Braves Gain Even Break With Reds

Smith's Error Enables Leaders to Win Opener — Ring Is Chased in Second.

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 1.—The Boston club held the league leaders to an even break in their double-header here this afternoon. Cincinnati won the first game on three hits. Smith dropped Neale's fly ball with the bases full and two out in the fifth inning, and three runs scored. But for this error the Reds would have been shut out by Scott.

In the second game Ring was hit freely, while Causey was very effective. Ring was knocked out of the box in the seventh inning and Luque finished the game. Score:

Crosby Greatly Improved.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 13.—W. R. Crosby of O'Fallon, Ill., champion trap shooter, who was injured late Friday when his auto turned turtle one mile south of Springfield, is much improved in condition and will not be forced to stay long at the hospital here. Crosby suffered fractures of several ribs. His wife, Mrs. W. R. Crosby, is more seriously hurt, but her condition is not at all dangerous.

Tobin's Batting Only Feature as Browns Lose Two

Burke's Outfielder Accounts for Four Runs—Scores of Games Are 4-1 and 9-6.

YANKS OVERCOME LEAD

Bat Gallia and Leifield Hard in Nightcap After Being Six Runs to Bad.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Today was not the lucky thirteenth for the Browns. Nor did they show much talent, with the exception of Johnny Tobin and Joseph Schepner. They blew another double-header, their second in as many playing days, and descended to within a game of the Red Sox, even though Barrow's men lost to Cleveland. The scores were 4—1 and 9—6. More than 12,000 attended.

George Mogridge's curves were too much for the Browns in the opener, and Sothoron had a bad first inning, from the effects of which his teammates did not recover. There was no good excuse for St. Louis dropping the second game, for they tallied six runs before New York started to score, but where they left off tallying the Yanks took up the practice with avidity and in the next four frames whaled Bert Gallia and Lefty Leifield for nine runs.

Tobin's fielding and slugging and Schepner's all-around work were the bright spots in the Browns' dull play. Tobin's bat, exceptionally active these days, accounted for four of the seven runs credited to St. Louis in the course of the afternoon. He whacked Mogridge for the visitors' only tally of the first game in the sixth inning and in the Browns' big session in the aftermath wherein they drove Herbert Thormahlen to cover, he poled another home run, this time with two on base. Schepner, the rookie, showed well at bat and at third base.

Pratt Drives in Two Runs.

Allan Sothoron started wildly. He hit Fewster in the first inning. Peck fanned. Baker singled to right. Pipp intercepted a wild curve with his hip and the bases were jammed. Pratt smacked a single to center, counting Fewster and Baker. Schepner leaped for Lewis' bounder and threw out Pipp at the plate, but Bodie singled, counting Pratt.

Mogridge kept the five hits he allowed well scattered ,and Sothoron pitched ably after his bad start. Tobin led off the sixth with his circuit clout. The Yanks got back the one run in their half of the sixth on Baker's scratch hit to short field, Pipp's martyr bunt and Pratt's solid poke to center.

Sisler, who while not doing much hitting, got on base four times in the second game, opened the Browns' big inning in the late contest with a double to left. Demmitt popped to Pratt. Pratt foozled Severeid's slow roller, Sisler taking third. Schepner doubled, scoring Sisler and sending Severeid to third. Gerber chopped to Baker, who got Severeid at the plate, but Gallia singled over second, counting Schepner. Tobin then leaped on one and chased Gerber and Gallia around the bases.

Severeid Drives in Run.

Quinn took up the pitching task in the third and did well for two innings, but in the fifth Jacobson's single, a fielder's choice and hits by Demmitt and Severeid produced a run.

The Yanks rose up then and Lewis' single, Bodie's double and Ruel's scratch hit over second gave them two markers in their half. Gerber's boot on Peckinpaugh, two outs, Pratt's double and Lewis' bingle gave New York two more in the sixth. Ruel was passed at the opening of the New York seventh. Shore, who pitched the last four innings for New York, singled, and Fewster walked, filling the bases. Burke took Gallia out and called in Leifield. Peck fanned, but Baker singled, counting Ruel and Gallia and Pipp's long fly to Jacobson enabled Fewster to score. Singles by Pratt and Lewis produced another run before the inning was ended. Fewster's double and Peck's single with two out in the eighth, gave New York its ninth counter.

Wagners to Play Screw Co. for Municipal Championship

Former Yesterday Defeated Arcadias, 4-2, While Latter Defeated Starters, 5-1—Title Series Will Be Started at Fairground No. 1 This Afternoon.

The Wagner Qualities of the Mercantile League and the St. Louis Screw Co. of the Commercial will this afternoon at Fairground No. 1 start a three-game series to decide the Municipal Baseball Association championship for the season of 1919. These two nines went into the finals yesterday by winning their semifinal clashes.

The Wagners defeated the Arcadias of the South Side League, 4 to 2, at Fairground, while the Screw Company downed the Starters of the Wagner League, 5—1, at Forest Park. Both were well played, with the pitchers showing great form.

The twirling and hitting of Seib enabled the Wagners to go into the final. Seib held his rivals to five hits, while he rapped out a double and a homer and also laid down a sacrifice. Phil Todt was the Arcadias' pitcher.

Errors Help Wagners.

In the second inning the Wagners put over a run when Bernsen walked, Bott was safe on Todt's error and Daly walked, filling the bases. Wickman flied to right and a double play resulted, but Seib was safe on an error and Bott scored. Seib's homer gave the Wagners another in the fifth.

The Arcadias tied it in the sixth, when Whitley walked and Conboy and Todt singled, scoring Whitley. Enghauser's long fly tallied Conboy. A double by Wickman, Seib's martyr death and C. LaBarge's hit gave another in the seventh, while Bartnett's error on Wickman and Seib's double produced the final one in the ninth.

Screw Co. Scores Early.

The St. Louis Screw Co. won its game from the Starters in the first inning, when three runs were scored. Meyers walked, Reidy sacrificed and was safe on an error; Gregory walked, filling the bases. All three scored when Fiebig doubled.

A homer by Fiebig in the sixth gave the Screw Co. its fourth run, while a hit, sacrifice and error gave the final one. Laue's double and Novack's single gave the Starters their lone marker.

Man-o-War Wins Belmont Futurity

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Samuel D. Riddle's chestnut colt Man o' War, by Fair Play-Mahuba, won the Classic Futurity over the six-furlong straightaway course at Belmont Park today, having led from start to finish, in 1:11 3-5. Harry Payne Whitney's Whiskbroom colt, John P. Grier, finished second, three lengths behind the winner and five lengths in front of Samuel C. Hildredth, Dominique, which got third money.

Running down the middle of the track with Jockey Loftus steering him straight without urging him, Man o' War won easily and proved conclusively that he is the 2-year-old champion of the year. Today's winner should have had a clean slate for 1919, but through mistakes made by Jockey Loftus suffered defeat just once, and that was at Saratoga last month.

The value of the stake to the winner was $26,650, with $3106 for the second and $1503 for the third horse.

RECRUIT HURLER WINS FOR GRIFF'S SENATORS

Army Eleven Practiees.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Sept. 13.—Kine football weather prevailed today and the light Army team had a long hard scrimmage. The work was characterized by fumbling by the back field men and some of the forwards. Many of the youngsters, however, made up in "pep" and enthusiasm for their lack of power and experience for the first time within the memory of the closest followers of army football. Every man will have to fight for a position as there is no leftover material for the coaches to build a team around.

Piker Gridiron Squads to Start Work Tomorrow

Coach Rutherford to Put His Men Through Morning and Afternoon Workouts.

EVENING MEAL AT SCHOOL

Thirty-Three Candidates Have Been Asked to Report for Inaugural Sessions.

Two practice workouts will open the 1919 football training season at Washington University tomorrow. Coach Rutherford has announced that his varsity candiadtes will be assembled on Francis Field at 10 a. m. and at 2 p. m.

Last week he requested 33 Pikeway students to report for the inaugural workout. In a circular letter to members of his squad he announced that all out-of-town players would receive sleeping accommodations at the university dormitories until the start of semester. Throughout the season the players will eat their evening meal at the school.

Inasmuch as spring practice was held on the Pikeway last April and May, many of the candidates will be ready early to start the intenser training. Several of the more prominent players spent the summer at camps, swimming pools and on recreational fields, and should be in good condition to tackle the workouts.

Rutherford has not heard recently from Eber Simposn and does not yet know when his assistant will arrive to aid him in conducting practice. Should Simpson fail to report this week, the maroon tutor will probably use a few of the graduated varsity men like Kling, Kohlbry and Potthoff.

Dr. H. G. Lund announces that the Washington alumni eleven will also start practice this week in order to be in tip top shape for the game with the varsity, which will usher in the competitive football season for the collegians.

High School Squads Busy.

Local high school coaches brought to a close the first week of gridiron practice yesterday afternoon. Coaches Crosby and Walker ran the McKinley and Central squads through two-hour drills at passing, punting and line tactics. The South Siders also had a brief signal practice.

The Cleveland and Yeatman squads had shorter sessions, while Coach Cook gave his Soldan candidates a layoff.

BROOKES WINNER OVER JOHNSTON IN STRAIGHT SETS IN AN EXHIBITION

CHICAGO, Sept. 13.—Three exciting matches closed the international tennis matches, with the visiting Australians having the better of the two-day sessions.

In singles matches, Norman E. Brookes, the famous Davis cup player from Australia, defeated William M. Johnston, San Francisco, singles champion of the United States, in straight sets. His alertness, volleying, shifting and returns of Johnston's hard drives won much applause.

Gerald T. Patterson, another Australian, won from William E. Davis of San Francisco.

In doubles, however, Walter T. Hayes and Ralph H. Burdick of Chicago, former Western sectional champions, bet Randolph Lycett and R. W. Thomas, Australians, in straight sets.

ALGONQUIN AND SUNSET CLUB TOURNEYS OPEN

Qualifying rounds in the club championship golf tournaments at the Algonquin and the Sunset Hill clubs were started yesterday and will be continued today. Inasmuch as the pairings will not be made until tonight, yesterday's scores were not announced.

Clarence Wolff, Eberhard Anheuser, Karl Bock and a number of other Sunset players were at Bellerive yesterday and consequently will qualify today.

One Way to Dampen the Reds' Ardor Would Be to Turn the White Hose on Them

Wolff Beats Bock For District Golf Title, 7 Up and 6

Brilliant Week of Medal Play, With Average of 73½ Brings Championship.

VICTOR ONE UP AT TURN

Runner-Up Falls Down on Short Game in Afternoon and Match Becomes Runaway.

Clarence Wolff became St. Louis District Golf Association champion, yesterday, when he defeated Karl Bock, a fellow entrant from the Sunset Hill Golf Club, 7 up and 6, in the final round of play over the Bellerive Country Club course.

Wolff's victory brought to a close a week of play which probably surpasses in brilliancy the efforts of any championship winner in his struggle for a local title during recent years. He qualified last Saturday with a 76, which was second low medal. Each of his five rounds of match play were walkaways and his medal average was 72½ strokes, as against the par allotment, 72. Included in the number are a 70, 71, 72, 74 and 78.

Karl Bock hung right on the heels of the champion during the morning round and at the close of the first 18 holes was only one down. However, Bock's remarkable short game play was much in evidence in the initial round. But in the afternoon the former Nebraskan could not make his mashie and putter do their tricks and he was lost before the brilliancy of Wolff.

Wolff Starts Runaway.

Wolff's runaway in the post-lunch session took a great deal of zest from the competition and all of the match that was left to interest the large gallery was the conjecture as to how soon the municipal course graduate could put his opponent out of the race.

Wolff started the morning by taking the first hole when his second was just short of the green. The next four holes were halved in par scores, and Wolff went to 2 up on No. 6 when Bock got off poorly from the tee.

Wolff had been going well up to this point and it appeared that only super golf could stop his onrush. However, starting on No. 7 he had a streak of play which was far below his standard and threatened his success. He took six strokes on the seventh and eighth holes, squaring matters, and halved the lake hole, No. 9.

Bock won No. 10 and took the score advantage for the only time during the match. He was enabled to do so when Wolff's second went over the green. The match was again brought to even terms on 11, when Bock missed a short putt. This would have steadied Wolff, as work on the green is Bock's forte.

The champion putted poorly on the following hole, which was halved, although Wolff was on a stroke ahead. He took three putts to negotiate the necessary 20 feet. On No. 13, Wolff again missed a pin shot which was no longer away than the length of a driver.

Bock Tops Three in a Row.

Bock topped his drive on the next tee, this being the third consecutive hole on which he was guilty of this fault. His play on the fairway was so inferior here as to prevent the superiority of his short play from making up the loss in yardage. This brought Wolff, 1 up. On the past nine holes Wolff had beaten his opponent to the green in every instance, his drives generally averaging 25 to 50 yards in distance farther and his long seconds giving him a corresponding advantage. However, his short game was mediocre and this alone allowed Bock to remain a factor.

The first evidence of what was in store for the new title holder came on the sixteenth green, when he took this hole with a 12-foot putt. It was the first real greens shot that Wolff had made during the day and gave him a renewed confidence, which he badly needed at the time.

A pair of par threes were scored on the next hole, while Bock took the home hole with a 3—4. Wolff's approach was about six feet from the flag on this green and he seemed due for a half, but his putt hit the lip of the cup and was repelled.

Rushes to Championship.

The second hole of the afternoon play started Wolff's furious rush. The rush lasted until the twelfth green when Bock shook hands, offered his best wishes, and all of that. During that rush Bock succeeded in winning only one hole and halving four. It was about as one-sided an affair as has been seen in a championship final in a long time.

Wolff took 2, 3 and 4. Bock won his lone victory on No. 5 when Clarence was guilty of a three-foot miss on the green. But he just smiled and went out to win the next one. A recapitulation of the remainder of the match would be tiring.

Bock deserves much credit for coming from his obscurity as a title contender and figuring in a final match. However, he was hardly a match for Wolff.

Next Year.

THE baseball season's waning
As in the days of yore;
The season of explaining
Has rolled around once more.
We have with us the season
Wherein the alibi
Explains to us the reason,
The wherefore and the why

The race has been decided,
And we may now adjourn;
Our heroes were derided,
The worm refused to turn.
Our boys were easy picking,
As in the days of yore;
They took their daily licking
And meekly asked for more.

But are the fans downhearted,
And do they peak and pine?
Has all their hope departed,
Is there no anodyne?
Not so. The sky is clearing,
We see a ray of cheer;
The clouds are disappearing—
We'll cop the flag next year.

Season of Brilliant Medal Play Precedes Wolff's Title Victory

ALTHOUGH Clarence Wolff has played the most brilliant golf of any local player this season, his victory over Bock gave him his first championship in interclub competition for the year.

Last May he won the spring tournament of the Algonquin Golf Club by defeating John Morrison in the final. He was also medalist in this tourney.

In the Trans-Mississippi he tied with Roger Lord and Nelson Whitney for low qualifying honors with a 73 and a 79. On the following day he was eliminated from match play by Karl Bock, 2 and 1.

He was medalist of the Western amateur at Sunset Hill and lost to Legg, 4 up and 3, in the semi-finals.

In the State tournament in Kansas City he was low medalist with 76 on the openin gday. Jimmy Ward defeated him in the third round, 3 and 2.

He took the trophy for low score among amateurs at an invitation tournament at the Meadow Lake Country Club in Kansas City. His efforts at an open tournament at the Ridgedale Country Club gave him second low score for amateurs, Chris Kenney winning.

Wolff lasted until the semifinals in the city championship meet on the public course in Forest Park. He was eliminated by James Manion.

Greb and Martin Meet in Feature Bout at Coliseum

Eastern Boxers Scheduled to Go Eight Rounds Here Next Thursday Night.

Harry Greb, the Pittsburg light-heavyweight and "Silent" Martin of New York, will meet in the feature eight-round bout of the Future City A. C. to be staged at the Coliseum next Thursday night. It will be the first time that either one of these boxers has been seen in action in this city.

Both Greb and Martin have met the best boxers in the country. Greb's latest conquests came over K. O. Brennan and Battling Levinsky. Greb, according to reports, also has an offer to meet Georges Carpentier. Martin, among others, has boxed Mike Gibbons and Mike O'Dowd.

In the semi-windup, Jack Sherley of Carlinville, Ill., and Fred Lewis of this city, middleweights, are scheduled to mix. Both have fought in contests overseas. George Witt and Jack Rainey, two local 118-pounders, will furnish the curtain raiser.

Jimmy Bronson was here yesterday trying to arrange a match for Bob Martin, the soldier heavyweight, and Tommy Sullivan is at present considering putting him on. Bronson stated he had 14 matches in sight for Martin and is on his way to Cleveland to confer with Matt Hinkell.

Grand Jury Will Investigate Price of Series Tickets

Letter to Prosecutor Accuses Cincinnati Baseball Club of Profiteering.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 13.—Following the receipt of a letter today, by County Prosecutor Capelle, in which the writer pointed out that $5.50 is to be charged for a seat which ordinarily sells for 85 cents, it was said the Grand Jury will investigate the charge that the Cincinnati Baseball Club is profiteering in the sale of tickets to the world series games, if they are played in Cincinnati.

"It is to be regretted," the letter said, "but nevertheless the fact remains that prices as shown on the application cards (one to each person) are in plain figures 400 per cent higher than the price charged for admission to any regular scheduled season game."

It details the notice which each applicant signs agreeing the method of distribution by drafting is not a lottery and asks: "If this is not to be considered a lottery scheme, then why the necessity of filling out an application card? It is really is not an ordinary lottery scheme; It positively is a prohibitive lottery scheme, particularly for the man of ordinary means."

John M. Dugan, secretary of the grand jury and prominent in semi-pro. baseball circles, said: "Should we find that excessive rates morally violate the backing fans have given the team for many years, we certainly will investigate the matter."

Federal officials still are investigating whether or not a lottery is involved.

HERRMANN HAS NEW PLAN FOR SEAT ALLOTMENTS AT FOURTH AND FIFTH GAMES

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 13.—August Herrmann, president of the Cincinnati Nationals, announced today that in the event there are fourth and fifth world series baseball games played in Cincinnati, persons who are awarded reserved seats for the first three games will not be considered in the allotment of seats for the later games.

The plan was decided on by the Cincinnati club directors as the best way of accommodating the greatest number of persons.

"No more applications for any of the games to be played in this city will be received, after Monday noon," Herrmann said. "If the Reds clinch the pennant, the awarding of reserved seats for the first three games in Cincinnati will be made as soon as possible, after we are sure of the victory. The applications of the unsuccessful fans will be kept, and if there is a fourth game here, reserved seats for it will be awarded along the same plan as that for the first three games. If there is a fifth game, the rule will apply for it."

Semifinal Golf Matches on Today's Park Program

Two semifinal matches in the municipal championship golf tournament will feature today's play over the public course in Forest Prk. James Manion, city champion, will meet T. P. Roan, and John Manion is paired with Frank Pep, champion of the Forest Park Golf Club. The local title holder is expected to eliminate Roan, while his brother is picked to gain a victory over Pep, who has not been playing up to form recently.

Semifinal matches will also be played in the other classes.

Nelson to Box Long.

Fred Nelson, the local welterweight, is scheduled to meet Ray Long in a 12-round bout at Pitcher, Ok., Sept. 26. Friday night Nelson defeated Ling in a 10-round go at Springfield, Mo.

Drewes Defeats Josties for City Net Championship

MEN'S SEVENTH MEETING

Ted Stages Great Rallies Whenever Fred Threatens to Turn Tide of Match.

By Davison Obear,
Secretary St. Louis Tennis Association.

Theodore Drewes added another title to his great record of this season by defeating Fred Josties in the fiuals of the annual city tennis championship at the Triple A Club yesterday afternoon. Drewes won in straight sets, 7—5, 6—2 and 6—4. It was the seventh time these two players had met in the final of a tournament in the last four years. The victory of the Central States champion was the most decisive of any and the third time he has conquered his teammate this season. Drewes won from Josties in the St. Louis Tennis Association elimination tournament at Kirkwood in June in a five set match and repeated again in the Central States championship, winning this match in three sets.

Ted opened the first set by some excellent placement shots and soon took a commanding lead. At 4 games to 1 against him Josties braced and by brilliant net play won three straight games. Drewes and Josties each won a game making the score 5 all. After some good rallies Drewes won the next two games and the set at 7—5.

Josties Loses Accuracy.

The second set started with Drewes steadying down and Josties getting less accurate, especially from the back court position. Josties won the first and third games in this set and then Ted won five games in a row, capturing the set rather easily at 6—2.

Josties started the third set by more steady playing. He came into the net considerably during the first few games and gained a lead of 4 games to 1.

Here it was thought that he would win the set with ease. However, he weakened and Drewes sprang a surprise by his unusual net play and overhead strokes at this point. Ted took five straight games, winning the set and match at 6—4.

While neither of the contestants appeared quite up to usual mark of play the match produced some good tennis for the spectators. The weather was ideal and the court in excellent shape. A fair-sized crowd came out to see the city's best tennis players meet for the third time this year.

FIRST SET.

Drewes 5 4 4 6 4 0 4 1 0 1 8 3
Total 40, games 7.
Josties 7 0 1 4 1 4 2 4 4 4 6 1
Total 38, games 5.

SECOND SET.

Drewes 2 4 5 0 4 4 4 4
Total 27, games 6.
Josties 4 2 3 4 2 2 2 2
Total 21, games 2.

THIRD SET.

Drewes 5 7 4 1 2 4 5 4 4 4
Total 38, games 6.
Josties 7 5 6 4 4 2 3 2 0 1
Total 34, games 4.

Recapitulation—Drewes, 19 games, 105 points; Josties, 11 games, 93 points: Umpire—Bowman.

12 Doubles Matches Played.

Twelve matches were played yesterday in the first and second rounds of the City Doubles tournament. Josties and Drewes advanced to the third round by winning one match by default and defeating Meyer and Kerwin, 6—1, 7—5. Carson and Brown also won two matches. They won from Fowler and Robinson, 6—1, 6—2, and then took Fennell and Gardner into camp by winning easily, 6—1, 6—1. The favorites came through as expected, no upsets occurring.

International Sporting Club of New York Formed

Plans for $500,000 Clubhouse, to Open in February, in Hands of Contractors.

RING TO BE ON ELEVATOR

Boxers to Enter Arena in Basement and Be Hoisted to View of Spectators.

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—The formation of a membership boxing club which will include among its sponsors and supporters some of the most prominent men of the country, was announced here tonight.

The new organization will be known as the International Sporting Club of New York and will be modelled, to some extent, along the lines of the famous National Sporting Club of London.

Plans for the erection of a $500,000 clubhouse to be located at Fifty-fifth street and Sixth avenue, in the heart of the city, are in the hands of contractors and it is hoped to open the arena early in February with an international bout in which Jimmy Wilde, the English flyweight champion of the world, will be one of the contenders.

The club, which will operate under a charter from the Army, Navy and Civilian Board of Boxing Control and the National Sporting Clubs of America, both incorporated bodies, will be the most impressive organization ever formed in this country for the purpose of staging boxing exhibitions under the membership plan. The building will be constructed of marble with a number of reading and dining rooms as well as a large lounge. There will be one or more smaller clubs with separate quarters within the main club building.

Arena on an Elevator.

The dressing rooms for the boxers will be in the basement and the contestants will enter the ring there and rise with the entire roped enclosure to the arena proper by means of an elevator device, thus doing away with the usual tiresome preliminaries preceding a bout. The arena, including private boxes and balconies, will seat about 2500 spectators. In place of the usual seats there will be heavily upholstered chairs.

According to the prospects of the club, the officers include Maj. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, president; Hon. Franklin K. Lane, Gen. Coleman Du Pont, Admiral W. S. Sims and Justice Bartow S. Weeks, vice president; while the Admission and Ballot Committee numbers among others Warren Barbour, Charles Dana Gibson and Charles H. Sabin. On the General Committee as well as on a number of special committees are found the names of Major-General T. H. Barry, Walter Camp, Rear Admiral Benton C. Decker, Prof. Irving Fisher, Yale University; Samuel Gompers, C. Oliver Iselin, Major-General J. F. Morrison, Charles H. Sabin, Augustus Thomas, United States Senators H. S. New, K. D. Pittman, Miles Poindexter, J. W. Wadsworth Jr., Congressman M. J. Cary and J. I. Nolan.

Rickard to Be Matchmaker.

Tex Rickard will be the official matchmaker for the club and he will be empowered to arrange for contests between the leading boxers of the country as well as for international matches. All amateur as well as industrial boxing contests, for which a large number of special belts and prizes will be offered, will be under the supervision of Frederick W. Rubien, secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union, with which the International Sporting Club has arranged a general working agreement. Army and navy matches will also be featured.

This will permit the holding of the A. A. U. championship tournament in the new arena as well as Olympic games, boxing and wrestling tryouts.

In addition it is the purpose of the club to encourage and support other tournaments, including billiard matches and wrestling contests between leading mat contenders of the world. A lengthy program including boxing bouts ranging from four to 10 rounds between the leading professionals and numerous amateur and industrial boxers, in all weight classes, has been mapped out for the months of February, March and April and according to the announcement of the club there will be boxing matches almost every night in the week once the arena is opened.

HEUERMANN WINS FROM BASCOM IN NET MATCH

Ted Heuermann, representative of the Fairground in the interpark elimination series for the municipal tennis championship, defeated Bill Bascom, Sherman Park, in a strenuous five-set match at Forest Park, yesterday afternoon. The scores were 2—6, 6—0, 2—6, 6—4, 6—4. The match was started at 2:15 p. m. and was not completed until 6:10 p. m.

Walter Haase, Reservoir, was awarded his match by default when the St. Louis Park failed to have an opponent to meet him. The St. Louis tournament was not completed.

All doubles contestants are requested to report at Forest Park not later than 9:30 o'clock this morning.

Wabadas Play Alton.

Cliff Brady will take a strong Wabada team to Alton to play the Moose Club of that city at Sportsman's Park this afternoon. Brady is elated by the acquisition of Roy Jenkins, former star right fielder of the original Wabadas, who has just returned from service overseas. Brady thinks he has a great team to oppose the fast Moose Club. "Lefty" Wallace will pitch; John Schultz will play first, Brady second, Hauk short and Murphy third. Players leave the Eads Bridge station at 11:15 a. m.

Ray and Murphy Set New Records in A. A. U. Meet

Windy City Star Covers Mile in 4 Minutes 18 2-5 Seconds, While Coast Star Sets Standard in High Jump With 6 Feet 3 3-16 Inches—New York A. C. Wins.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 13.—The New York Athletic Club repeated its success of the junior championship yesterday when it also won the senior National A. A. U. track and field honors, which were held on Franklin Field here today. Victory came in the final event on the program, when the Winged Foot organization managed to count eight points in the javelin. This gave them a total of 46 points.

Prior to this contest, the Chicago Athletic Association led the three dozen clubs in the point table with 40 points to its credit with the N. Y. A. C. following only two points behind However, in the javelin Chicago failed to add a single point while George Bronder, the defending champion, and Jim Lincoln, both of the New York Club, were first and second, respectively. The Illinois Athletic Club, Chicago, which was expected to give the N. Y. A. C., a hard fight for the point honors, finished third with 26 points and the Boston Athletic Association fourth with 21 points.

While the East showed the way to the western rivals by an overwhelming margin in the junior contests, such was not the case today. Of the 19 individual titles, ten went to the West, seven to the East and two to the far West.

Two Records Are Broken.

Two championship records were broken, one going to the credit of Poie Ray in the one-mile run and the other to John Murphy, Multnomah Athletic Club, Portland, Ore., in the running high jump. In several other instances the standards escaped being broken by close margins so unexpectedly high was the caliber of the athletes performances throughout the afternoon.

Murphy went over the high jump bar at 6 feet 3 3-16 inches which displaced the former record of 6 feet 3 inches. In this contest eight of the dozen contestants were credited with performances of over six feet.

The success of the New York A. C. team came in the field events in which Pat McDonald and Matt J. McGrath were prominent contestants. McDonald was one of the four athletes that succeeded in winning double brackets, his victories coming in the 56-pound weight and shot put. McGrath finished second to Pat Ryan in the 16-pound hammer and scored points in other events.

The three other athletes to win two titles were Floyd Smart, Chicago A. A.; Robert I. Simpson and Ray, both representing the Illinois Athletic Club. Smart captured the running broad jump and 15 minutes later snatched victory away from William eManix, Boston A. A., in the last 20 yards of the 440-yard high hurdle race.

Simpson Regains Titles.

Simpson regained his 120-yard high hurdle title and also took the 220-yard low, both in rather clever fashion. In the short race, Simpson won by inches from Fred Kelly, New York A. C. Simpson had a one-yard margin to spare in the 220-yard event with Thompson nosing out Jo Loomis, Chicago A. A., for second place at the tape.

Charles Pores, the five-mile champion, retained his title, but in nowise did his time of 26m 2s impress the onlookers.

Ray won the half by five yards with Eddie Fall, second, inches in front of Homer Baker, Glencoe A. C. Ray jumped his field half a lap from home with Baker following in his wake. Baker closed on Ray in the stretch run but about 25 yards from home weakened badly to be passed by Fall a stride.

Ray Gets New Record.

Joie W. Ray, the Illinois A. C. whirlwind, smashed his one-mile championship record in retaining his title in the time of 4.14 2-5. This bettered his own mark of 4.18 2-5, made in St. Louis in 1917. It was the third consecutive year that Ray has won the honors. The world's record is 4.12 3-5, held by Norman Taber. Ray set a hurricane pace when he assumed the van and only Eddie Fall of Chicago A. A. was willing to follow it. The Illinois athlete sped past his rivals at two and a half laps with Fall at his heels.

The pair pulled away from their field, with Jim Connolly of the Boston A. A. following 25 yards back at the end of the third lap. Ray gained a lead of eight yards on Fall, who did not give an inch in the mad rush down the backstretch.

Ray's intermediate times were quarter 63 4-5 seconds; half mile 2:07 4-5 seconds; three quarters, 3:09 1-5; one mile 4:14 2-5.

Hayes Defeats Murchison.

William D. Hayes of the Boston A. A. carried his speed throughout to win the 100-yard sprint. Loren Murchison, N. Y. A. C., who was second, one foot back, fought it out on even terms with Hayes until a few yards from the finish. Henry Williams, Spokane A. C., reserved his final sprint a second too late, being beaten by inches for second place.

Frank Shea, Pittsburg A. A., came back with an impressive victory in the 440-yard run. A field of 15 started with Shea jumping quickly and assuming the lead after covering 75 yards. He set a brisk pace, having a five-yard lead on the turn. He managed to hold his advantage all the way, although toward the finish his rivals cleared rapidly on him, with James J. O'Brien, Loughlin Lyceum, New York, coming through with the best finish. He was about one yard back of Shea, with J. W. Driscoll, Boston A. A., third.

William Plant, Morningside A. C., succeeded in winning the three-mile walk. Joe Pearman, N. Y. A. C., and veteran Dick Remer were second and third respectively. All three fought it out for two miles, when Remer felt the pace and dropped back. Pearman and Plant then had a duel until half a lap from home, where Plant moved away to win by 50 yards.

Robert Simpson, recognized world's champion hurdler, had only inches to spare in defeating Fred W. Kelly, New York A. C., in the 120-yard event. Kelly and Thompson fought it out together. Neither gave an inch until passing the last obstacle when Simpson's greater speed told. At the time of Thompson's misfortune he was on even terms with Simpson, who after the start had gained a slight margin. The time of 15 1-5 seconds was fast for the still soft track.

The final team score: New York A. C. 46, Chicago A. C. 40, Illinois A. C. 26, Boston A. A. 21, Mulnomah A. C., Portland, Ore., 11; Loughlin Lyceum New York 11, Spokane A. C., Washington, 7; Millrose A. C. 5, Paulist A. C., New York, 5; Pittsburg A. A. 5, Mohawk A. C. 4, Cross Country Club, Baltimore, 3; Meadowbrook Club, Philadelphia, 3; Notre Dame University, Indiana, 3; University of Chicago 3, Olympic Club of San Francisco 2, Salem Crescent A. Murchison Second in Both Dash Events at National Title Meet

LOREN MURCHISON, the St. Louis boy, former star of the St. Louis A. A., now running under the colors of the New York A. C., ran second in both the 100 and 220-yard dashes in the National A. A. U. championships at Philadelphia today. In the furlong, Murchison lost his title gained at Great Lakes last year. Murchison's record was as follows:

100-yard semifinal — Finished second to Henry Williams, Spokane A. C., in 10 1-5 seconds.

100-yard final—Second to William D. Hayes, Boston A. A., in 10 1-5 seconds.

220-yard semifinal—Second to Morris M. Kirksey, Olympic Club, San Francisco, in 22 4-5 seconds.

220-yard final—Second to Henry Williams, Spokane A. C., in 21 4-5 seconds.

Tigers' Backfield Made Up Entirely of "Letter" Stars

Stankowski, Viner, Collins and Edwards on Hand; Only Two Line Vets Appear.

SQUAD IS WELL ADVANCED

Two Weeks' Workout Without Coach Has Put Men in Good Physical Condition.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Sept. 13.—With a short workout, lightened on account of the mid-summer heat, the University of Missouri football squad ended its two weeks of preliminary work today. Monday training under the new coach will begin.

The opening of pratice under coaches finds the Tigers with a good two weeks' start on the teams of other schools which are not starting until next week. Heat has necessarily slowed the work, but the men have had their eyes and their hands on the ball.

They are handling the ball well, they have their wind, and they are in fair condition. Cool weather next week will mean that the Tigers can plunge into work at a near mid-season pace.

Anton Stankowski, quarterback of the 1916 Tiger team, was in Columbia this week, entered school and took his first workout in Tiger colors in two years. That evening he left for Camp Dodge, Io., where he will receive his discharge from the army. He will be in Columbia ready to report for regular work Monday.

Tigers Assured Strong Backfield.

Stankowski's return gives the Tigers a veteran backfield. With Viner, Collins and Edwards, letter men, and Peterson, all-Missouri halfback in 1916, already in school, his return gives the Tigers a quintet of ball carriers who will be hard to beat, to say nothing of the new material which is showing up for backfield positions.

In the line there are only two letter men—Kolb, center, and Schroeder, end—but there is a wealth of material to build a stone wall defense by next Thanksgiving day.

The three heaviest men on the squad—Travis, Allen and Springate—are candidates for positions in the line. The first was a tackle on the freshman squad of two years ago. The other two are candidates for the position of center.

Captaincy Is Unsettled.

The return of Viner, Collins and Stankowski complicates the race for captain of the Tigers this year. As no games were played and no letter awarded last year, no captain was elected. By common consent, Heinie Bass, captain last year, was slated for the post this year; but Bass is not in school, and a new pilot will be chosen, probably early next week. The six letter men will be eligible to vote, and as all are seniors, all will be eligible for the post. Stankowski, Viner and Collins, however, have the edge on the other three men, on account of length of service.

Ninety in Freshman Squad.

Work with the freshmen is going ahead. The squad, which has been cut from 140 to about 90 men, was given its first workout at tackling the dummy, yesterday afternoon. The men are working under Charles Woody, former Tiger fullback, now a member of the faculty of the College of Agriculture.

The fact that Woody is in charge of the freshmen, while Miller is still officially freshman coach, and the fact that Miller is handling the routine work in connection with the Varsity squad, are taken as further indications that he will be chosen Varsity coach.

MISS JULIA DROZDA AND MARVIN MITSCHRICH WIN SUNDAY SCHOOL SINGLES

The singles championship tennis tournament of the St. Louis Sunday School Athletic Association came to a close, Friday, when the final round in competition for girls was played. This tournament had the largest number of entries of any ever held in the city and also took the longest time to be completed. The original entry totaled 312 players in the singles and mixed doubles. Two hundred and eight-seven boys actually took part in the play, which started on June 20 and ended on Sept. 11, thus consuming two months and 22 days for completion.

The players were divided into 33 groups averaging eight to a group. Play in each group was based on the round robin plan, that is, each playing against every other in the group. Group winners then played an elimination series to determine the individual champion of the Sunday School Association for this season.

The mixed doubles tournament is now under way. In one first-round match Sylvia Walden and David Kotthoff took the first set from Martha Clark and Mitschrich at 9—7 but were forced to stop playing on account of darkness.

Summary of the singles championships follows:

Girls' singles—Julia Drozda defeated Emma Hoffman 4—6, 6—2, 7—5.

Boys' singles—Marvin Mitschrich defeated Lloyd Heibing 6—0, 6—0.

PERSHING BESIEGED AT WASHINGTON BY ADMIRING CROWDS

Is Jostled at Times by Eager Throngs Trying to Get Close to Him—Pays Official Visit to Baker.

TAKES RECEPTION LIKE SCHOOL BOY

General on 59th Birthday Chats With Hundreds—Attends Ball Game and Track Meet.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—With the exception of a short official call on the Secretary of War and Chief of Staff March, and an inspection of his new offices here during the morning, Gen. Pershing spent his first full day in the national capital sight seeing and being seen. Today was his 59th birthday. During the afternoon the General and his staff attended an inter-department track meet participated in by the athletes of the various Government departments here and then witnessed a baseball game between the Washington and Detroit teams of the American League. The General dined and spent the evening with Senator Warren, of Wyoming, and Mrs. Warren at their home here.

Gen. Pershing's only plans for tomorrow are to attend religious services at an Episcopal church in the morning. He expects to rest in the afternoon.

Everywhere the General's party went today he was besieged by admiring throngs who yelled and fought each other for a close-up view, a handshake or a word from him. Good-natured and smiling all the while, the General shook hands, saluted and waved responses to the acclaim of the crowds. Only once did he seem to fade from the center of the picture. That was at the baseball game. True to the American way, a few minutes after his arrival in the ball grounds, he gave place briefly in the popular clamor to Ty Cobb, Hughey Jennings, Uncle Nick Altrock and the favorites of the diamond. It was only for a brief spell. Altrock saw to it that the crowd didn't become so much interested in the ball game as to forget the hero of the day. In his inimitable way he would occasionally approach the box occupied by the Pershing party and salute. The General entered into the spirit of the fun, returned the salute, the crowd yelled and the game went on.

Ovation at High School.

At the Central High School early in the afternoon the General received public ovation. He shook hands and chatted for a while with a number of wounded soldiers, patients at Walter Reed Hospital. After about an hour watching the track events, the General started for the baseball game. His rising was a signal for a grand rush and the track meet was forgotten for a few minutes while the spectators clambered over benches to get at him as he passed out.

He walked for a few minutes with the women managers of the track event and congratulated them upon the admission of girls to the program. As he moved on he shook hands with hundreds of enthusiastic welcomers. One small boy was missed. The youngster ran among the throng and yelled:

"Hold on there Mister, you passed me by."

The General turned, saulted and said, "I beg your pardon, sir," and gave the lad a hearty handclasp.

There was some comment today over the fact that the General wore no decorations, other than the ribbon of the distinguished service cross. He did not have the prescribed chevrons on his sleeves. An explanation was quickly forthcoming at the department. While it is orders that officers from overseas wear all the prescribed trapping, Gen. Pershing, because of his rank is not subject to such regulations. As General in the regular establishment, he may prescribe his own uniform and insignia; wear such as he may please of his decorations.

UNITED RAILWAYS ACCEPTS COMMISSION FARE AWARD

Tokens to Be Sold in Small Lots by Conductors—Drug Stores to Handle Large Sales.

The United Railways yesterday accepted the fare award of the Missouri Public Service Commision by which street car fares in St. Louis will be 8 cents beginning next Saturday, or 7 cents if tokens good for rides are bought in quantity.

Rolla Wells, receiver indicated his desire that the commission change the fare for children from 4 cents to two rides for 7 cents, thus encouraging the purchase of tokens which will reduce the necessity of conductors handling pennies.

The company is seeking a method of sale of tokens to adults that will cause the least time-loss through demand upon conductors' time. It is probable that tokens will be put up in packages of 2 for 15 cents or 7 for 50 cents. Packages containg 50 for $3.50 likely will be sold in drug stores and other places, but not on cars.

ST. LOUIS MARINE WHO IS UNACCOUNTED FOR

CORP JOHN ROBERT WILLIAMS

ST. LOUISAN ONLY MAN OF A. E. F. STILL MISSING

Mother Has Been Waiting a Year for News of Corp. J. R. Williams, Sixth Marines.

Mrs. Emma Williams of 2512 North Fourteenth street has been waiting a year for news of her son, Corp. John Robert Williams of the Sixth Regiment, United States Marine Corps. A news dispatch from Washington says that Corp. Williams is the only American soldier still recorded as missing, every other member of the American Expeditionary Force having been accounted for. There were at one time more than 25,000 men listed as missing.

Mrs. Williams' long ordeal has been rendered more distressing by incorrect reports that her son has been accounted for. These reports were due to the presence of another John R. Williams, a Sergeant, in the Sixth Marines, and a John B. Williams in the same regiment. They are from North Carolina and Texas, respectively, and their names were confused with that of the St. Louis man in the reports which reached his mother.

Mrs. Williams said yesterday that the last letter she received from her son, a year ago, was written July 14, 1918. It said only that the writer was at the front, and that he had seen some St. Louis acquaintances, whom he did not name.

Feb. 14 last, after Mrs. Williams had become greatly worried over her failure to hear from her son, the name of Sergt. John R. Williams, with the Fourteenth street address, appeared in the official casualty list as being wounded severely. Mrs. Williams supposed that this was her son, and that either he had been promoted to Sergeant, or that an error had been made in stating his rank.

She began an inquiry through Representative Igoe, and he learned that Corp. Williams was wounded in action in Belleau Wood, July 19. This is the last authentic information about the missing man.

Later Mrs. Williams was notified that "John R. Williams of the Sixth Marines" had returned to the United States and was in a hospital in Pelham Bay, N. Y. She addressed a letter there, and the reply showed the mistake which had been made. It was from Sergt .John R. Williams of North Carolina. Through confusion with the name of the St. Louis man, the St. Louis address had been given for Sergt. Williams in the official list.

Through the Red Cross, Mrs. Williams learned that a John Williams of the Sixth Marines was in a hospital in Sevres, France. She wrote to him, and he proved to be John B. Williams of Texas. Later attempts to get further information about the St. Louis Corporal have been unavailing.

Gen. Barnett has sent a cablegram giving full details of the case and instructing marine officers in France to clear up the matter, if possible. He has assured Representative Igoe that he will not stop until he is in possession of information that will relieve the St. Louis mother's suspense.

House Defeats War Insurance Plan.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13.—The American Legion's plan for two years free insurance to present holders of life policies in war risk insurance was defeated today in the House on a parliamentary proceedure. It probably will be taken up in another way.

PLANS FOR CRAFTS EXPOSITION OCT. 15 ARE FAR ADVANCED

Exhibitors Already Are Inspecting Space for Industrial Displays in Southern Hotel Building.

CAMPAIGN FOR SALE OF 100,000 TICKETS

Members of Committee Hope to Assure Record Attendance in Advance—Firms Volunteer Aid.

Work upon the Southern Hotel Building, repairing and fitting it for the requirements of the St. Louis Industrial Arts and Crafts Exposition, to open Oct. 15 for four weeks, is far advanced and exhibitors are inspecting the places available for their displays.

A special committee appointed by the Associated Retailers of St. Louis, consisting of L. M. Monheimer, chairman; Leopold Ackermann, W. E. Georgia, F. C. Lake, Sidney R. Baer, D. M. Boyd and Harry T. T. Smith, met with the director of the exposition, Charles D. Platt, to arrange for exhibit space, and inspected the space.

The exposition poster, for which a prize of $200 was awarded to Harland Frazer by the St. Louis Art League, has been published, and several thousand are now being put up about the city.

Park Commissioner Cunliff has placed at the disposition of Dawson Watson for the Exposition Committee the 22 flag poles which were used in the decoration on Twelfth street for the soldiers' "Welcome Home" celebration. These will be installed about the Southern Hotel Building and along Broadway to Olive street.

Plan to Sell 100,000 Tickets.

An important factor relied upon in making the exhibition a success is the campaign to assure a record attendance. A feature of this campaign is the co-operation of affiliated bodies and the formation of the Affiliated Committee on Attendance Promotion, with the immediate object of securing an advance sale of 100,000 admissions.

With the nominal admission charge of 25 cents, with half price for children, adopted to bring the educational advantages of the exposition within the reach of all, it is felt by the attendance committee, under the chairmanship of Mrs. George Gelhorn, that, on the ground of its business advantages to St. Louis, every industrial worker in the city should be induced to attend once and see the installations which will tell the story of America at work to make the nation's products at once useful and attractive.

Boston to Have Exhibit.

The action taken by the United States Senate, in the opinion of the Exposition Committee, will cause organizations, institutions and leaders in the industries and arts throughout the country to recognize more fully the nationally significant character of the exposition, as will the action by the City of Boston.

Details of the municipal exhibit of the City of Boston are being arranged by the secretary of the City Planning Board and Judge Charles Claflin Allen, president of the St. Louis Art League, following action by Mayor Andrew J. Peters and Commissioner Ralph A. Cran. The latter also proposes an exhibit of ecclesiastical art. He believes that a collection can be gathered in Boston, and it is already planned to have a St. Louis exhibit chosen with the co-operation of church authorities and competent jurors.

Advisory Committee Enlarged.

Additional members of the Advisory Committee of Subscribing Patrons who have accepted office since the last announcement for this committee are: Col. M. Shoenberg, Joseph W. Folk, A. Waldheim, William Sacks, Con. P. Curran, George R. Merrell, J. M. Herbert, A. B. Elias, Walter B. Woodward, J. P. Thomy, L. H. Waltke, W. A. Layman, Joseph B. Thomas, Mayor Kiel, Gov. Gardner, W. J. DEADLOCK STRENGTHENED IN STRIKE OF UNION TAILORS

The deadlock in the strike of journeymen tailors, who have been out since Labor day, was strengthened yesterday, when the Merchant Tailors' Association sent a letter to the union, asserting that members would not compromise on any of the demands made by the journeymen, and repeating their original offer of a 25 per cent increase in pay. The union leaders immediately replied, rejecting the offer flatly.

An eight-hour day and a time scale of wages, with a minimum of $36 a week for men's tailors and $40 a week for tailors of women's clothing, and time and a half for overtime and holidays, comprise the strikers' demands.

The employers declared again that they were utterly opposed to giving up the piecework system, although they are willing to pay a higher rate. Their letter said many of the strikers were opposed to giving it up. The union leaders replied that the vote on substituting the time scale for piecework was unanimous.

Frank Petera, secretary of the union, declared that unless the demands are met by tomorrow, they will be augmented to a minimum of $45 a week for women's tailors, $40 for men's tailors, and double time for overtime and holidays.

There are motor trucks that cost thousands of dollars more than a Traffic—they are bigger, not better.

There is no other truck built of the Traffic's capacity that is better. Trucks of similar capacity to the Traffic cost hundreds of dollars more.

The low price of the Traffic has been made possible by quantity production of the lowest priced 4000-lb. capacity truck in the world. You can cut the cost of hauling with teams in half with a Traffic.

Traffic Specifications:

Red Seal Continental 3¾x5 Motor; Covert transmission and multiple disc clutch; Bosch magneto; 4 piece cast shell, cellular type radiator; drop forged front axle with Timken Roller Bearings; Russell Rear Axle, internal gear, roller bearings; semi-elliptic front and rear springs; 6-inch U-Channel Frame; Standard Fisk Tires, 34x3½ front, 34x5 rear; 133-inch wheel base; 122-inch length of frame behind driver's seat; oil cup lubricating system; chassis painted, striped and varnished; driver's lazy-back seat and cushion, regular equipment. CITY AND COUNTY REALTY ON SPECIAL SALES THIS WEEK

Properties Held to Have Decided Speculative Advantages to Be Offered by Hemmelmann-Spackler.

By Berry Moore.

The Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co. will conduct two special commissioner's sales this week, each of more than ordinary importance. Both are exciting wide attention, as the property in each instance is of a type involving decided speculative advantages, especially in view of the upward trend of prices of real estate in St. Louis as the result of house shortage, to say nothing of the fact that the offerings are to be knocked down to the highest bidder without limit or reserve.

The first sale will take place tomorrow at the St. Louis County Court House, Clayton. It will comprise 30.63 acres on the east side of the Bellefontaine road, half a mile north of the city limits, and 82 lots in Prospect Hill, just east of the aforementioned land, a plat of which is shown in a circular describing the property issued by the Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co.

The other sale will take place at noon Tuesday, at the east front of the St. Louis Court House. It will embrace 12 pieces of improved property, consisting of single and double flats, all of which are on a high revenue plane. Eight or nine of these holdings are in the 3200 and 3300 blocks of North Eleventh street. The list also includes the southwest corner of Broadway and Buchanan street, the northwest corner of Eleventh and Buchanan streets, and the southwest corner of Eleventh and Angelrodt streets, these being buildings comprising stores and flats.

An advertisement with complete description of the property may be found elsewhere in this section of day's Post-Dispatch. Theo. Hemmelmann will act as special commissioner in each instance.

West Maryland Place Sales.

Sales of lots in West Maryland place, an extension of Maryland terrace in University City, which was opened to buyers last week by the Davis Realty Development Co., foreshadow the rapid absorption of that addition. A score of purchases have been made in that plat by persons who contemplate building homes in the early future, according to Everett Davis, president of the company.

West Maryland place is only a block west of Pennsylvania avenue and the Washington University grounds, which form the east boundary of Maryland terrace, which is being improved with homes of the highest type. The addition has been subdivision into liberal sized lots, with depths varying from 192 to 220 feet and with deep building lines.

The prices at which the lots are being sold range from $72.50 a foot up, while the houses planned for them will cost on a scale ranging perhaps from $15,000 to $25,000, and in some instances higher, it was stated. Accordingly they will be of a character that will tend to enhance appreciably the value of the ground.

The surface improvements of this tract are of the finest and most complete. Not less than 3000 shade trees of different varieties embellish the addition.

The Davis Realty Development Co. is also holding a sale of lots in Vinita Park and in Vinita Terrace, subdivisions which are breaking all records on the Creve Coeur line. Lots in these additions, divided only by the Creve Coeur line, are available at $15 a foot and up, including street improvements.

Other West End Additions.

Records are also being broken in Ames place, which forms a continuation of Parkview and which is being marketed by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. Homes have been erected in that addition, which have given new value to the ground, yet the prices of lots have not been increased materially. The George F. Bergfeld Real Estate Co. and J. I. Epstein are offering very handsome homes in course of construction or completed in that addition, which has many advantages as to location.

New records are also being set at other additions in the West End, this being especially true as to Hillcrest, where A. R. Schollmeyer, a former president of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, and R. J. Dalton are holding a special sale of lots that is attracting many persons with home-building plans.

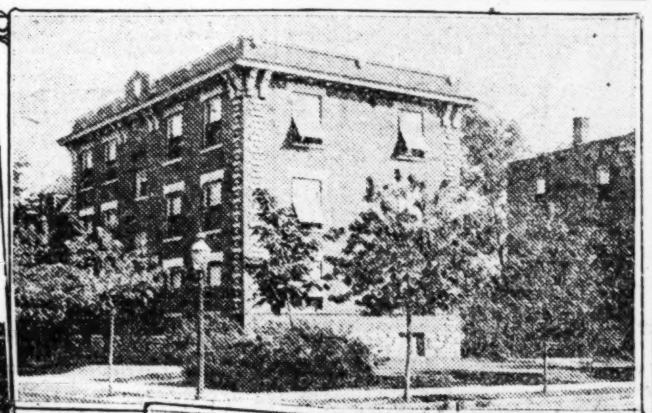
Impetus was given to the Hillcrest sale during the week when it became known that Chauncey P. Heath, one of the best-known and most aggressive real estate agents in the city, had purchased a lot on Arundel place between Skinker road and DeMun avenue, as a site for a handsome home, which will be constructed in the near future, it is understood.

Hillcrest extends west from Skinker road and Forest Park, and comprise a plateau from which a fine prospect of the city and suburbs may be had.

This tract was laid out by Schollmeyer in connection with the Title Guaranty Trust Co., which acted as fiscal agent in this instance several years ago, since which time the addition has been transformed by the erection of beautiful homes.

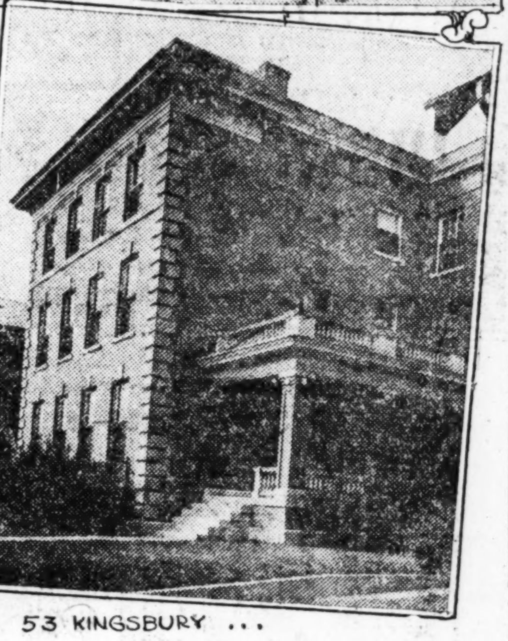
Novel Apartment Nearing Completion and Properties Recently Sold

CHASE ULMAN'S BANSCOME APARTMENT HOTEL ...



APARTMENT AT 5092 WELLS AVE.

6105-7 WATERMAN AVE.



53 KINGSBURY ...

CONSTRUCTION of the eight-story fireproof Branscome Hotel kitchen apartment building on the south side of Pershing avenue, will be completed Oct. 1.

According to Chase Ulman, its owner, the structure will vie with the handsomest of its type west of New York.

It will comprise 100 rooms of one and two room efficiency, and 100 rooms and bath as a hotel portion.

Most of the furniture and electric fixtures have been especially designed. The building is being constructed under the supervision of Preston J. Bradshaw, who drew the plans for it, in collaboration with Ulman.

Great care has been exercised in giving all the rooms, including baths and kitchenettes, windows to the exterior, although these rooms will also be ventilated by a tremendous exhaust system situated in the roof, with metal conduits running to each apartment. This assures a rapid exchange of air continuously through the building.

Both the hotel and the kitchenette sections will be equipped with concealed beds, which will practically double the efficiency of this building.

All apartments and rooms will be equipped with telephones. The building will be furnished after designs submitted by one of the largest Eastern decorating concerns, assuring the St. Louis public of something entirely different in refinement and elegance in furnishing.

The lower floor is to be given over to spacious lobbies, dining room and various other smaller entertainment and meeting rooms. A smoking room will be provided, giving the men tenants an opportunity to enjoy the same fraternal spirit as will be found in the best clubs.

The cost of the structure is estimated at $800,000. It will be under the management of Ed L. Bakewell.

Sales of apartments and homes continue to be the salient feature of the realty movement, which embrace all types of buildings of this character.

Albert T. Terry & Co. have effected the sale of 53 Kingsbury place for Mrs. Mary Walker to Erastus Wells. The house is colonial in design, with side entrance and large living room across the front. It has 11 rooms and is equipped with a hot-water heating plant. The lot is 50x175 feet.

J. I. Epstein announces the sale of a six-family apartment building at 5092 Wells avenue. It is the second of the two apartments on that corner which have been sold by him during the last 30 days. Each apartment has four rooms. The building is surrounded by spacious lawns. All the apartments are under lease at the yearly rental of $2970.

The purchaser was a client of Epstein, whose name has not been disclosed. The seller was Mrs. Marie M. Kress.

John S. Blake & Bro. Realty Co. reports the sale of a two-family apartment building at 6105-07 Waterman avenue to Samuel Pollock. The building occupies a lot 40x135 feet. It has a large brick and tile front porch and comprises five and six room apartments, each with reception hall. The seller was Lewis T. Waller.

C. OF C. ANNOUNCES LEASING OF NEW HOME

The home of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce after Jan. 1, will be in the eight-story building at Broadway and Locust street, formerly the Mermod and Jaccard Building, but to be known as the Chamber of Commerce Building. This announcement was made yesterday afternoon by President Jackson Johnson, following the signing of the 15-year lease for the sixth, seventh and eighth floors. The structure is in process of extensive remodeling. It is understood that the First National Bank will occupy the space vacated by the chamber. The removal of the Chamber of Commerce was forecast by the Post-Dispatch last Sunday.

It was stated that $30,000 will be spent on remodeling the three floors. The roof of the building will be raised so as to provide a spacious convention hall on the eighth floor, with a seating capacity of 800, with three small rooms for committee uses.

Lucas Avenue Space Leased.

The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. reports having leased the first floor of the six-story building at 717-19 Lucas avenue, for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., to the Industrial Supply and Equipment Co., now at Fourth street and Lucas avenue. The Chauncey Heath Real Estate Co. represented the lessee.

B. & L. Association Matures Series.

The Mound City Building and Loan Association, of which E. A. Kamp is secretary, has matured its twenty-seventh series, reaching a value of $240.38. This association has had a flourishing business since 1883, and in its new series has sold $23,380 of stock.

E. A. Wright to Address Club.

The Junior Advertising Club, at its meeting Tuesday at 6 p. m., at Hotel Statler, will hear E. A. Wright, advertising manager of the Bemis Bros. Bag Company, speak on "Direct Mail Advertising in Sales Promotion Work." J. V. Corrigan is president of the club.

GIBSON REALTY CO.

Country home of Mrs. Mary Blank, containing about 40 acres on the Telegraph rd., just south of Jefferson Barracks to Charles Smith.

1326 Temple place, single flat, for a client to Brian P. Burnes.

NEW BOND MANAGER FOR MERCANTILE TRUST

Sidney Maestre, a man of wide experience in financial circles, has been appointed manager of the bond department of the Mercantile Trust Co.

Mastre comes to St. Louis from Kansas City where, for seven years, he was vice president of Stern Bros., investment bankers, and his experience in the security field has been comprehensive and diversified. He began his career in financial circles with the Mercantile Trust Co. in 1912, shortly after his graduation from the State University. He remained with the Mercantile until 1917.

The bond department of the Mercantile Trust Co. is one of the largest of any bond or trust company in the United States.

TWO MORE KENWOOD SPRINGS HOMES SOLD BEFORE COMPLETED

The Bottorff Realty Co. reports having sold two more of the new type efficiency bungalows, designed by A. A. Fischer, architect, and unner construction in Kenwood Springs, the Herman C. G. Luytics subdivision. These bungalows are, as a rule, being sold before their completion on practically a rental basis.

The houses contain many of the California features, four rooms with six-room efficiency and five rooms with seven-room efficiency, combination china case and refrigerator, combination sun room and sleeping porch, combination couch and disapearing beds and some new and original built-in features designed to give real home comfort and yet keep the house moderate in size. The lots are each 50x150, with all improvements made.

Kenwood Springs is in easy reach of the new and great industrial district along the Belt line and Natural Bridge road between Union and Goodfellow avenues, and is the principal residence section for that district. The Bottorff company has recently sold 50 lots and 12 homes in this subdivision.

Do You Want to Sell Your 7 or 8 Rm. House

In Washington Heights, Ames Place, Hillcrest or University City?

It is a known fact that I have one of the largest rent-lists of residence property in St. Louis, and now these tenants are daily coming to me to purchase homes.

This, together with the 25 years' reputation that I have as a sales agent of first-class residences, has brought me more buyers than I have suitable houses to offer.

Isn't this of value to you?

BUY your "fall and winter suit" now! Big assortment on hand. We have "released" hundreds of fine suits that will "dress you up." There is no time in life that you get "down and out" that you can't get into the "Land of Beginning Again." "Start anew!" we "are Calling You" with our 5 large stores, 120 feet, filled with "bargains galore." If we don't get your "money for clothes here you don't spend your "dough" right. What you "save" when you spend your dough is your profit." "Install the Abrams' System" of clothes-buying and save. Dress up, look prosperous. Don't go around looking "down and out." For 10 years we have saved thousands of dollars for the clothes-buying public. Be "awake" to the "fact" your personal appearance "must count." We have "placed on sale" hundreds of suits, pants, coats and vests, which were [illegible] We have in "store" for you high-class suits [illegible] purchasing our uncalled-for garments from our cleaning department; garments are [illegible] from the best manufacturers. Can you wear 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 to 50 sizes? Also English and plain models, $7.50 to $15. Vests, 25c; pants, $2 to $3.95; coats, $3 to $6.50; special sale for Stetson hats, 35c. Open Sundays until 6 p. m. Abrams Cleaners and Dyers, 926 S. Vandeventer, near Chouteau. Mail orders filled. Both phones. Liberty Bonds accepted.

"WHERE your dollars will bring the limit for clothes." We are helping you to lower the "high cost of living." If ever there was a "time" when a man should make every "dollar" bring the "limit," that time is now. We sure will make your dollars bring the limit here. "What the Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop means to you." These fine garments are made by the manufacturers for display or modeling purposes for traveling salesmen; they are made much better than the regular goods; after they show them off they sell to us [illegible] we give you the benefit of our immense buying capacity; this policy enables us to save you $5.00 to $7.50. We're "lowering" the "high" cost of "living"; we're in a "class" by ourselves; we claim with our "5 big stores" and "our policy of close-to-the-shore profits" "out-of-the-high-rent-district," eliminating all unnecessary expense. "Oh Boy" our place to "Spend your dough." We have the goods here on hand at the old prices; buy now and "save yourself" 25 to 50 per cent. Never in the "history" of these "United States" will you "see prices" as "high" as this fall. Don't "tread the old beaten path," where you have spent your money for "friendship" and not for "clothes." We'll sell you clothes for the price, not friendship. Play the "new game." At our "close-to-the-shore profit" policy; if your "dough counts," all of you, "go shopping around" first and come here last, and we will certainly "get your dough." We are the only store in St. Louis showing "real" plain and silk-lined $30 and $35 blue, green, brown flannel waist-line suits at these prices: [illegible] $14.44, $16.66, $18.59, $19.45, $21.89 [illegible] We again announce our "Trade-in Sale" Department. We will make you a liberal allowance on your old clothes [illegible] "The place to buy clothes." 926 S. Vandeventer av., near Chouteau. Liberty Bonds accepted. Agents.

IN MEMORIAM

Louis Bauer, our brother, and son of Philip Bauer, who departed this life four years ago, Sept. 13, 1915. Sadly missed by father, sisters and brothers. (c)

In remembrance of my dear mother's birthday, Caroline Ahrenholz, born Sept. 14, 1835; died Jan. 8, 1916. Sadly missed by her only daughter, Mrs. Kate Schnell. (c)

In sad rememberance of my dear friend, James B. Smith, who departed this life two years ago. Two years of sadness has brought your sweet memory nearer to me.
LIZZIE.

In loving remembrance of our dear little friend, Lillian Wiley, who departed this life Aug. 23, 1919. She is sadly missed by her friends.
MR. AND MRS. P. RICE.

In loving memory of our dear sister, Mayme Ellen Wootten (nee Dirney), who departed this life Sept. 18, 1918. Sadly missed by her loving sisters, brother, husband and darling daughter. A high requiem mass, Holy Angels' Church, Sept. 18, at 8 a. m.

In memoriam of Rosa F. Dausch, who departed this life five years ago, Sept. 10, 1914.
Days of sadness still come o'er me;
Tears and silence often flow,
For memory keeps you ever near me
Though you died five years ago.
Sadly missed by her daughter,
MRS. ELLA CULLEN. (c)

In memory of our daughter and sister, Pauline Metelman, who departed this life Sept. 12, 1918.
A year has passed today
Since God took you from us away
To that bright land, that great celestial shore
Where pain and death can worry us no more.
There you are waiting patiently until we come
To join you in God's great eternal home.
THE BEREAVED FAMILY.

In loving memory of our dear son, Wesley Marvin Bryant, died one year ago.
You are not forgotten, Marvin dear,
Nor ever will you be;
As long as eyes and memory last
We'll all remember thee.
Sadly missed by parents and relatives.

In memory of my dear husband, Dr. George Cerny, who departed this life Sept. 13, 1918:
There are griefs that cannot find comfort
And wounds that cannot be healed.
There are sorrows so deep in the human heart
They cannot be half revealed.
Sadly missed by ——— WIFE. (c)

In loving memory of Carolina Keil, who departed this life one year ago, Sept. 11, 1918.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, DAUGHTER, SONS, DAUGHTERS-IN-LAW, SON-IN-LAW AND GRANDCHILDREN.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

LACLEDE.—Copies of July 3 and 15, 1918, are available, but, of course, "complete stories" of the battles of Chateau Thierry were not printed at that time, only current topics. Call at St. Louis Post-Dispatch Circulation Department and ask for Mr. Braun.

B. A. D.—See Judge of Police Court in reference to matter of your landlord's stealings. If notice to vacate was in writing, delivered to you prior to rent day, requesting possession by the next (subsequent) rent day, you will be required to move.

B. M. FERTUNA—1. Any contagious or infectious disease develops by exposure of another person having the disease. 2. Most of them are and most can be cured. 3. It would need a volume to give modes of treatment of all the contagious and infectious.

VIOLET—1. Most of them can be, the exception being perhaps cancer and tuberculosis. 2. Do not know what you mean by glandular rheumatism. If you have ulcers in throat, enlarged glands and rheumatic like pains syphilis would be strongly suggested.

M. L.—If the discharge is pus (or "matter") you have an abscess condition or perhaps an ulceration in or near the nipple. Cancer of breast is first evidenced by a lump or swelling, hard, at first movable, later fixed. You see a physician and have an examination made.

CHANCE TO MARRY.—Better postpone your chance to marry until you secure a divorce; being lawfully wedded, living with your husband only one week, would not entitle you to marry again, without a legal separation; to do so without obtaining a divorce trouble would follow; besides, such marriage would not be binding.

MARY A.—If the rent is not paid when due, the landlord may bring action at once; by not paying such when due the tenant waives the right the law affords him of one month's written notice to vacate if that is what you mean. Landlord cannot increase a tenant's rent unless the tenant is willing to stand for it; there isn't anything to prevent the landlord from giving tenant the usual lawful notice to vacate, and tenant may not ignore the same, because he has laid in the winter's supply of coal.

JAKE.—Here is a recipe for old-fashioned elderberry wine: Three gallons of berries, nine gallons of water and other ingerdients as follows: Put the water and the berries into a boiler with 2 ounces of ginger, an ounce of allspice and half an ounce of cloves. All the spices should be bruised and tied in muslin loosely. Simmer for an hour, then strain and add four pounds of sugar to the gallon. Mix in a tub and let the liquor be boiling, and in straining press the berries well to extract all the goodness. Add three and a quarter ounces of cream of tartar and leave in teh tub for two days then pour into a cask and cover the bunghole with a tile. Stir daily and fill up as the liquor wastes. When quite "still" close the barrel and leave for four months before bottling the wine. It improves by keeping.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of my dear husband, Sergt. Bernard S. Reuter, Company E, 354th Infantry, Eighty-ninth Division, who was killed in action Sept. 10, 1918, in the St. Mihiel battle, where he bravely gave his life for his country.
Days of sadness oft come o'er me;
Teaers in silence often flow;
Love shall always keep you near me,
Though you left one year ago.
Never shall you be forgotten,
Never from my memory fade.
My memories will always linger
In No Man's Land, where you are laid.
Sadly missed by
YOUR LOVING WIFE, MRS. B. S. REUTER,
2825 Minnesota av.

In memory of my dear daughter, Lizzie Mull, who died Sept. 6, 1918.
In agony she suffered,
With patience she bore
Till God called her home
To suffer no more.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister, Marguerite Indermark, who died Sept. 12, 1913.
You are not forgotten Marguerite, dear;
No, nor ever will you be.
As long as eyes and memories last
We'll all remember thee.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER, BROTHER AND ALL WHO LOVED HER.

In loving remembrance of my dear daughter, Alice Canda, who died Sept. 10, 1918.
One year ago she passed away;
We grieved when she departed;
Time was too short ta say farewell,
To those she knew and loved so well.

We miss her coming footsteps;
We miss her everywhere.
Home is not what it used to be,
Since Alice is not there.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, SISTERS AND BROTHERS,
MRS. ELIZABETH CANDA.

In loving memory of my dear husband and father, Gustave C. Stolle, who died Sept. 11, 1918.
One year ago there came into our home
A silent messenger, on this day,
And claimed a precious jewel as his own.
He gave us warning that the end was near
And sought to check our grief, our tears.
Death had no terror and he knew no fear;
The light of heaven shone in his lovely eyes.
We strove to feel "God doeth all things well."
To bow submission to His wondrous power;
But, oh, how hard, no tongue can ever tell,
The anguish of that last sad parting hour.

A year has passed and now the grass is green
Where he lies buried underneath the sod.
We miss him always, but a form unseen
Whispers, "Be comforted: he is with his God."

Sleep sweetly, dear, in your lovly bed.
No sound disturbs your dreamless, calm repose;
In Calvary's lovely city of the dead
Our loved one rests, beyond all care and woes.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND DAUGHTER.

Sales
Executives

From the higher type of salesman—the business-getter with a successful record—who feels that his present connection limits his opportunity for development and future growth, we desire replies to this ad.

We are not interested in real estate, stock or specialty salesmen, but only in the man who can refer us to several years of road-selling success, calling on the jobber and retailer.

Applicants must be more than mediocre salesmen; must be in their thirties and have good health and business poise; possess a strong personality indicative of ability and enthusiasm and be willing to accept assignments in any part of the United States east of the Rocky Mountains.

If you measure up to our requirements you have an opportunity to make a permanent connection with one of the largest and best-known manufacturers in the country. Your future is limited only by your own shortcomings and inability to grasp opportunities.

For obvious reasons this "ad" must be run "blind." We will hold your replies in confidence, and, for those who sell themselves in their letter, we will arrange a personal interview.

Box J-196, Post-Dispatch.

War Women and Work

Women's place in the world's work and progress was definitely established during the war. There, women showed their caliber—their determination—their initiative. There, they sewed the seeds that have bloomed into a world-wide recognition of the dignity of our women workers.

Business Women Are Now the Rule Rather Than the Exception

There are opportunities abounding throughout the land. We are glad to say that long ago we recognized the value of women business associates. Today, our roster includes scores of women who have progressed as the store progressed.

Splendid Opportunities for Advancement

Are offered women and young girls WITH or WITHOUT selling experience. Competent instructors are here to teach you the business. Appreciative managers are ever ready to give credit where credit is due. Advancement is certain for those who show ability and energy—the many who have risen from cash girls to buyers prove this. Tomorrow, come down and interview our Supt., talk over the situation and learn from him why we think the opportunities offered by an institution of this kind are unexcelled.

INTELLIGENT INVESTORS

The "Leasing Bill," now in Congress, will open for development the enormous wealth locked in the public lands of the West, particularly Wyoming, which is just beginning to develope—like Oklahoma 15 years ago. Government statistics are interesting and convincing as to the great opportunities there for properly directed capital. We have a responsible and competent business organization now established in Wyoming to furnish abstracts of title, reports on properties and the placing of your surplus capital where it will return you the greatest profit. Can your mind analyze facts as established by the best experts? Do you want to make profits? Call or write.

A GROUND FLOOR OPPORTUNITY

Such as I offer, seldom presents itself. I own a lease on 215 acres in Wilson County, Kan., surrounded by production. I want 30 people to subscribe $100 or more to raise $3000, enough to drill a well on this tract. I will contract in advance with subscribers to deliver lease with well drilled and producing at a stipulated price. If the well is a big producer you get big returns. If after well is drilled in and producing you are not satisfied to buy property at price stipulated, I would be the loser, as a dry hole or very small well would condemn my acreage. If production is satisfactory, you form your own company, get your oil runs direct, elect your own directors and develop the property. A minimum risk with unlimited possibilities. LET ME TELL YOU WHY I MUST MAKE THIS OFFER. Box F-209, Post-Dispatch.

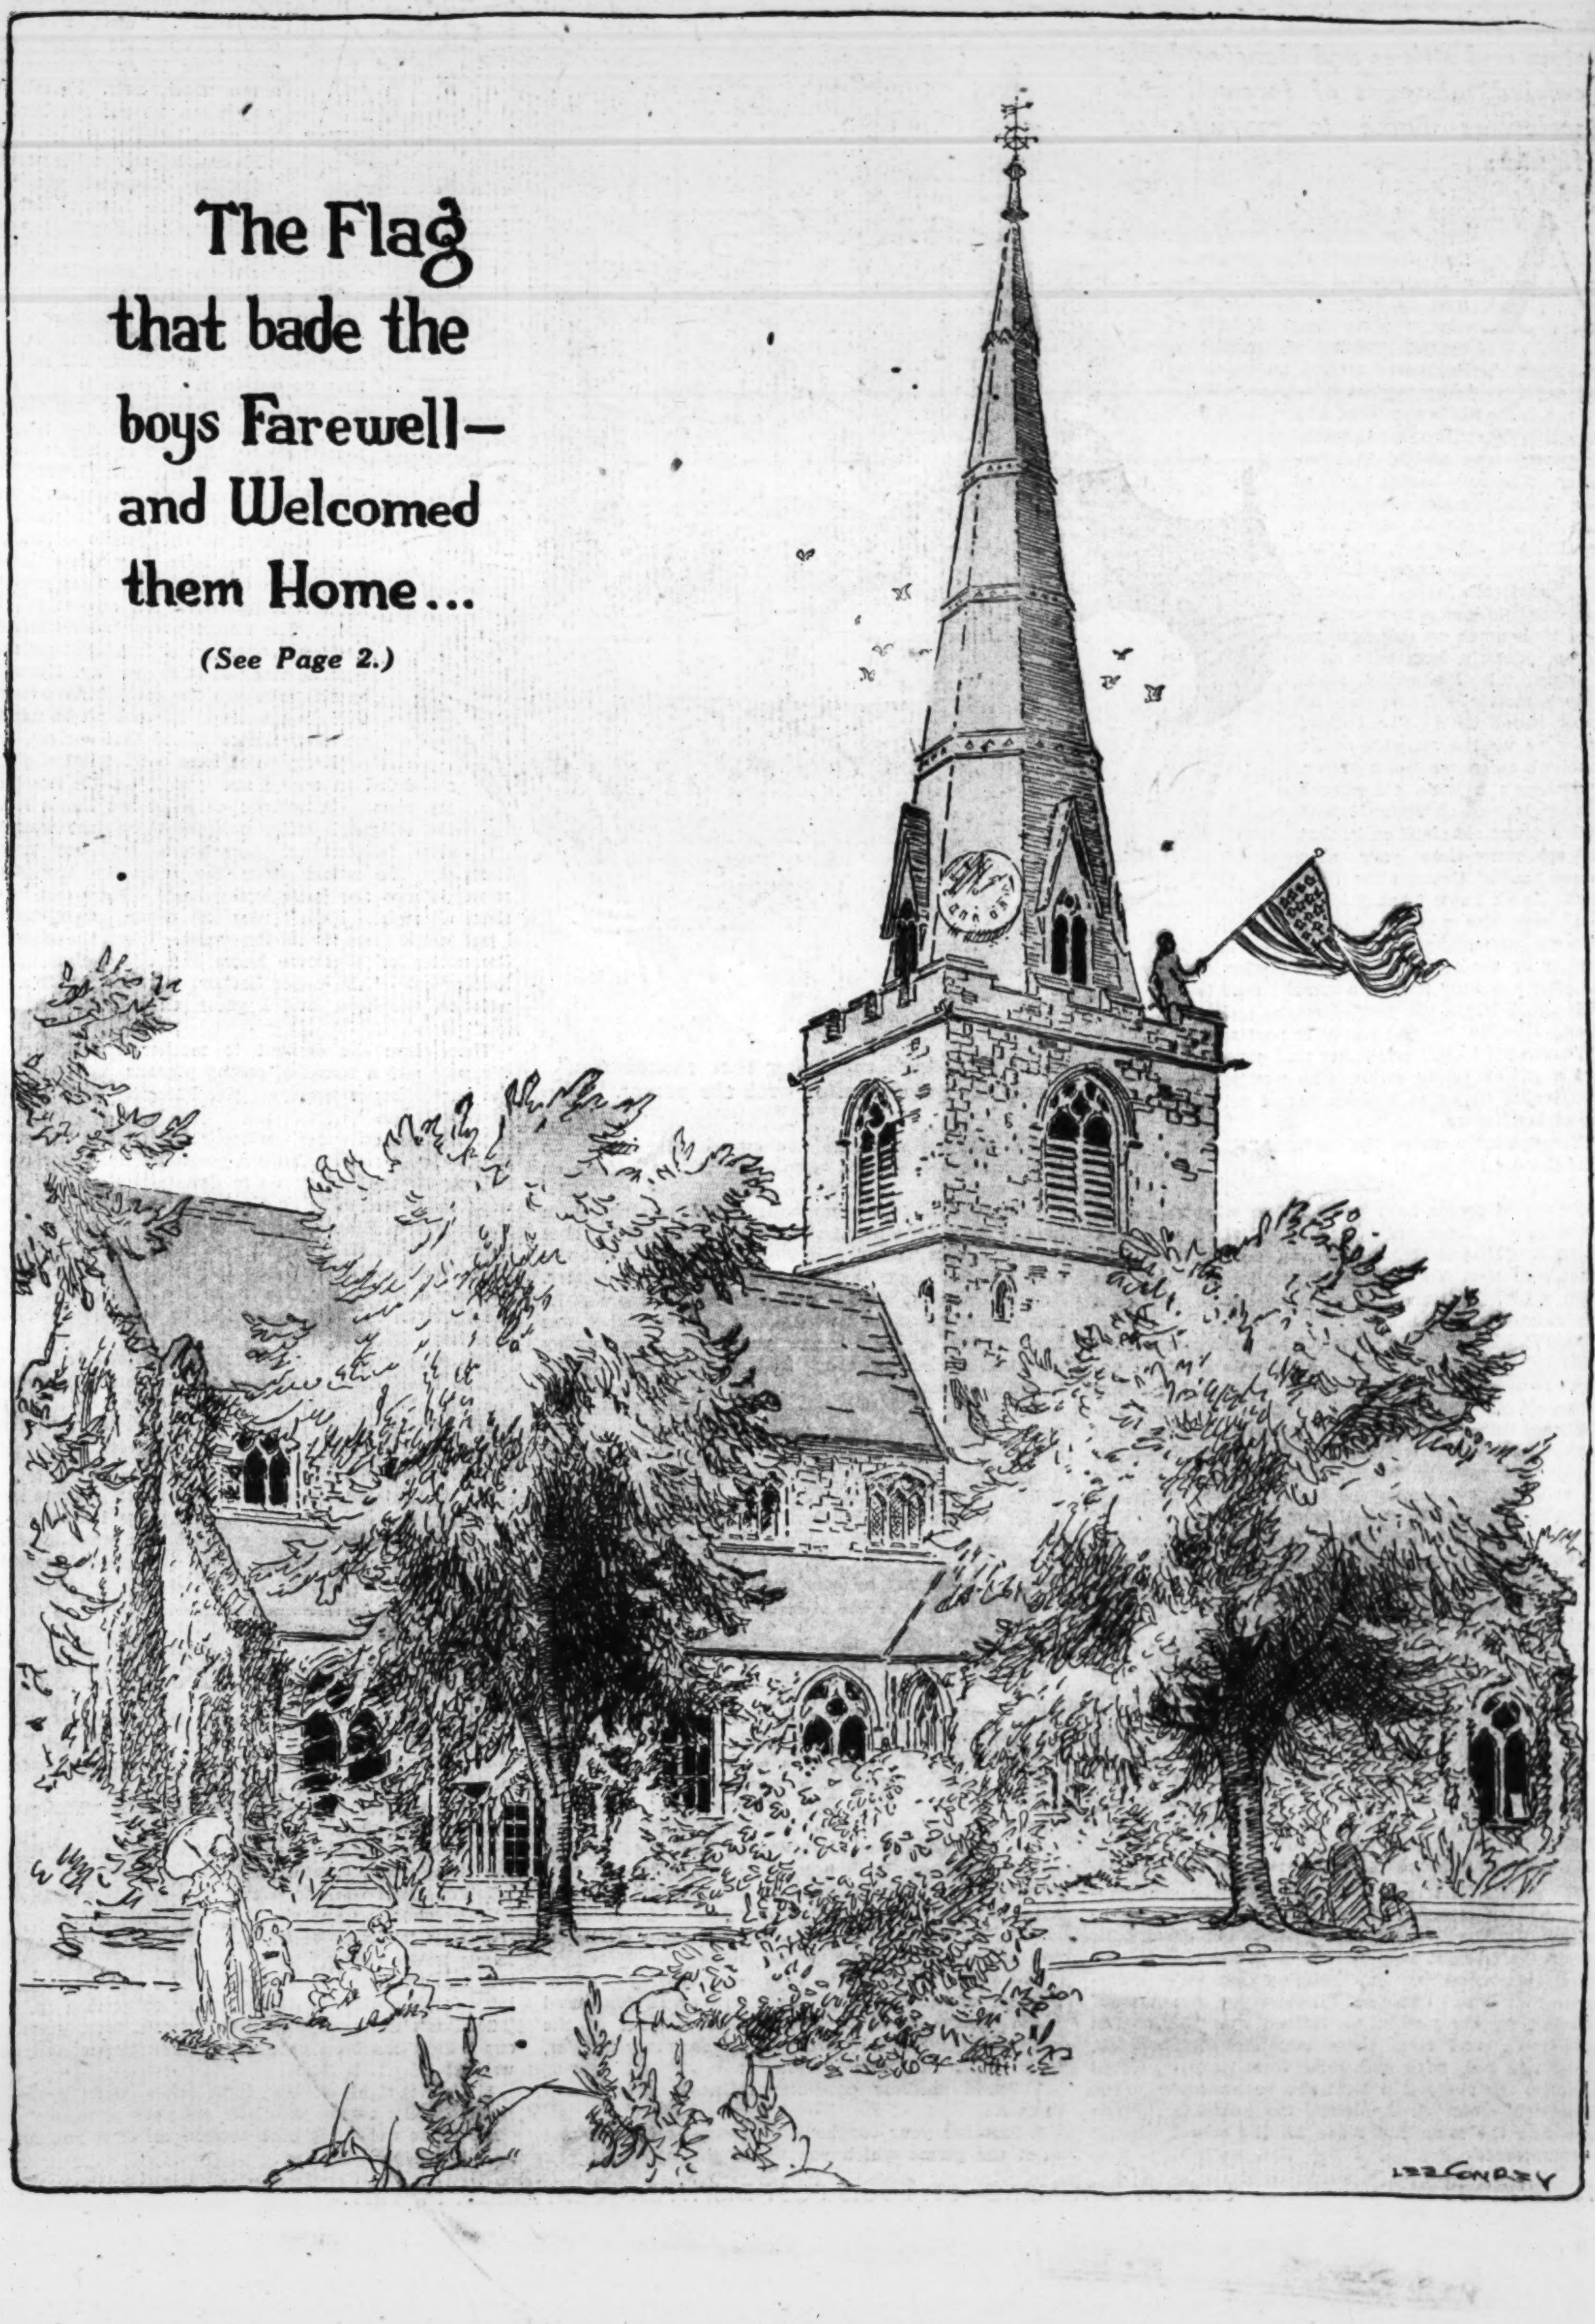
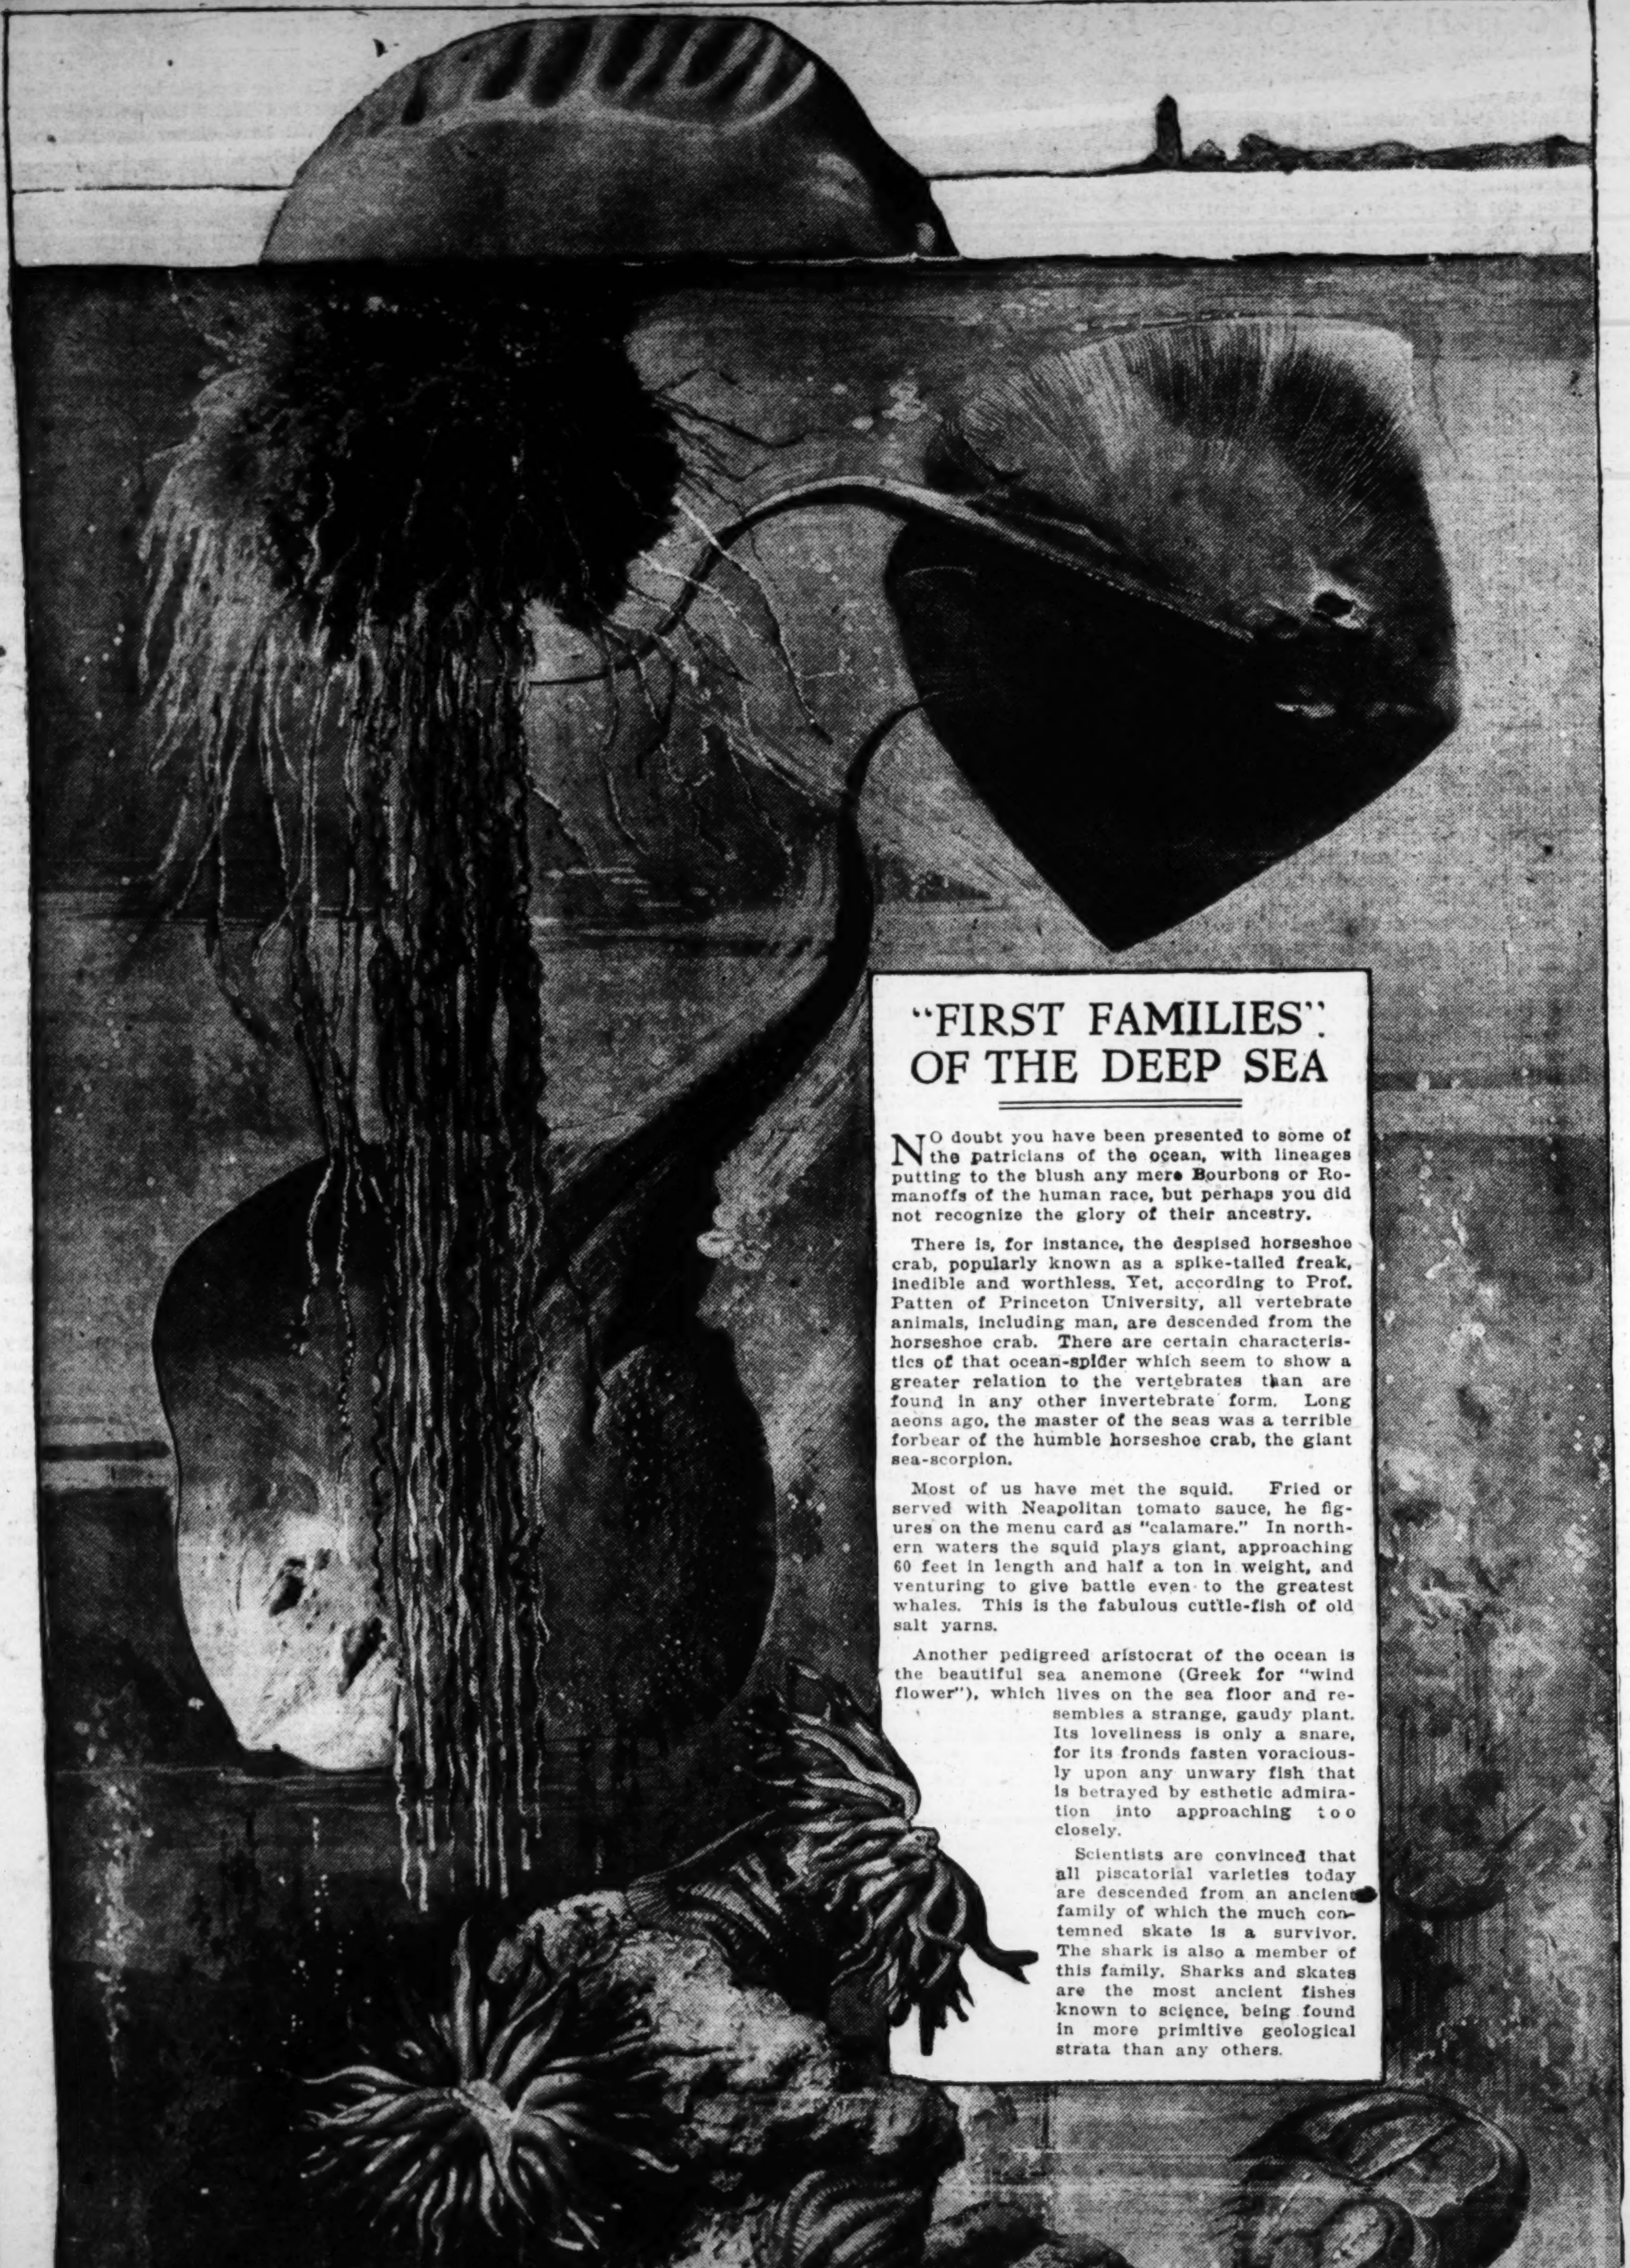
The Flag that bade the boys Farewell—and Welcomed them Home...

(See Page 2.)





"FIRST FAMILIES" OF THE DEEP SEA

NO doubt you have been presented to some of the patricians of the ocean, with lineages putting to the blush any mere Bourbons or Romanoffs of the human race, but perhaps you did not recognize the glory of their ancestry.

There is, for instance, the despised horseshoe crab, popularly known as a spike-tailed freak, inedible and worthless. Yet, according to Prof. Patten of Princeton University, all vertebrate animals, including man, are descended from the horseshoe crab. There are certain characteristics of that ocean-spider which seem to show a greater relation to the vertebrates than are found in any other invertebrate form. Long aeons ago, the master of the seas was a terrible forbear of the humble horseshoe crab, the giant sea-scorpion.

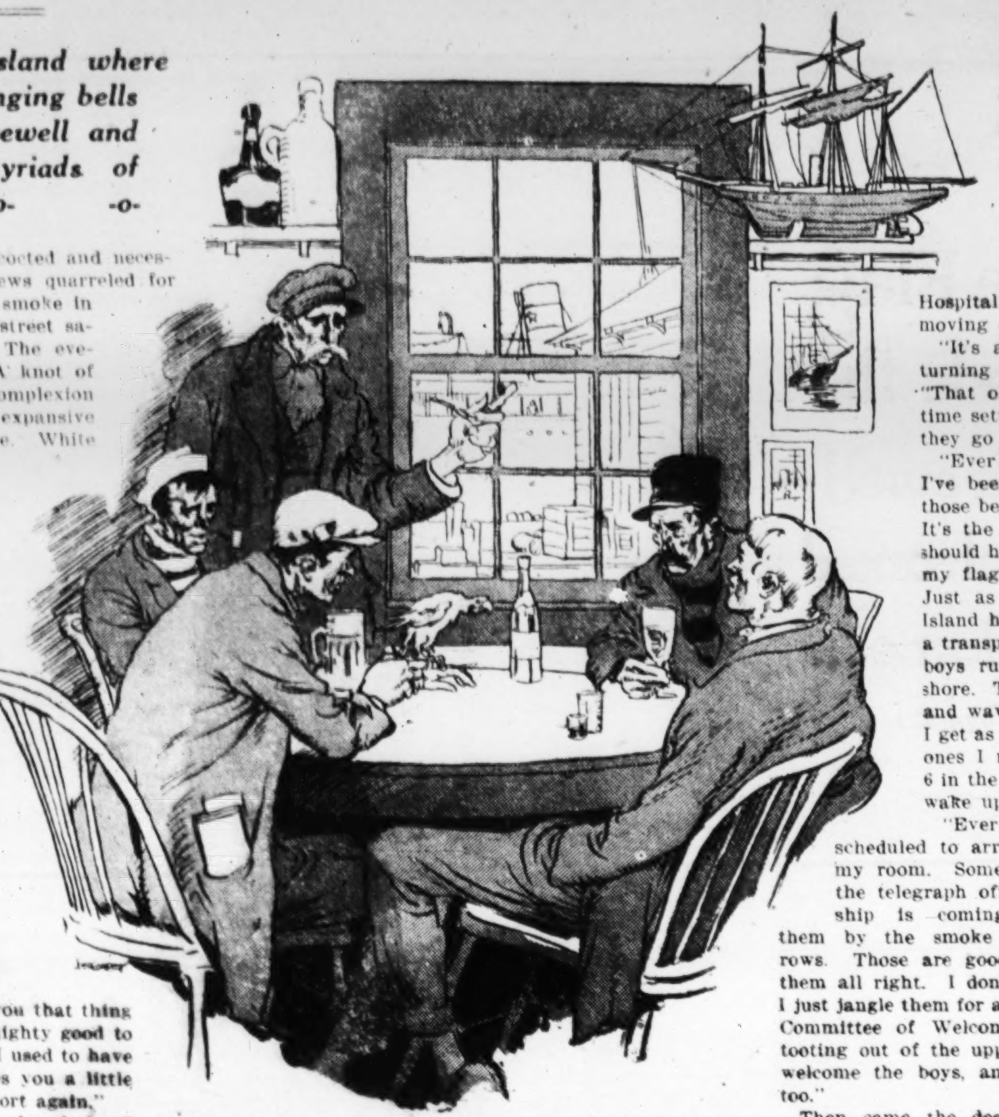
Most of us have met the squid. Fried or served with Neapolitan tomato sauce, he figures on the menu card as "calamare." In northern waters the squid plays giant, approaching 60 feet in length and half a ton in weight, and venturing to give battle even to the greatest whales. This is the fabulous cuttle-fish of old salt yarns.

Another pedigreed aristocrat of the ocean is the beautiful sea anemone (Greek for "wind flower"), which lives on the sea floor and resembles a strange, gaudy plant. Its loveliness is only a snare, for its fronds fasten voraciously upon any unwary fish that is betrayed by esthetic admiration into approaching too closely.

Scientists are convinced that all piscatorial varieties today are descended from an ancient family of which the much contemned skate is a survivor. The shark is also a member of this family. Sharks and skates are the most ancient fishes known to science, being found in more primitive geological strata than any others.

The Flag That Bade the Boys Good-Bye - And Welcomed Them Home Again -

Church spire on Staten Island where stars and stripes and clanging bells carried messages of farewell and welcomes home to myriads of fighters -o- -o- -o-



"D——d if I don't remember that church too," said the gawky sailor with the parrot.

AN AROMA of curiosity concocted and necessarily nonalcoholic brews quarreled for first place with cigar smoke in a murky little South street saloon in New York. The evening was ripening. A knot of seamen, motley of complexion and dress, had gathered around an expansive old captain of the merchant marine. White hair, a little white mustache and skin like heavy brown-red leather placed him among the veterans. His ship having docked late that afternoon, conversation had been blue with abuse of a recalcitrant cabin boy, who had made the voyage merry with violent practical jokes. Suddenly his thoughts took a new path.

"I ain't much on this here religion. Been a long time since I went tuh We'nesday night prayer meetin'. Guess you all know about that! I've twisted my eyes up the steeples of St. Patrick's an' never met a quiver. But there's a little old church out at the end of Staten Island with a funny old clock on it, that you see every time your ship comes headin' through the Narrows. Don't know what it looks like, 'cept the steeple. That's thin an' plain an' gray; but I tell you that thing stickin' up out of the trees looks mighty good to me after a stormy trip, or a tussel I used to have with the U-boats. It sort of makes you a little solemn like, an' be glad you're in port again."

"Damned if I don't remember that church, too," said a gawky young sailor, who was poking an affectionate finger at a green parrot perched on one of his fingers.

"You know," went on the captain, "I'd like to know what the darn thing is!"

Millions of people have wondered to what that spire was attached, have speculated as to what sort of a church it is that strikes the eye and imagination as one comes into New York harbor from the sea; that has called a little sentiment to so many hearts, sick of a gray montony of ocean.

Since it was built nearly 29,000,000 immigrants have sailed by, and as they stopped at Quarantine have noticed the graceful gray-brown spire, somewhat like that of the old English church at Stratford-on-Avon. Unnumbered tourists have eyed it curiously, and crews of battleships watched it fade, as they cut out to sea for a prolonged voyage. Probably no church in America has been seen by so many people, or marked with such a peculiar and universal sentiment.

St. Louis boys on the way to France remembered it. Incoming troops cheered enthusiastically as it clanged a first welcome of bells, and a flag waved from the base of its steeple. They have appreciated the welcome, and passed on to visit greater churches, or no churches at all; but there are few who made the pilgrimage to Staten Island to discover that it is a small brown-stone Episcopal church on the hill above the quarantine station—St. John's Church, Clifton, S. I.

The church itself is covered with vines and surrounded by elm trees. The parish house is down the hill to the back, and it was here that sounds of violent hammering led to Frank Phleging, the sexton. He was putting screens in the windows.

"Want to be married?" he asked.

He was set right as to the purpose of the call.

"We aren't dead ones over here yet!" he said, laying down his hammer. "This is where the War Camp Community Service had a club. Here's our dance hall; there's the library, and we had a canteen under the stairs. It's more than just religion that we're carrying on over here. Come on, I'll show you the church!"

Beckoning his visitor he tiptoed into the hushed choir room, and from there into the church itself, brown and red, with soft light from quietly colored windows. He stopped in front of a bronze tablet to the memory of John A. Appleton, the publisher. "You know he's the man that made all the school books," he volunteered.

"I'll tell you about the old days of the church on the way up the steeple. Look out, now; it's dark on these stairs!"

"The first St. John's was built across the street from here in 1843. The population of Staten Island in those days was pretty small, and this section here was occupied for the most part by large landed proprietors. You can imagine that it was a good deal more difficult to get into New York than it is now, and it was hard to find a place to say your prayer on Sunday morning, so they put their heads together and decided to build a church.

"Cornelius Vanderbilt was the first baby to be baptized after the building was finished, and the first bride was Mrs. Torrence, Mrs. Vanderbilt's daughter. There were other good old names in the early parish. William H. Aspinwall, the ship owner, was first junior warden, and William B. Townsend, proprietor and editor of the New York Daily Advertiser, was vestryman.

"It's a long way up here, isn't it?" he asked, as he led the way up a ladder that stretched interminably toward the belfry. "Well, I've been coming up here every day, sometimes 10 or 12 times, for seven months now. I'll tell you why when we get out here in the open."

He crawled out on the narrow ledge that surrounds the base of the steeple. Back of him, on a hill, was the Fox Hill Army Hospital. In front was a line of ships moving slowly up and down the bay.

"It's a good spire," said Phleging, turning around and squinting up at it. "That old clock there has served as a time setter for a good many old salts as they go out to sea.

"Ever since the armistice was signed, I've been coming up here and ringing those bells for the boys as they come in. It's the first welcome they have. You should hear them cheer, too, when I take my flag and run out here to wave it. Just as soon as the people of Staten Island hear my bells, they know there's a transport coming in. You can see the boys running down the streets to the shore. The women put up their windows and wave aprons and flags. Sometimes I get as many as 12 in one day. The only ones I miss are the early birds around 6 in the morning. It wouldn't be fair to wake up Staten Island that early.

"Every week I cut out the list of ships scheduled to arrive and put it on the wall in my room. Sometimes they let me know from the telegraph office at Quarantine just when a ship is coming. Sometimes my boy spots them by the smoke over the trees by the Narrows. Those are good husky bells. They can hear them all right. I don't ring any hymn tunes, either. I just jangle them for all I'm worth. When the Mayor's Committee of Welcome hears the noise, they come tooting out of the upper harbor; but I'm the first to welcome the boys, and I guess they remember it, too."

Then came the descent to mother earth through darkness and a sound of cooing pigeons, then back to the parish house screens. Mr. Phleging took up the hammer again.

"Did you notice our service flag? It has 138 stars on it. You wouldn't think it possible from a parish of 800, would you? Yes, we've done about all the war work there was to be done. Dr. Dodd, our rector, was a chaplain in France, and three of our girls were over there in the Y. M. C. A. Five of those service stars are gold. We just bought a new flag pole, and we're going to have a big celebration when the flag goes up for the first time. Maybe you'd like to come over for the speeches; I'll let you know.

"On Sundays you might think the inside of the church was a little bare; but I tell you our parishioners come to church when they can find the time. Every spare minute these people have they put into Red Cross work. There's where our congregation is, up there in the Fox Hill Hospital!"

So Mr. Phleging was left pounding in screens and watching the sky over the trees by the Narrows for smoke, so that he could ring his chimes, wave his flag and receive an answering cheer from the incoming troops.

What to Do if Influenza Returns

WILL there be another visitation of influenza? writes Col. George A. Soper of the Sanitary Corps, U. S. A., in Science. Nobody can positively answer this question. Influenza commonly sweeps in more than one wave over a country. America experienced an unmistakable, but mild, wave before the great one of September and October, and since then there have been local disturbances corresponding to fresh outbreaks in many places. In England a new and alarming prevalence has been reported. It would not be surprising if there should be another epidemic in the United States.

The writer's idea of the most essential things to remember are embodied in the following 12 condensed rules, recommended by the Surgeon-General of the army and published by order of the Secretary of War, to be given all possible publicity:

1. Avoid needless crowding—influenza is a crowd disease.
2. Smother your coughs and sneezes—others do not want the germs which you would throw away.
3. Your nose, not your mouth, was made to breathe through—get the habit.
4. Remember the three C's—a clean mouth, clean skin and clean clothes.
5. Try to keep cool when you walk and warm when you ride and sleep.
6. Open the windows—always at home at night; at the office when practicable.
7. Food will win the war if you give it a chance—help by choosing and chewing your food well.
8. Your fate may be in your own hands—wash your hands before eating.
9. Don't let the waste products of digestion accumulate—drink a glass or two of water on getting up.
10. Don't use a napkin, towel, spoon, fork, glass or cup which has been used by another person and not washed.
11. Avoid tight clothes, tight shoes, tight gloves—seek to make nature your ally not your prisoner.
12. When the air is pure breathe all of it you can—breathe deeply.

Penny of Top Hill Trail

"You can go in the kitchen way. It's cook's affinity night, and she's somewhere with Gus."

"The kitchen is where I go in, then. Jo, are you very sure that you are in love—enough to marry a thief? You're only a boy. Better keep your love until you are older."

"I am not a boy. I am two and twenty."

"Quite an old man! I'll see you very soon again, and maybe I can give you—your answer. Kurt goes to town early in the morning. Meet me in the pergola near the garage. Good-night!"

By way of the kitchen and back stairs she reached her room undetected.

"Dear, old Jo! Poor Kurt!" she thought, sleepily, as she stretched herself luxuriously to rest. "It's a very small, very funny old world, and the thief is certainly getting in deep waters."

On the trail to Westcott's, Jo was chuckling to himself.

"The little thief! If she isn't the slickest little lass I ever saw!"

In the library, oblivious to time and place, Kurt still lingered, his dream-like memories trying to learn the tune that Pan was piping on his reeds.

CHAPTER VIII.

"From Jo," informed Betty—"The Bulletin," as her father was wont to call her. "He came just after Uncle Kurt started for town."

Pen smiled as she took up the little stiff nosegay. She held it lightly for a moment, looking down at the blosoms. There was a mute appeal in the little messengers from the boyish lover. Something infinitely tender stirred in her heart for a second, bringing a tear to her eye, as she mused upon his boyish faith in love.

She put the flowers in the glass of water beside her plate, and gave her attention to the prattle of the children.

After breakfast she pinned the little nosegay to her middy and went down to the pergola.

Jo saw her coming and hurried forward to meet her, his eyes brightening when he saw the flowers.

"Thank you, Jo. They are very pretty."

"Thank you for wearing them."

"I asked you to come here this morning, Jo, so you would do me a favor."

"You know I would."

"Will you mail this letter for me? I wrote it last night after you left, and you are the only one I can trust. And—Jo—will you please not read the address?"

He put the letter in his pocket.

"You can trust me."

"You had better go, because I hear the rattle that can be made only by Kurt's car. He must have come back for something. You can go around the bend here."

"Say, Penny Ante, I don't like this deceiving him"—

"Just a bit longer, Jo," she said, persuasively. "Mrs. Kingdon said to wait until her return."

He followed her instructions, and she returned to the house.

"It's a great possession," she thought, musingly, "the big love of a true and simple heart like his. It would probably be idyllic to live a life of love up here in these hills, with the man of one's choice, I suppose, but a happiness too tame for me. To be sure, there would be the excitement of trying to ruffle the love feathers, but that, too, in time would pall. I wonder how much longer I shall stay hidden up here before my past finds me out. Any minute something is sure to drop and I will be called back—back to my other life that is less enticing, now I have had a taste of domesticity.

"But," she reflected, "domesticity doesn't satisfy long. This semi-security is getting on my nerves. Hebby isn't so good a trailer as I feared he would be, or he'd have tracked me up here."

Her meditations were diverted by a tattoo upon her door, which she had locked so that the ever-present, ever-prying Betty and the all-wise Francis could not intrude.

"Aunt Penny, let us in!" came in aggrieved chorus.

"I've a message for you, Aunt Pen. Open the door," came Francis' insistent voice.

The pounding and the voices forced a capitulation. She admitted the trio.

"Mrs. Merlin is going to take us to her house for the rest of the day," informed Francis, "and we will have a picnic dinner there. She would have asked you, too, only Uncle Kurt came back and wants you to ride with him. He didn't have to go 'way to town, 'cause he met the man he wanted to see on the way here."

"Now what has come over the spirit of his dreams?" Pen asked herself, wonderingly, as she got into her riding things. "Well, there is always the refuge of fast riding. That is the only time I can make my tongue behave. I'll give him no chance to preach, that's sure!"

When they set out on their ride, she was careful not to let the brisk pace falter. They stopped for luncheon at a ranch house where there were many people at the table; but on the way home, when nearing the big bend, Kurt rode up to her; his detaining hand on the bridle slackened the speed she was striving to maintain.

"I want to say something to you," he began, stiffly. "You mustn't think because I say nothing that I am unmindful of what you have overcome. I"——

She stole a side glance at him. His eyes were as somber and impenetrable as ever, but his chin worked nervously.

"You mean that I deserve a credit mark for not having lifted the children's banks or helped myself to the family silver and jewels. It's sweet in you to put such trust in me and commend me for such heroic resistance!"

She jerked her bridle from his grasp and rode furiously on to the house and had dismounted and escaped to her room before he could overtake her.

CHAPTER IX.

PEN found the ranch house quite deserted the next morning. Kurt had gone to Wolf Creek to purchase cattle and would not return until night. A little scrawled note from Francis apprised her of the fact that Mrs. Merlin was taking himself, Billy and Betty to spend the day at her own home.

"A whole day alone for the first time in ages!" she thought, exultingly. "It is surely Pen Lamont's day. What shall I do to celebrate? Stop the clock and play with the matches? I must do something stupendous, I know. I will go into town and shop. I will go in style, too."

She took Kingdon's racing car out of the garage, and was soon speeding down the hills with the little thrill of ecstasy that comes from leaving a beaten track.

In town she left the car in front of the hotel and went down the main street, looking in dismay at the windows loaded with assorted and heterogeneous lots of feminine apparel. At last she came to a little shop with but three garments on display, all of them quite smart in style.

"You must be a 'lost, strayed or stolen,'" she apostrophized in delight.

She went within and purchased two gowns with all the many and necessary accessories thereto.

"Lucky Kind Kurt and Bender didn't search me that day," she thought. "I never saw a Sheriff or a near-Sheriff so slack. If they'd been in my business they'd have known that you can't always tell what's in the pocket of a ragged frock."

She visited in turn a shoe store, a soda water fountain and a beauty shop. Then it was the town time for dining, and she returned to the hotel.

"I shouldn't have exhausted the resources of the town so soon," she thought, ruefully, as she stood in the office after registering. "I don't know what I will do this afternoon, unless I sit in a red plush chair in the ladies' parlor and gaze out through the meshes of a coarse lace curtain at the passersby. I might call on Bender and see if he'd remember me. Bet his wife would. Maybe something interesting will come along, though."

Something did. It came in the shape of a lean, brown-faced young man.

"Larry, Larry!" she cried. "It's a home-coming to see you. I hadn't any idea what part of the world you were in. What are you doing here?"

"The Thief!" he exclaimed, his dark eyes beaming with pleasure.

"Not so loud. I am Pen Lamont, at present. Incog, you see, under my real name, the least known of any. So don't squeal on me."

"I never gave anyone away yet, Pen, dear. What are you doing in this neck o' the woods?"

"I am in hiding in the hills—at a ranch—quite domesticated. My first glimpse of a home. Like it better than I supposed I could."

"You'd better watch out. Hebler is up in these parts somewhere, I hear. He'll get you yet, Pen!"

"Hebler! You make my heart stop beating. I hit this trail more to escape him than anything else. What is he here for?"

"For you, I fancy. I ran across Wilks the other day and he said he heard Hebler say, 'He'd get that thief if he never did another thing.' So lay low. Are you here alone in town today?"

"Alone and untethered, for the first time in ages. Same with you?"

"You're right as to the alone part; but I'm not altogether free. I have to give an exhibition fool flight this afternoon in my little old flier. We'll have dinner together, and the rest of the day. Will you?"

"Will I? Try me."

"What's the idea, Pen?" he asked as they went into the long dining room and chose a remote table.

"I don't know, Larry. I had one, but I seem to have lost it in trying to pick up others. I'm floundering."

"You've always been in wrong, Pen. Wish you'd find your level. You made me ashamed of my old life. I am string-straight now, thanky."

"I am glad, Larry. You never were crooked, you know—just a bit reckless. Tell me about yourself."

"You gave me a good steer when you suggested this sky stuff. I don't believe a flying man could be very bad—up there in the clouds, in a world all his own. Whenever I felt as if I must break over the traces and go off for a time, I'd just get into my little old flier and hit the high spots and that would give me more thrills than all the thirst parlors ever brought. I am going soon to fly for France. In fact, I'm 'on my way' now."

"Larry! I am proud of you! But it tugs at my heartstrings to have you go, and in an airplane!"

"Did you ever go up, Pen?"

"No; it's about the only exciting thing I haven't done, and it's the only stunt I ever lacked the nerve to tackle."

"Terrors of the unknown? I'm booked for some of that fancy flying this afternoon, and you can watch me from the field."

"I knew this was to be a real day, but I never hoped for such a big handful of luck as seeing you again, and in such a good act."

"Always invest heavily in hope, Pen. It is free to all, and you come out ahead, because you get your dividends in anticipating anyway, and you know anticipation"——

"Hold on, Larry, don't be a bromide!"

"Everyone is a bromide now. Sulphides are all in the asylums. I am hoping for a chance to win the Medal Militaire—I mean for the chance to do something worth getting one."

Pen's pleasure in her surreptitious expedition, the delight in shopping and the excitement of meeting someone from her former life had brought a most vivid beauty to her delicate face, and Larry looked at her with an approval that brought forth a sudden wonder.

"Say, Pen!" he exclaimed, excitedly, "you haven't got a man up there at your ranch, have you?"

"Certainly; two of them," she replied assuredly.

"That's all right. So long as there are two, it's nothing serious. Safety in numbers, remember."

After dinner they motored out to the field where the exhibition was to be given. A coatless, tanned, weather-beaten crowd had already gathered.

Pen stood apart from the spectators, watching Larry whirl, turn turtle and perform all the aviation agonies so fascinating to the untutored. When he shut off the engine and swung down, skimming the ground for a way and stopping gently, she was in waiting nearby.

"I loathe this kind of exhibition work!" he declared.

"N—o, Larry. Vice versa for mine, as the Irishman said."

"All right. Here, Meder!" he said to the mechanic, who had come up. "Take care of the flier. I'll see you later at the hotel."

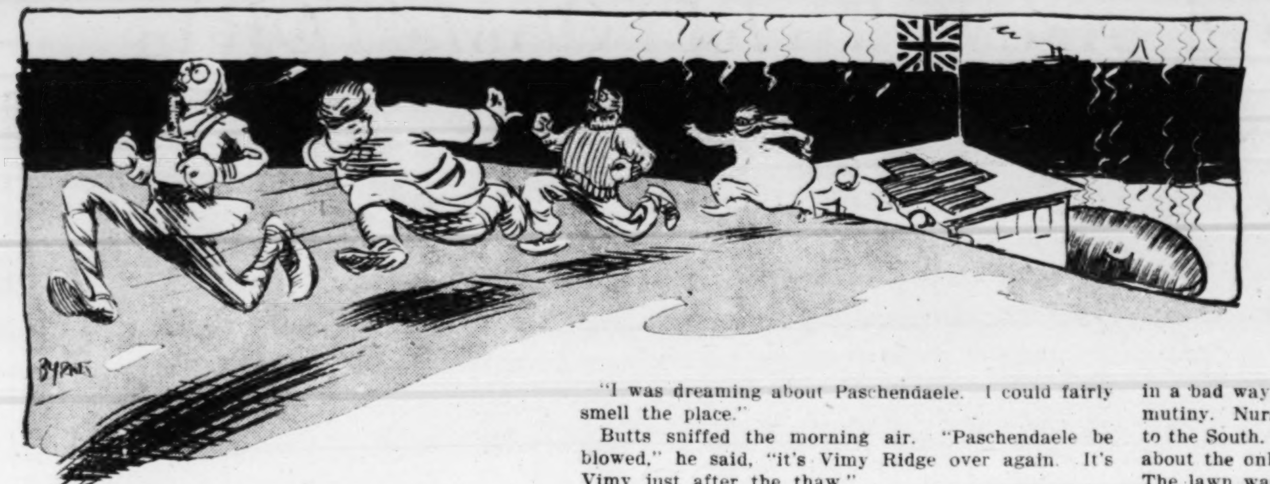
La-May Face Powder Is Harmless to the Most Delicate Skin

A specialist has at last perfected a pure face powder that positively will not cause enlarged pores, blackheads and irritations. In fact, while it is considered the best face powder, it is also a remedy for complexion troubles. It is guaranteed pure and harmless to the most delicate baby skin. It beautifies wonderfully because it helps to clear and lighten the skin and protect the complexion from blemishes. This new kind of face powder is made largely of an ingredient that skin specialists use in the treatment of the complexion. And it really stays on better than any other face powder. Of course, saying this, every one knows we mean the famous La-may Powder (French, Poudre L'Ame). This is the powder that does not contain starchy rice powder or dangerous white lead to make it adhere. White lead is a deadly poison and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that makes enlarged pores, blackheads and rice powder irritations. Because La-may is so pure and because it stays on so well it is now used by over a million American women. All dealers carry the large box, and many dealers also carry the small trial size. Be sure to try La-may. Then you will really know a perfect face powder. You will be sorry if you take a substitute. When you use this harmless powder and see how beautifully it improves your complexion, you will understand why La-may so quickly became the most popular beauty powder sold in America. Save this notice.

A Whale of Two Nations and What Became of It



True story of monster mammal of the deep, first killed by a British shell because he happened to look like a submarine, which drifted ashore and landed close to an English hospital in France — And then the complications began! -:- -:- -:-

AT THE town of Hardelot, where rested from the war some 2000 soldiers, was the biggest skin hospital maintained by the British in France. Hardelot was a pleasant village, popular as a seaside playground in summer. Boulogne was 12 miles away. The hospital was an open-air affair. Nearly all the 2000 beds were under canvas, and the summer sea breezes which swept in from the channel made it a very pleasant place for men out of the trenches to lie about in tents, and dream. That is what they were doing on a warm, sunny day in November, 1917.

Then the Big Smell came in.

A week before, a British blimp cruising lazily up and down the coast on the outlook for submarines had wirelessed the shore station that it had seen a submarine, apparently motionless, some 100 feet below the surface, eight miles out in the channel. There was a furore. The coast defense guns, always ready, were made readier. The anti-aircraft batteries arranged to help them out. Squadrons of airplanes flew to sea to get in on the show, for it was assumed that a German submarine was about to shell the little town, the batteries and the hospital.

Nothing happened.

Three days later a big bull whale washed ashore on the sand at the very door of the hospital. He was 80 feet long and he was very dead. There was a hole through him which would have permitted the passage of a Ford.

One can but imagine how he came to his untimely end.

Bored by the lonesomeness of those unfrequented seas, he had come to the surface for a breath of air.

"Submarine on the port bow, sir," yelled the lookout to a spruce young man on a channel gunboat watching for submarines. They laid a gun in a trice and passed a shell briskly through the animal. The whale went down and died, and even though dead reappeared on the surface later on. The Lieutenant doubtless went to the wireless and reported that he had sighted a submarine at a certain spot, had fired on it with a certain gun of such-and-such caliber, and believed he had sunk the enemy craft. Oil was seen on the water afterward. He then proceeded on the patrol.

The whale, still another of the innocent victims of the Kaiser's lust for power, washed ashore on the Hardelot beach during a heavy gale at high tide. The next morning just before mess call Todjer Squires, recovering from a skin ailment due to "cootie" activity, said to his tentmate, Corp. Arthur Butts, who had trench feet, with complications, due to the same cause:

"I was dreaming about Paschendaele. I could fairly smell the place."

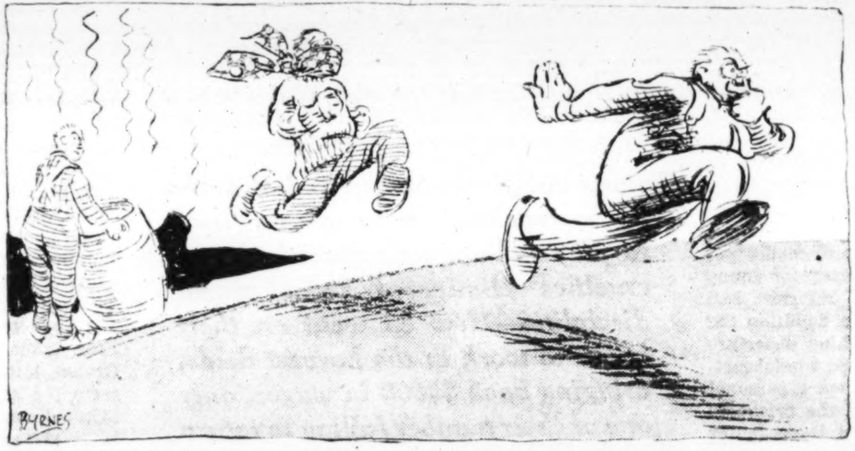
Butts sniffed the morning air. "Paschendaele be blowed," he said, "it's Vimy Ridge over again. It's Vimy just after the thaw."

One of the officers, a pink Englishman, was given to throwing wide his window early in the morning and filling his lungs with the fresh sea air. That morning he went fairly off his chump, and his striker, hearing a noise, rushed in, to find the officer lying on the floor crying, "Stretcher bearers, this way! Stretcher bearers, this way!"

"Makes me 'omesick," said Wilfred Trotter. "So like the glue works just off the Edgeware road."

Down the street of tents came sporadic cries of "Gas! Gas!"

The commanding officer of the British hospital finished breakfast early, started to the beach, viewed the newly arrived beast from a safe distance and hurried back to his office, where he wrote a dispatch to his chief, demanding immediate action. The chief communicated by telegraph with the French officer in charge of that section of the coast line, as the French had right of salvage to all flotsam and jetsam from the sea. The French commandant notified his outfit nearest to Hardelot. All these messages contained a reference to the smell. French inspectors came and inspected. They said it was very sad and that there could be no possible doubt the whale was dead. They considered it a case which called for prompt action.



The whaling expert, even though a Norseman and inured to every known hardship, fled in the direction of Paris when his helpers bolted the job.

There lived in Hardelot a Norwegian who had followed the sea in his younger days. He was instructed to search the body for valuables and in four days he had drawn off 12 barrels of oil. At the end of the fourth day his workers all quit and departed for the South of France, they said. One said he might stop in Paris, if the smell was not too strong there. The oil was sold to the British army for use in the treatment of trench feet.

The next move, following another vigorous note typed on British army stationery, brought 75 Annamites to the scene. These small, round citizens of France's Asiatic colony were supposed to be able to stand anything. They swarmed over the carcass, and within a week most of the tail had been cut off, carried out to sea and sunk, and there was quite a hole in what might have been the whale's left flank. But the Annamites were faltering. Their numbers wasted away. They could be seen in twos and threes on the fenders of inland-bound trucks, their noses buried in their goat-skin coats. These coats never were famed for fragrancy, but they were a great relief. The day came when no Annamite reported on the reeking beach, and the body was still there, smelling tremendously.

For the next few days there was no activity except on the part of the whale. It grew stronger steadily. There was another exchange of notes between representatives of the British and French nations, and there matters rested for another week. Things were getting in a bad way around the hospital. The men talked of mutiny. Nurses were becoming very ill and being sent to the South. Badminton, a sort of modified tennis, and about the only sport the doctors had, was abandoned. The lawn was frequented no more. Officers and men crowded the X-ray room to such an extent it became a menace to human life. The X-ray room was an airtight place, which usually reeked with a smell of chemicals.

The Colonel in command of the hospital devoted two hours to his next note, and it was considered by the Adjutant to be a very strong document. It went through the usual channels and when it passed from the British Government representatives to the French Government representatives, there was action again

This time the British officer in charge of the aviation in that district was appointed to quell the tumult, with the fullest approval of the French army, which showed a willingness to outdo the feats of Alphonse and Goston in self-abnegation. He went down to inspect.

"Ah! a whale," he said.

"It surely is," the Colonel replied.

"An immense one, too," the aviation officer said. "I should say that fellow was probably 80 years old."

"More than that," the medical officer responded, "much more. He has been dead longer than that."

"Dead? Is he?" inquired his fellow countryman. "He most certainly is," the Colonel replied.

"Want him removed?" he inquired. Words failed the medical officer. He only answered "Yes."

"Simple matter, the aerial officer said, "very simple. You should have sent for me at first. I will merely blow him back out to sea. A little TNT properly placed—pouf! The unpleasant odor is gone."

"God speed you," said the hospital officer.

The aviator went back to the hospital and had a bit of Scotch and a dish of tea while waiting for the engineers, to whom he had telephoned. When they came the party went down to the remains of the deceased to figure how the charge should be placed. They returned to the hospital, got their gas masks, adjusted them and returned to the task. There was a good deal of calculation and figuring and drawing and finally the charge was placed.

All removable patients in the hospital were taken back to a safe place; the others were put under shelter, and the charge was set off by electricity.

It was a grand explosion. Windows rattled in Boulogne and the weather vanes on steeples 10 miles away veered with the gust. But there was something wrong with the calculation. The chief engineer said the 12 barrels of oil that the Norwegian had drawn off, in addition to the excavations in the flank made by the Annamites, had upset his figuring, for instead of propelling the carcass seaward, it lifted it high in the air and shredded it like a cocoanut. Whale hash fell all over the countryside. Very odorous whale hash it was. Refugees from the front were sure the war was pressing upon them. The people in the little towns said it was not the war, that the war could not possibly be that bad. Everybody was displeased, except the "Stretcher bearers, quick! I'm gassed!" shouted the British officer, when the wind and tide deposited the dead mammal at his door.

"Makes me 'omesick," quoth Private Wilfred Trotter. "So much like the glue works just off Edgeware road."

Bart Harrington, Genius

Harrington's look of reproach as he went out haunted him for days—so long, in fact, that he bore with extraordinary patience a confidence that gentleman favored him with several months later. He came to the office one morning wearing an expression oddly combined of pride and shame, in which first one and then the other predominated. For a long time he discussed apartments and janitors and domestic supplies, and Maxwell humored him. Then he said:

"I've been an awful ass, Maxwell, but that's no reason why I should keep on being one, is it? I've got to tell you something impo'tant, and I'm going to do it now. I can't write any more about literatuah of the past and lily-pads of the present, as you would say. Who ca'es about 'em? I don't. The wo'ld today is interested in the life of today. Men think about theah wives and theah children and theah business and reconstruction, and that's all they think about. And women think about men, and that's all they think about. And heah I'm writing all the time about literatuah—literatuah." He turned the word over in his mouth and ejected it with supreme contempt.

As once before, Maxwell was silent in the presence of simple truth. He rallied, however, and voiced a protest.

"I suppose you haven't lost interest in earning your living," he suggested, ironically. "How do you intend to do that if you give up this job?"

Harrington flushed a little, and cleared his throat, nervously, before he spoke. Then he drew a paper from his pocket, and as his fingers touched it his face cleared and happy pride beamed from him.

"I've got something else," he said, simply. "I waited to see how it would tu'n out befoah I told you. It's quite a story. You see," he went on expansively, settling back in his chair and swinging his foot with the characteristic swing of the boy of two years before—"you see, Clara needed a hatpin, the kind that would stay in and keep a hat on. None of them do, Clara said. So I made one foh huh, and Clara's brothah saw it and thought it was a good thing. He's a lawyer, you know. He showed the hatpin to some man with money, and they took it up and we patented it, and now we've got a facto'y and we're selling it. It's—it's making lots of money.'

He turned an apologetic eye on his friend and continued, more firmly: "They gave me $20,000 down and 20 per cent of the stock, and a block of stock foh you, because I insisted on that. I want you in on my luck. Heah it is. E. W. Hubbard is the chief backah, and he says this is wuth $10,000. He says every woman in Ame'ica will be wearing one of ouah hatpins this time next yeah."

He laid the certificate on the table as he spoke, and for a moment Maxwell sat staring at it, speechless. He knew Hubbard—a rich, shrewd financier, and no leader of forlorn hopes. If Hubbard was in the thing, the thing was all right. But a hatpin!

Maxwell looked at the certificate and thought of the hatpin and reviewed the Harrington of the past two years, and felt a horrible desire to laugh and to cry. Then he pushed the paper toward the inventor.

"It's awfully good of you, old man," he said, huskily. "But, of course, I can't take this. There's no reason why you should give me $10,000, you know."

Harrington laughed—a queer little laugh.

"Ain't they a reason?" he asked, lapsing in his earnestness into the careless grammar he had almost overcome. "Well, I guess I know moah than anyone else 'bout that. Do you remembah the $15 you lent me the day I came heah? Well, suh, I was sta'ving. I hadn't eaten fo' two days, an' I couldn't get wo'k, an' I couldn't beg. That's why I meant to kill myself. That money saved me.

"Now, heah's this thing. It ain't money. It's an idea. It's an idea out of my haid, an' that haid wouldn't be heah at all if it wasn't fo' you. You've given me mah chance. What I've done ain't much, but it's brought results, and results ah the things that count. So we'll just call it interest, if you don't mind. I think it's goin' to be wuth while. An' you know," he added, almost timidly, "we ah friends—ahn't we, you and I?"

Maxwell wrung his hand. Then he picked up the certificate, folded it, and put it carefully into his pocket.

"Thanks, old man," he said, quietly. "It's the biggest thing that has ever come my way, and I'll take it—from my friend."

Later, when Harrington had taken his jubilant departure, Maxwell related the incident to his chief. Wilson listened with flattering attention. At the end he nodded sympathetically.

He's all right," he said, "and you needn't worry about him. He's got one quality left that sets him far enough apart from the rabble of today." He looked keenly at the young man as he added, suddenly: "Of all the fellows you've ever helped, Maxwell—and I know you've helped a lot in one way or another—has any of them before today ever shown you any gratitude?"

Maxwell shook his head. "Don't remember any," he admitted. "But I didn't expect any, and don't want any."

"And you don't get it," ended the older man, with a sigh. "It's the rarest thing in life. So make the most of it this time, my boy. One doesn't often meet a visitor from Mars!"

MAKING GOOD CITIZENS OF BAD BOYS

A big boost to the inmates' finances was the recent harvest. Farmers were calling vainly for help and wheat was flattening out by the hundreds of acres because hands could not be had. Eighty-three members of the honor club were turned loose on honor paroles, being simply told to go to the harvest fields. Eighty-two of these men filled their trust and returned, bringing a total of about $8000 in checks, which are held to their credit. A few who have families sent all or part of the money to them. Just one man failed to return.

Particular attention is paid to educating the boys. The average inmate, when he is received, has had a fourth-grade education. Before he can be paroled from the reformatory he must have completed a common school education. In the last six years there have been but five college men received and only 10 per cent of the inmates have been to high school.

A point which is being emphasized now is teaching each man a first-class trade, which will enable him to earn a good living, thus removing temptation in the future. Three good trades have just been added—automobile repairing, printing and barbering.

Two linotype machines have been purchased for the printing department, one for the advanced students and an old one, which will be torn down and rebuilt. In the automobile school they learn all kinds of repair work and are able to make extra parts. The institution has four tractors, which are kept in repair by the boys.

The majority of the prisoners work at some time or other on the farm. The institution has a half section of first-class land and both large and small crops are raised. Sufficient produce is raised each year to carry the institution all summer. The reformatory has a large herd and does its own butchering.

What Is to be Done With Old St. Louis Courthouse?

to found St. Louis. The one in the Market street wing shows De Soto discovering the Mississippi River. That in the Chestnut street wing represents an Indian attack on old St. Louis when it was a stockaded town bounded by the river, Fourth street, Walnut and St. Charles streets. The one in the Broadway wing illustrates a pass in the Rocky Mountains through which the gold seekers traveled to California.

One photo-picture represents the courthouse from the Fourth street side as it stands today, with the exception that the iron fence around the lot has long since been removed. The old sun dial, much dilapidated, which was erected in 1858, is shown in this picture.

Some of the distinguished members of the bar who practiced in the old forum were John F. Darby, one of the first lawyers of the city, member of Congress, banker and for many years one of the leading members of the bar. Another was John M. Krum, father of Chester H. Krum, now one of the leading attorneys in St. Louis. John M. Krum had the distinction of being Mayor of two cities; first of Alton, Ill., later of St. Louis. Wilson Primm, a leading member of the bar for many years, noted for his eloquence, and one of the early historians of St. Louis, was a Judge of the Circuit Court. A number of others may be named:

James B. Dowling, also a Judge of the Criminal Court and later a member of Congress, and still later United States Minister to Bolivia, practiced in the old building. Roswell M. Field, father of Eugene Field, had for many years the largest real estate practice in St. Louis.

Edward Bates was another lawyer to practice there, perhaps one of the best equity lawyers St. Louis ever possessed. He was United States Attorney-General in President Lincoln's Cabinet at the time the famous emancipation proclamation was decided upon.

Montgomery Blair formerly practiced law in St. Louis and was Judge of the St. Louis Court of Common Pleas and later became Postmaster-General of the United States. Judge Charles D. Drake practiced law for many years in St. Louis. Alexander P. Garesche, for many years a prominent lawyer of St. Louis, refused to take the oath of loyalty and continued to practice law, having been proceeded against criminally and condemned by a State court. He carried his case to the Supreme Court of the United States, which decided that this oath was unconstitutional, void and of no effect.

Britton A. Hill, a prominent lawyer for many years, a man of fine physique and an able speaker, was probably one of the best insurance lawyers in St. Louis. Henry S. Geyer, long a leading practitioner at the bar and who became United States Senator from Missouri, was there often in the older days.

Trusten Polk was a fine real estate lawyer, with perhaps few if any superiors in Missouri. He defeated Col. Thomas H. Benton for Governor of the State, and at the beginning of the Civil War was Senator from Missouri, but resigned and joined the Confederacy.

Alexander Hamilton, Judge of the Circuit Court for quite a number of years, presided at the trial of the famous Dred Scott case. Another lawyer was Hamilton R. Gamble, who was appointed Governor of Missouri by the State convention held in St. Louis in 1862, which expelled the Claiborne Jackson State government from office and retained Missouri in the Union. B. Gratz Brown, an able writer and soldier, was well known to the old courthouse.

Charles Gibson, perhaps the only St. Louis lawyer who obtained a title by virtue of his services to subjects of the Emperors of Germany and Austria, was another frequent visitor. Melvin L. Gray was noted as a leading lawyer and practiced his profession for perhaps a greater number of years than any other member of the bar. Daniel T. Jewett was United States Senator from Missouri for a time during the uneasy days that followed the close of the Civil War. He practiced law in St. Louis a number of years.

Another was John W. Noble, who entered the Union army at the beginning of the Civil War as a private. He served through the war and at its close retired with the rank of Major-General. He served as Secretary of the Interior in the Cabinet of President Harrison.

Perhaps the most famous trial ever held in the old courthouse was the Dred Scott trial. Dred Scott was an old negro who belonged to Dr. Emerson, a surgeon in the United States army, who for a time was stationed at Jefferson Barracks. Missouri was a slave State. When the surgeon was transferred to an army post in Illinois, a free State, he took Dred with him. From there he took him to Fort Snelling, Minn., also free territory.

When he returned to Jefferson Barracks, bringing old Dred with him, he sold his slaves, including Dred, to John F. A. Sandford of New York. Much confusion seemed to exist in the minds of St. Louis lawyers about the ratifications of the Dred Scott case. The following synopsis of the case was prepared by Walter B. Douglas, former Circuit Judge and an active spirit in the Missouri Historical Society.

"Dred sought his freedom in a writ of habeas corpus directed against Dr. Emerson. The first suit was tried in the St. Louis Circuit Court in 1848. The judgment was for Dred Scott, and was reversed by the Supreme Court of Missouri in 1852. Dred Scott then brought suit against Sandford in the Federal Court at St. Louis. This case was decided in 1854 against Dred Scott. An appeal was taken to the United States Supreme Court, which was argued at the December term, 1855, and reargued at the December term, 1856, when the case was decided against Dred Scott, March 7, 1857.

"Dred and his family were emancipated by their owners shortly after the decision. In my judgment the case was a political one, gotten up for political effect and not based on a bona fide claim of Dred Scott."

Dred later lived with a member of the Blow family of St. Louis until he died, working at odd jobs and as doorman at entertainments in fashionable homes. When he died and where his body was buried never has been ascertained, despite the fact that the Missouri Historical Society has made diligent search.

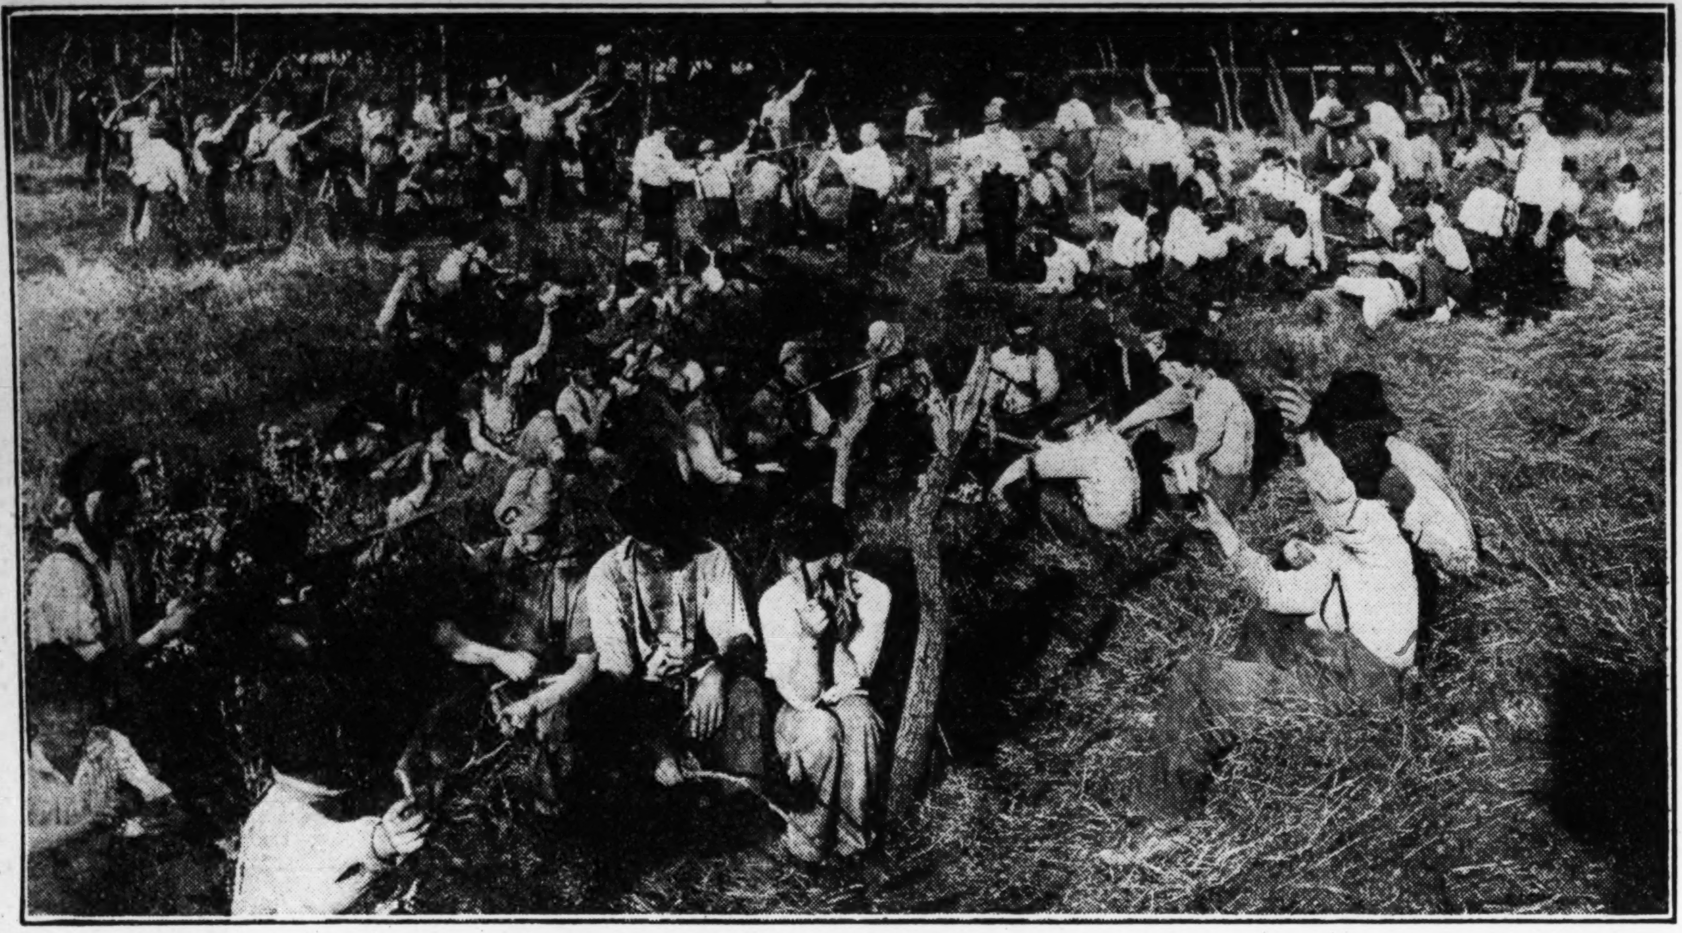
Cured His RUPTURE
I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation, if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 149F Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life or at least stop the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

MAKING GOOD CITIZENS OF BAD BOYS -- AT THE KANSAS REFORMATORY --



"Wiener roasting." Superintendent Herr's Honor Club at the Kansas Reformatory enjoying an evening at a nearby grove.

Driving out gloom and hatred of authority by teaching young inmates how to play — Dungeons abolished and cruelties eliminated from prison discipline—How 83 went on their honor to work in the harvest fields, bringing back $8000 in wages, only one of their number failing to return

A MAN cannot be made to live a completely unnatural life in prison and then be expected to emerge a better citizen, especially when he is young and has a fairly impressionable mind."

So says J. N. Herr, superintendent of the Kansas State Reformatory for young men, at Hutchinson, who has adopted reforms and practices of a revolutionary character in handling the local penal institution. Herr is a refreshing departure from the ordinary type of prison head. So wholeheartedly does he enter into his work and so much personal interest does he take in the welfare of the prisoners that he is rapidly winning the hearts of these junior felons.

A reformatory is a half-way point between a reform school and the penitentiary. Here felons between the ages of 16 and 25 are sentenced, always for indeterminate terms. A parole system that gives every man an opportunity to come before the Penal Board for parole one year after he enters the institution has long been in force.

Herr is winning the majority of the inmates away from the old hatred for all authority and making of the institution a happy community. The days of gloom and hate, of plotting and armed guards and practically no liberty, of rigorous discipline and toil unbroken by the little pleasures that make life worth while, are gone. Instead, the inmates play, sing and enjoy liberties such as are probably not extended in any other prison in the country.

When Herr assumed the superintendency of the reformatory he began a close study of conditions. What he found can be duplicated in practically any prison in the country today. Men were sullen, resentful of authority and always willing to break laws of the institution or run away. Unnatural living conditions, Herr decided, ed, were causing this condition. He then outlined his plan of reform. He had to work slowly because the criminal mind is naturally suspicious and slow to respond to kindness.

Herr has a theory that there should be no criminals in the reformatory. If he finds what he terms a criminal among the inmates he speedily obtains his transfer to the State Penitentiary and thus frees the institution from the taint which is bound to make itself felt.

It should not be thought that every convict responds to this kindly treatment. It is estimated by the prison head that from 5 to 10 per cent of the men are incorrigible; unwilling to accept kindness or to act in such a way as to merit the privileges which are daily being enlarged. While the others are hiking outside the walls, playing in the yard, swimming in the lake and enjoying other privileges, these are in their cells. They are not given rough treatment, such as they formerly experienced, but are denied all the good things that are brightening the lives of the other boys.

In the days of the dark dungeons, which have been abolished, of whipping posts and other common prison cruelties, the inmates had one hour each Saturday for recreation. Then armed guards were scattered among them, so that there was too much restraint for them to enjoy themselves. Now, three hours every evening are allowed for recreation, and they have all of Saturday afternoon and Sunday. On the latter day the religious side of their training comes in. The ministers of Hutchinson take turns in conducting services in the chapel. These reforms, which Herr has gradually worked out, were thought impossible by prison heads a few years ago. They believed that a majority of the convicts would abuse any attempt to better their lot, but experiments in most of the leading prisons of the country proved that this was not true.

The recreation period, unaccompanied by guards, was the first step taken. Next went the guards armed with clubs in the dining room and chapel and the armed guards were taken from the towers. The silent system in the dining room was abolished. Formerly no conversation at meals was allowed. A code of fingers was used in asking for food and a half-dozen armed guards stood ready to curb any infraction of rules. This, Herr found, stayed with the boys after their parole, and when he tried allowing conversation at meals it proved successful.

The first big boost in morale came with the installation of a movie machine. At this time the Herr Honor Club was formed. Every inmate with 30 days' good time was entitled to membership and the little pink cards soon became coveted. They, first of all, entitled the holders to attend the semi-weekly movie shows. Frequently one of the downtown houses would donate a good film for exhibition at the reformatory. The first time they were ever taken outside the walls in a body was the occasion of the showing of a noted prison reform picture downtown. The honor club, with over 200 members, went in a body, with two unarmed guards in attendance. And they appreciated this trust.

The next big advance in morale came with the formation of a chorus. Dr. Donald Marvin, a psychologist at the State Institution for Feeble Minded, helped make singing popular with the boys. Nothing has done more for increasing morale than music. At 6:30 o'clock each evening a big song fest is held in the prison yard. This usually lasts for about 45 minutes, after which the boys engage in different sports. This work has been taken up as a permanent feature by J. Fuller Groom, lately a Lieutenant in the army, who also directs the athletic end of the daily program. He has injected something of the spirit of the army into these boys, giving daily calisthenics and conducting organized play.

Hardly half of the inmates know how to play, Supt. Herr has observed. They must be taught. They always have been willing watchers, but only a few would engage in sports actively. Today games which bring as many as half of the inmates into the contests are played, and the boys are growing to like them. A mental test such as was given to the soldiers recently is now being administered to each inmate in order that they may be classified as to mentality.

The inmates are being taken on hikes frequently and often go outside the prison walls unattended except perhaps for one unarmed guard, who acts as a guide. The institution has a big lake, where the boys are taken for a plunge. Several times they have gone out in the evening on picnics, roasting "wienies" and playing games.

"These things could not be accomplished all at once," said Herr. "We have and will continue to gradually build up the system and I hope to see the point reached where the big majority can be trusted at all times; where they can be permitted to live in cottages outside the walls and away from prison taint. Serious rule violations have practically been eliminated. We can do better yet."

An intensely patriotic spirit pervaded the institution during the war. All were anxious to get into the fighting forces overseas, and 173 inmates did don the uniform. The population was reduced to its lowest point in years during the war. Herr has heard from quite a number of these boys, and without exception they have made good. One boy that he knows of, John Polly of Wellington, Kan., was awarded a Distinguished Service Cross.

During the war those who could not go did everything they could. W. W. Kind Words for Unappreciated Grizzly Bear

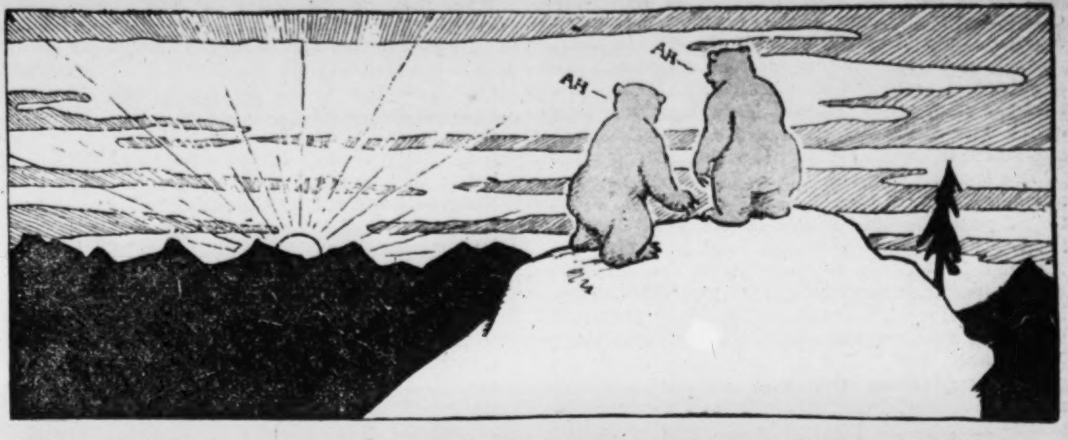
Far From Being the ferocious terror of the Rockies, as portrayed in lurid fiction, he is a benign, intelligent, playful beast and makes a perfect pet, says Enos Mills, who hunts without a gun :: :: ::



When looking at scenery and sunsets, the grizzly's appearance is one of enjoyment.

HERE comes a man who proposes to controvert, blast and utterly demolish one of the most cherished of American ideas. What a striking and integral part of good, old-fashioned Americanism has been the fable of the ferocious grizzly bear! And now a volume appears, "The Grizzly," by Enos A. Mills (Houghton-Mifflin Co.), which tells of the art of hunting the grizzly without a gun, and stoutly maintains that the monstrous bear, far from being ferocious, is one of the gentlest and most benign of beasts. The grizzly's lurid reputation, so the story runs, is born of misconception and the wild-eyed nature-faking fictions with which Indians gulled the greenhorn palefaces.

This heresy of the grizzly's nonferocity has been whispered before, but Mr. Mills comes forward with proofs that touch both reason and sentiment. The grizzly bear's home life! A tender, touching thing that ought to dispel the worst hard-boiled trapper's nightmares regarding the innate villainy of the "b'ar."

Take the excellent qualities of the mother grizzly. As usual, we have to begin with qualifications. "Though gentle and patient," explains Mr. Mills, "the grizzly mother uses a limited amount of cuffing and spanking with the cubs, especially if they are in danger. Crossing the mountains one stormy spring day, I beheld a grizzly bear emerging from the gloom only a few yards away. Close behind her were two small cubs. Mother grizzly, as much surprised as I, instantly retreated. With an impatient expression and a growl of anger she wheeled quickly about and boxed the cubs right and left, like a nervous mother. Urged on with spanks from behind, the youngsters turned back in the direction from which they had come."

"A mother grizzly with two young cubs stopped by a tree to dig out mice. In the midst of her digging the mother grizzly caught a faint scent of me, and instantly was all concentration. On tiptoe, motionless as a statue, she stood looking, listening and gathering information with her nostrils. Then she relaxed and dropped on all fours, and seemed uncertain. One of the cubs concluded to suckle. Instantly the mother knocked him headlong with a sideswing of her left forepaw. Such thoughtlessness in the face of danger was evidently too much to be excused.

"The little cub landed some yards away, tumbling heels over head. He showed no surprise, in fact pretended that this was part of his plan. The instant he rolled on his feet he sniffed the earth eagerly, as though he had made a remarkable discovery, and started to dig.

"It is ever a joy to watch a grizzly and her children. A mother grizzly crossing a lake just south of Long's Peak swam low in the water with a cub sitting contentedly on her back. She came directly toward shore, where I was standing concealed behind trees I threw a stone into the water close to her. Wheeling about like lightning, mother grizzly started at full speed for the further shore. The cub tipped over into the water, but hastily took a tail hold and was towed rapidly away.

"Comical and cunning the cubs appear as they mimic the mother. When she stands up with forepaws against her breast, looking intently into the distance, the cubs stand up with their paws upon their breasts and look in the same direction. The cubs walk up to a spot where the mother has been sniffing and digging, and there sniff and dig. If the mother reaches up and pulls down a fruit-laden limb and takes a bite, they, too, must pull down a twig of some kind and at least look at it.

"The almost continual play of the cubs is a never-ending source of interest. They race, they wrestle, they box. They climb upon mother's back, they swat and pummel her and maul her. She will endure this by the hour with absolute indifference."

Playfulness and great intelligence make the grizzly cub a charming pet. They are not difficult to raise. We are told of a greyhound mother being induced to suckle an infant cub. Shoes were devised for the cub to protect the maternal greyhound from her foster-child's claws.

"While visiting the Blackfeet Indians," narrates Mr. Mills, "I saw a young Indian woman nursing two baby grizzly bears. The mother grizzly had been killed a day or two before and the cubs taken from the den. They were little bits of warm, pink life, scantily covered with hair. They were blind and toothless, but had sharp, tiny claws. For several days the Indian woman suckled the cubs, then she fed them on cow's milk and succeeded in raising them."

The mother grizzly stood motionless as a statue, gathering information with her nostrils. The cub sniffed too.

And as for intelligence:

"A grizzly cub in Yellowstone Park found a big ham skin—a prized delicacy. Just as the little fellow was lifting it to his mouth a big bear approached. He instantly sat down on it and pretended to be greatly interested in watching something."

A hunter came upon a grizzly mother in the thicket. She thought herself attacked and cornered; this is the only circumstance in which a grizzly will charge a man. The hunter had to kill her.

"I went with the hunter to bring in the grizzly," tells Mr. Mills. "She was a beautiful silver-tip of about 400 pounds. Just as the hunter was about to start skinning the bear I caught sight of a cub peeping not 30 feet away. Then another frightened cub face appeared.

"After hesitating for a moment, both cubs came out and stood looking intently toward their dead mother. They took a few steps toward us, and then hastily retreated toward the rocks. Evidently their mother had trained them to stay wherever she had left them. But they had waited long, and whimpered very much like hungry, forsaken children. They could scent their mother and see her, too, and were too hungry and lonesome to endure without her longer. Again they started slowly toward us. When very near they paused, rose on their hind legs and looked intently at us and in wonder and longing at their lifeless mother. Then they went to her. One little cub sniffed in a bewildered, puzzled way over her cold, still body. He gently stroked her fur with his paw and then sat down and began to whimper and cry.

"The other little cub stood looking with awe into his mather's moveless face, but at last shook off his fright and smelled her bloody head. Then, all forlorn, he turned to look eagerly into the face of the hunter, who, with big tears on his cheeks, had been watching. After a moment the cub took a step toward him, rose up and trustingly put his forepaws upon his knee, and looked seriously, confidingly into his face.

"We carried these little orphans to camp, and the hunter raised them. Their mother was the last animal he ever shot."

Playfulness and intelligence make the grizzly a charming pet.

Why has the grizzly been thought so ferocious? Here are a few incidents to illustrate the misunderstanding:

"Riding a lazy pony," says the hunter without a gun, "I came close upon a grizzly and three cubs. They aroused the deep and emotional nature of my pony. In his eagerness to reach a high mountain across the canyon, he forgot all about the canyon that lay between. While he was standing on one hind foot on the edge of the canyon I leaped from the saddle. The old bear and cubs, forgetting all possible danger, stood up to watch the entire exhibition."

"The grizzly sometimes pauses to watch the antics of other wild life. The sliding of the otters at play appears to interest him. Once I was enjoying the play of a number of beavers. A grizzly watched them from the edge of the woods and then came out and sat on the dam, where he could better see them.

When looking at scenery and sunsets, the grizzly's appearance is one of enjoyment. He appears to feel the presence of what we call beautiful and glorious. I have seen a grizzly looking at a magnificent and many-colored sunset, completely absorbed. I once saw a grizzly turn to stare at the course of a shooting star; another gazed at a brilliant rainbow."

This intelligence and curiosity of the magnificent bear has served him badly. When the white man went into the West, with his strange equipment, it excited the grizzly's intensest interest. The beginning of the legend of grizzlies' audacious and terrible nature began with the accounts written of the Lewis and Clark expedition. Unfortunate, avers Mr. Mills. It is leading to the final extermination of the grizzly—now almost complete.

Enos A. Mills, who thus seeks to place the grizzly in an entirely different light from the accepted standard, is regarded as one of the most noted authorities on the wild animal life of the Rockies, and his recent offering on the bear lore has attracted widespread attention from the naturalists. It is admitted that no student of the far western animal life is better qualified to speak with decision on the virtues and vices of the American species of bruin than this student, writer and guide. Mills was born near Kansas City on the Kansas side of the line, 49 years ago and at the age of 16 established a cabin home near Long's Peak, Colorado, for the purpose of exploring the country in his own way. This consisted of going about on foot without firearms, which was considered a rather hazardous program at that time.

He climbed this peak no fewer than 250 times and in his cabin employed much of his time writing articles on the preservation of wild birds, flowers and scenery. He also delivered many lectures urging the establishment of natural parks.

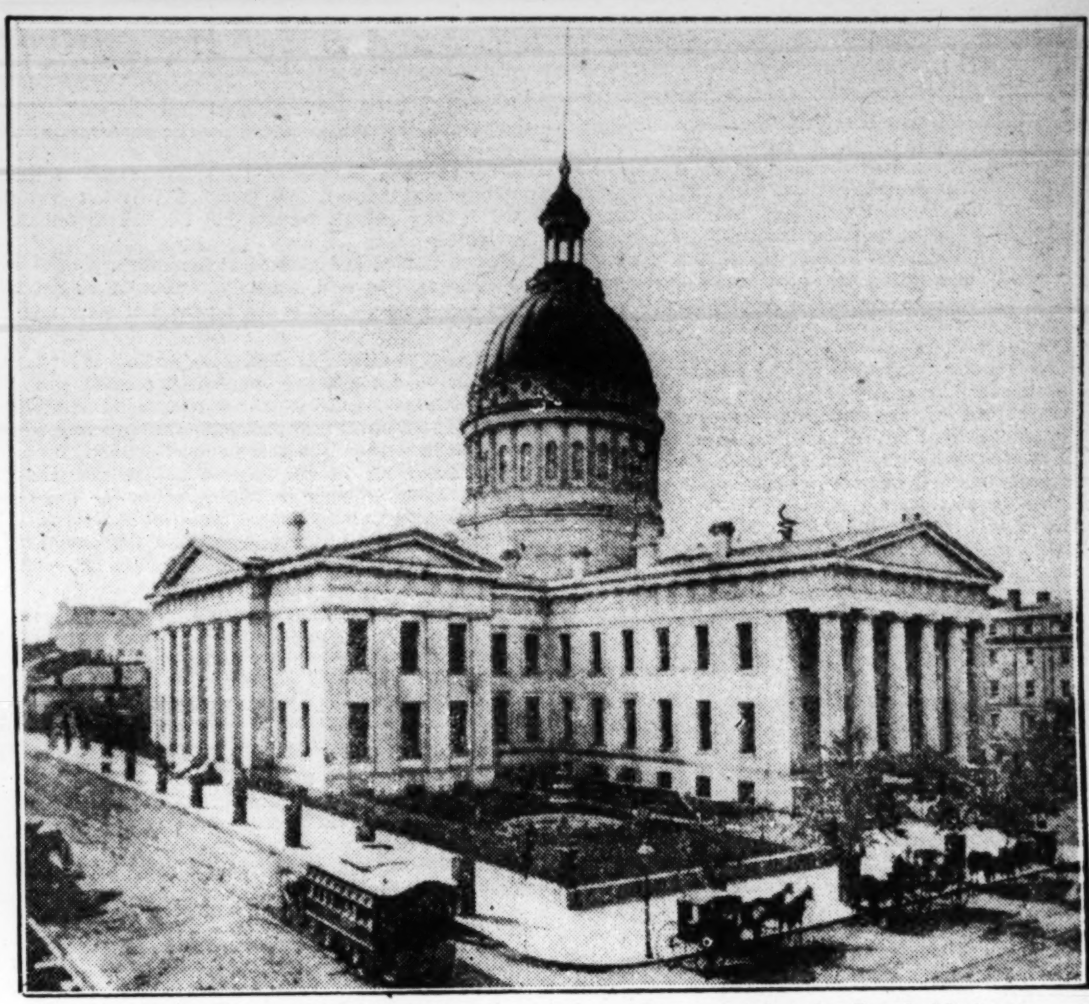
keepers of perfume shops, who throve amazingly, but back at Hardelot there was indication that peace would come again.

"Much better now," said Todjer Jones cheerily, "not much worse than Mons, I should say."

The British medical officer closed the incident with another note, a masterpiece in expression of deep and undying gratitude. It may have afforded the aviation officer a measure of consolation for some of the severe though informal expressions that came back from the villages and towns within a radius of 15 or more miles back of the channel, and having a thorough knowledge of French, he realized his unpopularity in Hardelot and vicinity.

WHAT IS TO BE DONE WITH THE OLD ST. LOUIS COURTHOUSE!

Some would demolish it as having outlived its usefulness, others favor its retention because of its historical associations and architectural values—Story of its construction—The paintings in the dome—Noted early lawyers who practiced there—The Dred Scott case :: :: ::



The Court House virtually as it stands today, surmounted by the Rumbold dome.

OLD things are refining in their influence (likewise old people), yet there are some in St. Louis today who favor demolition of the old courthouse at Broadway and Market street. And this in face of the fact that thousands of people of the United States journey to Europe every year to see old things and return home impressed with the value of preserving them.

That the old courthouse is inadequate for court purposes today is beyond dispute. But what to do with it is another question. Many persons favor taking it down stone by stone and re-erecting it in one of the city parks. Some suggest that it be thrown into the river, but they seem few in number.

The building stands on city block No. 1, bounded by Broadway, Fourth, Market and Chestnut streets. The lot was donated to the City of St. Louis by Pierre Chouteau and J. B. C. Lucas, with a proviso in the deed that the ground should always be used for courthouse purposes or revert to the heirs of the donors.

This might prove a stumbling block to removing the old building, unless it were replaced by a new one. Perhaps the site is out of date for a courthouse. But even this difficulty could be obviated, those who favor retaining it argue, by allowing the old building to remain where it is to house the Probate Court and some or all of the justice courts, using the remainder for museum purposes.

So many inaccuracies have gained circulation about the old courthouse that perhaps a story as true as it can be told by the present generation is not out of place. It was not "built," it was evolved, and the evolution began in 1839 and ended in 1862, a period of 29 years. The architects were Henry Singleton, William Twombley, Robert S. Mitchell, Thomas D. P. Lanham, William Rumbold and Thomas Walsh, who was the last architect in charge of the dome. A building formerly stood on the lot, completed in 1833, but demolished soon after because it was inadequate to the needs of the growing city.

Perhaps the most admired part of the building now standing is the dome, which was designed by Rumbold. Few persons, however, know that there has been more than one dome on the building. The first was a low dome, as shown in an accompanying picture. The building was never completed. The picture was made from a drawing.

The second dome is shown in another picture. By the time it reached the height shown fear was expressed that it would tumble down, so it was torn down and the present dome erected. The building as shown in that picture is virtually as it stands today, with the exception that Walsh, the last architect, stopped up the architect's lantern crowning the dome with leaded glass.

The building represents a Greek cross. One photograph shows the structure in three stages of construction. It was taken from Fourth and Chestnut streets. It shows the Broadway wing complete as it stands today. The Market and Chestnut street wings had not been started and the Fourth street wing, with its semi-circular porch, is a part of the old building which formerly stood on the block. The roof seems to be about three feet lower than the roof of the present building.

On this semi-circular porch slaves were sold. In fact, slaves were sold at all four entrances to the building. But the Fourth street entrance always was the mart for sales. Perhaps adjournments were taken from the Fourth street entrance to other entrances of the building because of the noise of the hammer and chisel in the erection of the building over the period of 29 years.

There may be a question that slaves ever were sold on the Fourth street porch as it stands today. Edmond P Walsh, a clerk in the courthouse for 54 consecutive years, was authority for this statement. Walsh began his career in the courthouse on Nov. 4, 1856. He died Oct. 14, 1909, while chief of the records department. Walsh always insisted that slaves never were sold on the Fourth street porch as it stands today. They were sold on the semi-circular porch of the first courthouse, on a wooden platform at the Fourth street entrance to the building, before the present stone porch, with its simple Doric columns, was built, and on the ground in front of the Fourth street entrance, but the porch as it now stands was not erected until the summer of 1862, and it is quite likely that the selling of slaves ceased before that time.

The interior of the building is a thing of beauty. The floor is almost archaic. The bottom columns supporting the dome are the simplest form of the Doric. Above these are the Ionic. Still above these are the Corinthian, then the composite, just as they came into use in architecture.

The paintings in the dome are by Carl Weimar, a painter of Wild Western scenes who attained national fame. One of his paintings is said to have sold for $10,000. There are several in the Art Museum in Forest Park. The most highly prized paintings in the old courthouse are the four oval panels over the Broadway, Fourth, Market and Chestnut street wings.

The Fourth street wing shown in the foreground, with its semi-circular porch, is part of the first building that stood on the lot.

timate terms with the mountain and the blue overhead, other things don't satisfy."

She drew him into further conversation regarding his former life, responding briefly but with an undercurrent of interest that put him on good terms with himself.

In the days that followed, these rides became frequent, and despite the fact that they seldom spoke, they unconsciously grew into a closeness of companionship which saved her from the ennui of unwonted domestic environment. The intense vitality of the young foreman attracted her, and she began to have a friendly sympathy for him, and even to feel a tranquil satisfaction in his reposeful silence. At times she was sorely tempted to show him the same little impish self she had portrayed on their first ride up the trail, and sometimes her conscience would sting her that she had failed to confide in him as Mrs. Kingdon had advised, but his gray eyes looked out so very straight and with such calm kindliness—the gaze of a man who has lived the simple life in the open—and with so little affinity to the eyes of the world-wise, that she found herself incapable of carrying out her intentions.

One night when the men had arranged to have another dance, Pen paid unusual attention to her dress. She came downstairs, a slight little figure in a soft-flower-sprigged, old-fashioned muslin (designed originally for bedroom windows and donated by Mrs. Kingdon), her hair softly brought to the crown of her head, with little curling rings about her brow. A freshness like the first faint fragrance of young spring seemed to hover about her. Kurt surveyed her with a look akin to adoration. Then his eyes dropped.

"Don't dance with the boys tonight," he said abruptly.

"I must play the ingenue part for which I am costumed," she thought.

"Mrs. Kingdon told me," she said, gently, "that the boys had so few opportunities for partners, I must divide my dances equally."

"There's a party of tourists—teachers—at Westcott's. I've asked them over. The boys can dance with them."

"Well," she assented, graciously, "I'll just dance with Betty and Francis and Billy"——

"And me," he finished.

"Thank you. I didn't know that you danced."

In the dance hall she looked eagerly about, hoping that Jo might have been invited, but she was disappointed.

"I am not dancing," she thought, when Kurt was guiding her over the floor. "I am just being deliciously carried about. It's very restful, but not exhilarating. Oh, Jo, where art thou? It was like drinking champagne to dance with you, but I suppose continuous champagne is bad for one."

Later that night when she was taking off her dancing slippers her thoughts were still of the man with whom she had danced so many times.

"He's kind and good and strong—a suppressed strength. He looks passion proof, but if he ever falls in love! And what a triumph for a thief to capture an adamantine heart! But I don't want that kind—nor any kind."

Down in the bunkhouse Kurt was recalling the feel of her little hand that had left a trail like fire upon his arm and had filled him with a sensation of ecstasy. A new divine sweetness seemed born into the air. He looked out of his window up into a star-flecked sky and renewed his old vow of allegiance to The Woman.

CHAPTER VII.

THE next day Francis carried out his cherished intention of being a "bit bad," and in violation of orders, surreptitiously mounted a "real horse" instead of his well-behaved little pony, and set out on adventure bound.

The horse, surprised at his burden, cantered casually along at first; then, resenting the intrusion, began to toss his head, snort and curvet about. The lad, a little frightened, but game, kept his seat and the horse, seemingly ashamed to trifle longer with so small a foe, resumed his easy canter, though at a swifter pace than Francis was wont to ride. All might have ended well, had not Kurt in his home-made car suddenly sounded a blatant horn as he came around a curve. To his vision was disclosed a plunging horse and a small, fair-haired atom of a boy clinging to his neck. There was a forward plunge and the horse thundered on, like mad along a narrow slant of road, with never a slackening of speed.

Kurt cranked up for pursuit, but his crude craft was not built on speed lines, and he saw the distance fast eaten up between him and the frenzied horse. Then, with tiger swiftness, Kingdon's car, a motor of make, passed him, Gene at the wheel, Pen beside him. The sight gave him no hope. They could doubtless overtake the horse, but they could not stop him, and if they could, the boy would be thrown.

Pen's clear young voice came like a clarion call:

"Stick tight, Francis! Burr-tight! We'll get you, all right."

Gene steered the car to the cliff side of the road to prevent the peril of a plunge by the horse.

When the long, low racing car was nearly up to the Mazeppa flier, a thrill ran through Kurt as he saw Pen step out on the running board. He forgot the boy's danger as he divined her purpose.

The car closed in on the horse. The girl leaned far out, snatched the boy from the horse and climbed back into the car, which now slowed up.

It was done in a second, so swiftly, so aptly, that Kurt could only sit and gape with the sort of foreknowledge that it must come out all right, as one gazes at a thrilling scene in a motion picture. When he came alongside the car, Gene looked up with a challenging grin. Francis, though pale and breathing quickly, wore a triumphant look. Pen's expression was entirely normal.

Kurt tried to speak, but his voice was dry in his throat.

"I stuck on, didn't I?" clamored Francis, in satisfied tone.

Then Kurt recovered and began to reprimand the lad, but a certain sparkle in Pen's eyes as she clasped the lad to her restrained him.

He turned upon Gene.

"Did you know she was going to do that?"

"Sure!" was the confident reply. "I knew she could do it."

He flung Kingdon's racer into motion and slid on down the white ribbon of road to the ranch, while Kurt's little machine rattled and creaked and jolted along.

"He'll be sore at coming in after the black flag," chuckled Gene. "Kurt ain't used to being second, but I don't often get a chance at this car."

Kurt didn't come up to the house all that day until long after the dinner hour. He found Pen alone in the invitingly furnished sitting room, the amber light from a shaded lamp bringing out the gleaming gold in her hair.

She looked up with a shy smile of welcome, and instantly he felt the charm a woman could bring to a room like this—a room full of rest and harmony—a haven to a man wearied from the day's work.

"Where are they all?" he asked presently.

"Francis was tired and repentant after the excitement wore off and was quite ready to go to bed early. Billy and Betty followed suit. Mrs. Merlin has a headache."

"How did you come to be riding with Gene this morning?" he asked abruptly.

"Mrs. Merlin asked us to go to her cottage for some things she needed. She thought Gene wouldn't be able to find them."

The natural tone of her reply and her utter lack of surprise or resentment at his question quite appeased him.

"It's a little cool tonight," he said, suddenly. "Wouldn't you like to have a fire?"

She thought it would be nice, and interestedly watched him build one in the big fireplace.

He formed a fortress of logs with the usual huge one for a background. When he had a fire to his liking he came and sat beside her.

"That was wonderful—what you did this morning," he said, abruptly.

"No; it was simply instinctive."

"It was a hair-breadth thing to do, but very brave."

"It wasn't bravery," she denied after a moment's reflection. "It was—I can't tell you just what it was."

"It made me bless the fate that led me to you that day."

"Then," she said, lightly, but coloring confusedly, "I am glad I was able to do it—to repay you and Mrs. Kingdon in part. But where have you been all day?"

"I have been down in the farthest field."

"Working?"

"Yes; and thinking. Thinking of you—and what you did."

"Where did you have your dinner?"

"I have had none. I am only just aware that I would like some. I came through the kitchen on my way in, but the cook didn't seem to be about."

"They are having some sort of entertainment in the mess hall."

"I am glad you didn't go," he said impetuously.

"I thought you would rather I didn't go," she replied, docilely. "I will try to find you something to eat. Will you come and help me? Cook says you are a champion coffee maker."

They went through the kitchen into a smaller room.

"Betty calls this the 'kitchen yet!' But can you cook?" said Kurt.

"I am glad I won't be called upon to prove it. The larder's well larded, and I will set this little table while you make the coffee."

By the time the coffee was made, she had set forth an inviting little supper. She sat opposite him and poured the coffee. It seemed to him some way that it was the coziest meal he had eaten since his home days—the early home days, before his mother died and he had gone to the prudish aunt.

We must leave things as we found them," she told him when they could no longer make excuse for lingering.

"I feel in a very domestic mood," he said, as he wiped the few dishes.

"Do you know, I have a very hearthy feeling myself. I know why a cat purrs. Everything is shipshape now. I'll say good-night, and"——

"Come back to the fire," he entreated. "I want to smoke."

Back in the library Pen made herself comfortable on one of the window seats, pulling up the shade to let the moonlight stream in.

He followed and sat beside her, watching in silence the pensive young profile, the straight little features, the parted lips, as she gazed away over the moonlit hills. He felt a strange yearning tenderness.

"Pen!"

She turned, a sweet, alluring look in her eyes.

"Pen!" he said again.

"Yes—Kurt."

Some alien, inexplicable force seemed to battle with his nature. His lips quivered and then compressed as if in a mighty resolution.

A moment later she slid from the window seat to the floor.

"It is late; good-night!" she said, quietly.

He rose, took her hand in his and said earnestly:

"Good-night, Pen. I wish"——

Again he stopped abruptly.

"I know what you wish," she said in a matter of fact way; "you are wishing that I had never been—a thief."

"Good-night," she repeated, as she quickly sped from the room, leaving him speechless.

"Kurt," she soliloquized, "you've been weighed and found wanting. You don't know what love is. No man does. It is a woman's kingdom."

Then a radiant smile drove the reflective shadows from her eyes. There had burst forth a whistle, clear, keen, inspiring. Only one person in her world was so lark-like, so jubilant, so joyous of nature as to improvise such a trilling melody.

With an expectant smile she looked out and saw Jo crossing the moonlit lawn.

"Halloa, Jo!" she called, softly.

He looked up, extended his cap at arm's length with a gay flourish and called:

"Bless your little heart of honey! What are you doing up so late?"

"Is it late?" she asked in arch surprise. "I'm so sorry, for I was going to say I'd come down for a little walk with you."

"'Deed, it's never too late for that; but say, little Penny Ante, Kurt is sitting in the library window"——

She picked up her sweater from the window seat and threw it down to him, stepped nimbly over the railing of the little balcony, made a quick spring, caught the branch of a nearby tree and slid down to earth.

"Say, you little squirrel! You'd made some sailor. It's hungry I've been for sight of you. I met Gene in town this afternoon and he told me about the wonderful stunt you pulled off this morning for Francis."

"That was nothing. But—have you come back, Jo?"

"Not yet. I'm motoring in from town and left my car down in the road. I just thought I'd pass by your window and let out a whistle for you."

"Jo, I came down to say something serious"——

"You can say anything you like to me, Miss Penny Ante," he replied, encouragingly.

"Come away where no one can overhear our voices."

They strolled away out of the moonlight to the shelter of some shrubbery where they talked long and earnestly. On the way back to the house, Pen, lifting her eyes to his, was struck by the look in his boyish face.

"Jo," she said, a slight wistfulnes in her tone, "you really love—the way a woman loves."

"What's the use," he said, defiantly, "if the one I love won't have me—she"——

He stopped short and looked at her keenly.

"You know, Jo, you must learn to be patient and await—developments."

A light leaped to his eyes.

"I'll wait! But the limit mustn't be too far. Do you know what Gene confided to me tonight? He thinks that Kurt is in love with you!"

She laughed mirthlessly.

"Kurt! He wouldn't know how to love. If he did, he wouldn't let himself. He would hang on to his love like a Jew to a bargain. Who would want a grudging lover?"

"Kurt is my pal—he"——

"He won't be if he finds us lingering here. You reconnoiter and see if he is still in the window. I don't intend to shinny up this tree. It's much easier going down than up."

BART HARRINGTON, GENIUS

By ELIZABETH JORDAN

THE assistant Sunday editor of the New York Searchlight was busy. This was not an unusual condition, but it frequently included irritating features. His superior, Wilson, the Sunday editor, was a gentleman with a high brow and a large salary, who, having won a reputation as "a Napoleon of journalism," had successfully cultivated a distaste for what he called "details."

Wilson's specialty was the making of suggestions in editorial council, in cheery expectation that they would be carried out by his associates—an expectation so rarely realized that Mr. Wilson's visage had almost a habit of hurt wonder. "Details" continued to absorb the activity of the Sunday Searchlight office, and Maxwell, the assistant editor, attended to them all, murmuring bitterly against his chief as he labored.

On this special morning, moreover, he was receiving telephoned bulletins of the gradual disintegration of his biggest "special," scheduled for the coming Sunday edition, which was to tell with sympathetic amplitude of a beautiful French maiden who had drowned herself because some young man no longer loved her. The active reporter assigned to the case had telephoned first his discovery that the girl never had a lover, but cheerily suggested that this explained her suicide as well as the earlier theory, and wasn't so hackneyed, sagely adding that he would get the story anyhow. Subsequently he had rung up the office to report, with no slight disgust, that there was no suicide to explain, as the girl was not dead. She had merely gone to visit friends in the country, and the people in the house, missing her, had decided that the peaceful waters of the Hudson——

Maxwell hung up the receiver with a few crisp remarks addressed to space, and absorbed in awestruck silence by a young woman at the other end of the room who eased her typewriting labor by pausing to hear them fully. It was at this inauspicious moment that the card of Mr. Bart Harrington was brought in by an office boy. Maxwell surveyed it with strong disfavor.

"Who is he?" he asked, regarding the office boy severely.

The office boy vowed deprecatingly that he didn't know.

"He ain't never been here before," he submitted in extenuation. "He says he's got a Sunday story."

Maxwell resigned himself to the waste of five minutes of precious time.

"Show 'im in!" he commanded, testily.

He sat down at his desk and turned toward the door an expression that reminded callers of the value of time and the brevity of life. Mr. Harrington, who had followed the boy through the door with conviction of these two things, dropped into a chair beside the editor's desk and surveyed Maxwell with a smile so young, so trustful and withal so engaging, that unconsciously the stern features of that functionary relaxed. Nevertheless, he was not jarred out of his routine.

"Got your story with you, Mr. Harrington?" he asked, briskly, holding out his hand for the manuscript. "If you'll leave it, I'll read"——

Harrington interrupted bim with an impressive shake of the head. Then he settled back in his chair, crossed one leg comfortably over the other, plunged his hands deep in the pockets of his very shabby overcoat, and continued to regard the editor with his singularly boyish, dimpling smile. With one swift glance Maxwell took him in, from the broken boot on the foot he was gently swinging to and fro to the thick, curly locks on his handsome head. He had a complexion like a girl's, a dimple in each cheek, and a jaw like a bulldog's. He was all of six feet tall, and his badly made clothes could not wholly conceal the perfect lines of his figure. He was about 22 years old, Maxwell decided, and, notwithstanding his dimples, his complexion, his youth and his smile, he conveyed a vivid impression of masculinity and strength. He was wholly self-possessed, and his manner suggested that the business which had brought him there was of such urgent value and importance that the busy world itself might well hush its noisy activities long enough to hear of it. To his own great surprise, Maxwell waited until the caller was prepared to speak.

"I have it heah," he said, slowly, referring evidently to the brow he had indicated, and speaking with a slight drawl and the strongly marked accent of the Southern mountaineer. "I 'lowed I wouldn't write it till I knew you-all wanted it. I'd like to tell it. Then if"——

Maxwell nodded and glanced at his watch.

"Fire away," he said, elegantly. "But be as quick as you can, please. This is closing day and every minute counts."

Harrington smiled his ingenious smile. It was a wistful smile—not a happy one—but it seemed, somehiw, to illumine the office. Maxwell reflected irritably that there was something unusually likable about the fellow, but he wished he'd hurry up and get out. From force of habit his fingers grasped a blue pencil on his desk, and he began to fumble nervously among the manuscripts that lay before him. Harrington settled back more firmly in his chair, and the swinging of his torn boot was accelerated a trifle, but his voice when he spoke was full of quiet confidence.

"It's a good thing, suh," he said, "and I can tell you-all about it in a sentence. "I'm goin' to commit suicide today an' I agree to write the experience foh you up to the last minute, of you-all will have me buried decently. I don't cayah to be shoveled into the pottah's field."

Maxwell dropped the blue pencil and wheeled to look at him. Then his face hardened.

"It's a pretty bad joke," he said, "or a bum sort of bid for charity. In either case you can't waste any more of my"——

"Damn you!" he hissed, thrusting his head down close to the other's and clinching his fists. "How dahe you-all say I lie o' ask charity? I'd see you-all in hell befoah I'd take a cent of youah damned money. Ain't you got brains enough in youah haid to see that I've got to the end of mah rope?"

Maxwell was a clever man, educated in the world's university. He knew truth when he met it, and he knew human nature.

"Sit down," he said, quietly, "and tell me about it. I'm sorry I spoke as I did, but you must admit that your proposition was rather startling."

Harrington sat down, still breathing hard in his excitement, but evidently making a resolute effort to control himself.

"That's why I brought it heah," he said, answering the other's last words. "You-all like stahtlin' things, don't you? That's what you print. I'm offerin' you a straight bahgain, suh—a business proposition. If you-all don't want it, say so."

Maxwell smiled in his turn, but there was nothing ironic in the smile nor in the look he turned on his fellow man.

"It's not quite as simple as you seem to think," he explained, gently. "But tell me more about it. What led you to this decision? What makes you think suicide is the only way out of your troubles? That's a part of the story, you know. Let me have that first, in a few words."

"It can be told, suh, in three," said the Southerner. His smile had returned. His voice was the cool voice of one who discussed abstract things. "I'm a failyuh. This wo'ld ain't no place foh failyuh's. I've given myself all the time and chances I dese'ved, but I cayn't win out, so I've got to git out. They's no one to ca'e. I've no kin, no one dependin' on me in any way. As foh me, I'm ti'ed; life ain't wuth the effo't."

Maxwell regarded him.

"You don't look like a quitter," he said.

The boy's face blazed again, but he kept his temper.

"To quit means to give somethin' up," he said, doggedly. "I ain't givin' anythin' up. I ain't got anythin' to give up. Life without wo'k, o' interest, o' friends, o' ambition, o' love—that ain't livin'! If you-all evah tried it, you'd know. I ain't been so chee'fil in yeahs as I've been sence I made up my mind to 'quit,' as you-all call it."

"You've got health, haven't you?" demanded Maxwell.

"Yes."

Maxwell brought his hand down on the desk with an air of finality.

"Then you've got everything. Do you mean to tell me that a fellow like you can't earn enough to support himself? If you do, you're talking rot."

Harrington took this with a wide, guileless grin. He was not offended now, for he felt the friendly interest and sympathy under the other's words. His voice when he replied was gentler.

"I ain't sayin' I can't keep body an' soul together, foh maybe I can," he conceded. "But I'm sayin' that ain't life. I'm saying I ain't been fitted fo' wo'k. I ain't been educated. I've lived in a log cabin down in the Virginia mountains all mah life. I left thah six weeks ago, after mah mother died. She was the last of ouah family but me. I ain't never been to school. She taught me to read in the Bible, an' to write.

"I ain't nevah read anotheh book except the Bible and Mistah Shakspeah's poems, and Mistah Pluta'ch's 'Lives of Great Men.' I know them by hea't. I don't know whe' she got them o' whe' she came from. She was different from othah mountain women. I've been No'th six weeks, and I've tried ha'd to find a place whah I could fit in, but th' ain't none. Men must be trained foh wo'k; I ain't trained. I cayn't go back, foh the's no one thah, an' I hate the mountains."

Maxwell's reply was brief and to the point.

"Think you could learn to run our elevator without killing us all?" he inquired. "Well, you've got to. You've been talking awful guff, you know. Now you're going to work right here. We need a new man. The one we have has been drunk three days. You're going to run the elevator and get $15 a week to begin with. Here's your first week's salary in advance. I'll arrange about the job with the superintendent. I'll give you some books and you can educate yourself. When you're above elevator work we'll give you something better. You'll probably have my job inside of a year," he ended, jocosely.

The hand of the mountaineer, stretched out to him, trembled as Maxwell grasped it.

"You ah the only white man I've found in the No'th," said the Southerner, breathlessly. "I'll make good, as they say up heah. But I don't know how I can thank you."

"Don't try," said Maxwell, brusquely. "Be here at 8 in the morning. By 9 there will be a few callers I may want you to throw down the shaft."

Thus began the connection between the Searchlight and Bart Harrington, subsequently its most popular employe. Before the week was over all the reporters and most of the editors had casually sought from Maxwell some details concerning his protege, but had received few. Harrington was a new man, and he came from the Virgina mountains, and was most obliging and altogether engaging. This was all the information acquired even by the indefatigable Miss Mollie Merk, whose success in extracting from individuals information it was their dearest desire to conceal had made her a star member of the Searchlight's staff. It was to Miss Merk, however, that Harrington announced his first important discovery. Leaning across her desk one evening after his successor had taken the "car," the new elevator man touched a subject much upon his mind.

"I got wet the othah day," he began, conversationally, "an' mah landlady let me go to the kitchen to dry mah clothes. I obse'ved as I sat by huh stove that the lid of the wash boilah kept liftin' up, all by itself, an' then I saw 'twas raised by the steam of the hot watah inside. I kep' thinkin' 'bout it, an' it seems to me thah's an idea thah, a soht of ene'gy, you know, that might be used in big ways. I mus' think it out."

"You object to all of my names. But this one was Betty's fault. She introduced me as 'Aunty Penny,' and, of course, they put it backward."

"Who do they think you are?"

"Your 'lady friend,' here for a visit," she answered with the little giggle that always offended him. Then, appeasingly: "Mrs. Kingdon said it would be better if only you and she knew who I am and why I am here at the ranch."

"Go back to the house," he directed. "I'll be home in a few days."

Obediently, she turned her horse and he rode in the opposite direction.

"Kurt—Mr. Walters!" she called, entreatingly.

He turned in his saddle and waited until she rode back to him.

"There is something I want to tell you," she said, her eyes downcast, a faint note of exultation in her voice. "I haven't taken a thing—or tried to—or wanted to—since I've been here, and I've had lots of chances."

Receiving no reply, she looked up pleadingly, and was startled at the transformation in his eyes, which were usually narrow, cold and of steel-gray shade, but now they were dark, shining and full of infinite pity as they looked down into hers.

"I am glad to hear it," he said, gently. "You know that was why I brought you here. Now, you must do more for me. You mustn't mingle with the men, or repeat today's program. I want you to be like her—a house woman. Good-by—until I come home."

He rode swiftly away, and she laughed softly to herself, stopping suddenly.

"It isn't so funny, after all; it's really pathetic. But—a house woman! Ye Gods! That is the last thing I want to be—or could be! It's all well for a novelty, but for steady diet—oh me! If Hebby could have heard the law laid down to me he'd be overcome with glee. Poor old Heb! I'll bet he is still frothing at the mouth because I gave him such a neat slip. I seem, however, to have only succeeded in changing keepers.

She rode on, her conscience smiting her now and then when she recalled the look in Kurt's eyes.

"I don't deserve pity from him or anyone," she thought a little sadly.

She made no mention at Top Hill of having met the foreman. Notwithstanding his orders, for three days she reveled in the companionship of Jo and the men.

"We must harvest all the hay we can," she told him, "while Kind Kurt is away."

On the evening of the third day, she found herself watching the hill road from town.

"I feel like Sister Anne," she thought. "It's odd, why I am wanting him to return, for when he does, my fun will be nipped in the bud. It may be the feeling of a dog for its master that I have acquired for my Sheriff man. Jo will be going soon to Westcott's. I think I will play up to Kind Kurt and then tell him what I revealed to Mrs. Kingdon. Wow!"

She turned from the window to hear the message Kingdon had just received from the telegraph office in town. An old-time friend had asked him to join a party of men at a ranch a hundred miles distant. His wife urged him to follow his apparent inclination.

"It'll do you good, Louis, to see more of your kind again."

"I wouldn't consider it if you didn't have such good company," he said, with a whimsical smile in Pen's direction.

The following morning, Jo drove Mrs. Kingdon, Pen and the children to town to see Kingdon off. When his train had pulled out, they went to the postoffice and Francis was sent in for the mail.

"A letter for you, mother," he said, running up to the car. "It's Aunt Helen's writing."

An anxious look came into Margaret Kingdon's eyes as she read.

"Doris is ill, and my sister wants me to come to her," she explained to Pen. "She is quite helpless in a sick room and Doris asks for me. There is a train east in an hour and you can send my luggage on to me. I'll return as soon as Doris is convalescent."

"I will do all I can to help with the children," promised Pen.

"I know you will. And Jo can stop at Mrs. Merlin's and take her to Top Hill. She always presides in my absence. She is a good housekeeper and is never disagreeable or officious."

"Jo says Mrs. Merlin shinnies on her own side," added Billy.

"Jo is right," replied his mother.

"You must tell Kurt, you know," she cautioned.

Pen looked plaintive, but the conductor's "all aboard" call ended the conversation.

"We'll say our prayers and our lessons like mother told us," said Francis as they motored home, "but, of course, we can't be too good all the time. I am going to ride a horse, a real horse—not a pony."

"I am going to sit up late nights," declared Billy.

"And I shall wear your clothes and play I am a boy," Betty informed him.

"Well," thought Pen, "after all these declarations of independence, I feel I must get in the forbidden fruit game, too. I know what I'll do. I'll not tell Kurt—not right away, at least."

Half way to the ranch they stopped at Mrs. Merlin's cottage.

"She certainly looks the part of propriety to perfection," thought Pen, as she surveyed the tall, angular, spectacled woman, who came to the car, and whose grim features relaxed slightly after a keen glance at the young girl.

"I'll have four children this time instead of three," she said.

"What would she think," reflected Pen, "if Kind Kurt should tell her what kind of a child the fourth one is!"

Back at Top Hill, Pen packed the luggage to be expressed to Mrs. Kingdon, and Jo made another trip to town, planning to go from there to Westcott's.

At dinner time Kurt arrived, and Pen chuckled as she easily read his dismay at the situation.

"He's foreseeing and dreading all sorts of terrible things I may do or am capable of doing. Just because he is looking for trouble, I have no desire to give it. I'll play a new role and show him what a tame, good little girl I can be; maybe I'll like being one and it'll turn out to be a real reform. It would be awfully odd if he found his pedalled ideal in The Thief!"

She was conscious of his searching eyes upon her. She looked demurely down. In a soft, subdued voice she read little stories to the children, and when their bedtime hour came, she went upstairs with them.

Later she joined him on the library veranda, where he was smoking his pipe, for it was one of the few nights when it was warm enough for such indulgence.

She went up to him unfalteringly.

"I have put myself on honor while Mrs. Kingdon is away," she said, gravely. "I will try hard to do as you want me to do, but it will be easier for me if you will trust me."

Her eyes looked out so very straight, with none of the worldly wisdom he had seen in them the day she had been transferred to his guardianship, that he found himself incapable of harboring any further doubt of her sincerity.

"I will," he said, stanchly; "I will trust you as she does."

They sat together in the moonlight without further converse, and in the reposeful silence a mutual understanding was born.

Presently she went inside and played some old-time airs on the piano with the caressing, lingering touch of those who play by ear.

"Where did you learn to play?" he asked, wonderingly.

She looked up, slightly startled. She hadn't heard him come in and her thoughts had been far away from Top Hill.

"I never learned," she said, rising from the piano. "I play by ear. I see it is late. I must go upstairs. Good-night, Mr. Walters."

"Good-night, Pen," he said, kindly.

He returned to the porch and pipe and lost himself in a haze of dreams—such dreams as had been wont to come to him in his younger days, when he had been a cow puncher pure and simple. Gathered about a roaring camp fire that lighted up the rough and boisterous faces of his companions, he had seemed as one of them, but later when they had gone to a well-earned slumber and it had been his turn to guard the long lines of cattle in the cool of the cottonwoods, he had used to gaze into the mysteries of a desert moon slowly drifting through a cerulean sky and dream a boy's dream of the woman who was to come to him.

As he grew older and came more into contact with the world, he was brought to an overwhelming realization that the woman of his dreams did not exist. The knowledge made an ache in his heart, but tonight he was again longing with the primary instinct that would not be killed—longing for the One.

Pen went to bed and to sleep. The next day she was a perfect model of a young housewife. She helped the children with their little lessons, filled all the vases, trained some vines, and then, with some needlework, went out on the veranda. At the table she listened and responded interestedly to Mrs. Merlin's bromidic remarks, was gentle with the children and most flatteringly deferential to Kurt. Of her former banter and coquetry toward him there was no trace. After the children had gone to bed, she played cribbage with Mrs. Merlin while Kurt read the papers.

When she was undressing that night she examined her shoulders in the mirror very closely.

"There should be little wings sprouting. I was never even make-believe good before. The relapse will be a winner when it comes. If I could only steady down to something like a normal life. But I never shall."

She was standing pensively by a rosebush the next morning feeling appallingly weary of well-doing when Kurt in his riding clothes suddenly appeared before her.

"Would you like to ride this morning?" he asked. "Work is slack just now."

With a rush of joy she got into her boyish looking outfit and mounted the horse he had chosen for her, a thoroughbred animal, but one far different from those she had tried out on field day. She was very careful not to try to outride the foreman, or to perform any of her marvels of horsemanship. They had a long, exhilarating ride over the foothills, and she felt the blood leaping again in her arteries at the turning from the comfortable channels of house life into the lure of the open.

"I was never meant for indoors," she thought. "I think I can stand it up here a while longer if he'll give me more of this exercise."

That night as they sat in the library alone, he lost his habitual reticence and talked—through her guidance—of himself and his life.

"Does it satisfy you always?" she asked. "Wouldn't you like the power of ruling fates and fortunes in a city way?"

"No," he replied, almost fiercely. "When a man has circled the herd and risen in his stirrups to throw a lariat and watched through the night by the light of camp fires, nothing else calls to him quite the same way. I couldn't endure to live a bottled-up life—the life of cities. Men of my kind are branded; they may wander, but they always come back. After you once get on in-

Bart Harrington, Genius (Continued)

"There's a good deal written about steam," she said, sympathetically. "I'll bring you a book on it."

She did, for Harrington was already high in her regard; and quite possibly the volume killed in that youth's aspiring soul the germ of a beautiful hope. But he was to the fore very soon with a discovery of equal weight. This time his confident was Maxwell.

"Why is it," he asked that busy citizen one evening, "that when I get in the bathtub the water rises highah? Ain't th' some principle th' that is impo'tant? As I think it ovah"——

Maxwell hurriedly assured him that there was, and the volume on steam was followed by a treatise on specific gravity, which gave Mr. Harrington food for reflection for several days. Nevertheless, the discovery that others had been before him did not depress him in the least. He gave the Sunday editor an insight into his views on one occasion when that gentleman was able to convince him that Isaac Newton and not Bart Harrington had discovered the law of gravitation while watching an apple fall from a tree.

"I obse'ved it, too, suh," argued Harrington, sturdily, defending his position as a scientific discoverer. "Of co'se, I see the fo'ce of youa'h rema'k that the otha man was first. That is unfo'tunate foh me. But does that affect the value of my discovery? It does not, suh."

"There's a good deal in it," Wilson conceded to Maxwell, after he had delightedly repeated this conversation. "Of course, the fellow has an unusual mind. It's a pity he's always a few hundred years behind the time, but, as he hints, that needn't dim our admiration for the quality of his brain fiber." Maxwell laughed uneasily.

"I can't make up my mind," he admitted, in his turn "whether he's a genius or a plain fool. He lost his dinner last night explaining to me how the power of Niagara could be applied to practical uses. He was horribly depressed when I told him it not only could be, but was. I let him talk, though, to see what his ideas were, and they were very practical."

"I call that mighty encouraging," said the chief, optimistically. "He's getting down to modern times. After he has discovered the telephone and telegraph and cable and wireless telegraphy, he may tackle telepathy and give us something new."

But Harrington indulged in an unexplained digression at this point. He discovered literature and became acquainted with the works of one Charles Dickens, of whose genius he made himself the sounding trumpet-call for the ears of an indifferent world.

"The's a book called 'David Coppe'field,' " he confided to Maxwell one night when he had lingered for a chat with his benefactor. "It's great, suh. You should read it sometime, Mistah Maxwell; yo ould appreciate its wo'th."

He outlined the plot then and there, and Maxwell good-naturedly listened, finding his compensation in the enthusiast's original comments on character and situation. This, however, established a bad precedent, and Maxwell was subsequently obliged to hear a careful synopsis of "Little Dorrit," "Old Curiosity Shop" and "Oliver Twist" in quick succession, followed by the somewhat painful recitation of most of Gray's "Elegy in a Country Churchyard"—for Harrington was now entering the daisied field of poetry.

It was at this point that Maxwell felt himself constrained to give his protege a few words of advice, the city editor having objected to an enforced hearing of the plot of "Ivanhoe" and Mollie Merk having admitted that she had climbed six flights of stairs twice a day for a week in preference to hearing the final 18 stanzas of "Paradise Lost."

Maxwell explained the situation to his friend as gently as he could one morning when Harrington had interrupted a talk between himself and a distinguished Western editor who was spending a few days in New York.

"You see, old man," he ended, kindly, "this is a big, new world to you, but the rest of us have been living in it all our lives. We've taken in these things you're discovering—or we've had them driven into us at school. So—er—they're not new, and while we appreciate them, we haven't got time to go over them all again. When you get up to modern fiction—the things people are reading today"——

With one expressive gesture of the hand Mr. Harrington demolished modern fiction.

"I ain't got time foh that, Mistah Maxwell," he said, respectfully. "I read one, and I regret to say, suh, that it was too much. I have looked into othe's, but I go no fu'thah. I have tried to open to you gentlemen the great wo'ks I have discove'ed, an' youah reply is that you-all have read them, suh. I am surprised. Do you give one glance at a picture an' neveh look again? Do you listen once to music, o' must it be something new and mode'n ev'ry time? Last night I heard the composition of a musician named Beethoven, who, I have learned, has been dead foh years. Yet people still listen to his notes. Why don't they read these boo s of Mistah Dickens and Mistah Scott and Mistah Shakspeah?"

Maxwell murmured feebly that a few did. A fitting response to Harrington's arraignment somehow eluded him, and before he had found the words he wanted an unexpected interruption came from the Western editor, who had been listening to the conversation with almost painful interest.

"Mr. Harrington," he asked, abruptly, "can you write?"

Harrington looked surprised and boyishly injured.

"Yes, suh," he replied, stiffly. "I can read and write."

"Oh, of course," explained the other, hastily. "I don't mean that. Can you write for the press? Have you tried to write anything for other people to read?"

Harrington's characteristic smile flashed forth.

"I have submitted sev'al ahticles to Mistah Maxwell," he said, with some dignity, "but thus fah I have not been fo'tunate enough"——

Maxwell drew a little package of manuscripts from a pigeonhole in his desk and handed them to the visitor without a word. They spoke for themselves. The latter glanced through them, frowning. Maxwell returned to his work. Harrington waited. At last the Westerner handed the paper back to his Eastern colleague, shaking his head as he did so.

"These won't do at all," he said, decidedly, "but they confirm my impression that this man can write something worth while." He addressed himself to Maxwell now, discussing Harrington as impersonally as if he were absent, but from time to time his keen eyes returned to the Southerner's face.

"Here's a man," he began, didactically, "who is hundreds of years behind the time. But please remember that he would have been Watts, Newton and several other discoverers if he had existed before them. He's as much of a pilgrim on this earth today as if he were a visitor from another planet. But he has an extraordinary type of mind and very good taste—a strong, ignorant, instinctive feeling for the best.

"If he would write a series of short articles giving his point of view to the busy men and women of today, they should be 'good stuff'—a sort of artistic voice crying in the commercial wilderness, don't you see. You or someone else may have to put them into shape, until he catches the idea, but he will catch it all right. He's clever enough. If you want to try him, and it turns out as I think it will, I'll buy the material for simultaneous publication in St. Louis. What do you say?"

"Agreed," said Maxwell, briefly. "I think you're right. We'll try it anyhow. I guess we won't have much trouble persuading Harrington to favor us with the opportunity of examining his manuscript."

He smiled as he glanced at the other. Harrington's eyes were shining. His words, when he spoke, came breathlessly.

"I'll have the first copy ready in the mo'ning, Mistah Maxwell," he promised. "And I reckon," he added, straightening his splendid shoulders—"I reckon I'll give up the elevatah, suh."

Maxwell laughed in his good humor.

"Oh, yes," he agreed, "I guess we'll have to give you a successor there, in any event. However this experiment turns out, it's time you had something better than that."

Harrington's first paper was signed "A Visitor From Mars," and Maxwell marveled as he read it. It was not a great production, and it was full of small faults; but there was an indescribable naivete and charm about it to which its quaint, old-time style added the final touch. Harrington's studies of what he called "the olden masters" had not been in vain.

Late the next evening, in the peace of his Harlem flat, Maxwell submitted the manuscript to his wife for criticism. He passed it over without comment, desiring the unprejudiced opinion of the intelligent general reader, and Mrs. Maxwell read it twice, very carefully, before she handed it back. When she did there was a mist over her bright brown eyes.

"The darling thing!" she cried. "Who wrote it, Bob? It's as clever as it can be, and yet there's something about it that makes me feel queer and choky. It's—it's"—her face brightened—"it's something like the feeling I had when little Bobbie wrote me his first letter, that time I went home to take care of mother. One almost expects to see the words staggering down one side of the page in dear little, crooked, printed letters. It's the manuscript of a grownup, sophisticated baby."

Maxwell took the copy from her, well pleased at this conjugal confirmation of his own impression.

"It's Harrington's," he explained, "and he's not sophisticated enough to hurt anybody yet. But he's going to make a success of this job—there's no doubt of that. I'll ask him to come up to dinner tomorrow night and go over the stuff with me a bit. I don't want to do it in the office.

The St. Louis editor was equally enthusiastic the following day. He was also glowing pleasantly in the confirmation of his own keenness of intuition.

"You wouldn't have seen what you had here," he explained to Maxwell, unnecessarily. "This is pretty much like genius. This fellow will be writing his autobiography some day, and perhaps he'll remember his humble discoverers. Meantime, don't you spoil this work by trying to edit it. Let it alone. It's al right."

The column of "The Visitor From Mars" grew to tw columns, and became a strong feature of the Sund Searchlight. Harrington, now in possession of a f weekly income and unlimited leisure, bought n clothes, rented a sitting room, bedroom and bath i comfortable bachelor apartment house and spent days browsing in libraries, where he read omniv ously. Incidentally he discovered not only the te phone, telegraph and other inventions predicted by t Sunday editors, but a locomotive firebox which had received some favor among railroad officials for 10 year, and a superb gun which had been used in the American army for six.

"He's getting on!" cried Wilson, delightedly, when Maxwell recounted these small disappointments in an otherwise inspiring onward career. "He's learned to dress like a gentleman, speak like a gentleman and look like a gentleman, and he has also learned that there have been a few active minds in the world before his came. Give him time. He'll do something big yet."

Harrington promptly verified this prediction by falling in love, which he did on a scale and with an abandon unprecedented in the history of Park Row. It was a tempestuous upheaval for the emotional Southerner, and every other interest in life retired to the remotest background and remained there, unseen and unsuspected.

His choice fell on a woman reporter of the Searchlight, a quiet, refined young girl, whose journalistic activities were confined to reports of meetings of women's clubs and the descriptions of other social events. For her Bart Harrington commanded the morning stars to sing together, and dared the dazzling sun to look upon her like. To him she was Laura, Beatrice, Juliet, Francesca—the essence of all the loves of all the ages in one perfect form.

During their brief engagement he called for her in a cab each morning and drove her to her home each night. He would have laid a carpet of flowers for her from the office to the curb had it been practicable. Also, he discovered Keats and Shelley and Byron and Swinburne, and quoted them until the office boys, who alone remained to listen to him, demanded that increase of salary justly attached to increased nervous strain.

Swinburne, Harrington promptly decided, he did not like. There was an earthiness in his verse, he explained to Maxwell, a material side, wholly lacking in the love of the right man for the right woman—in other words, in his own love for Miss Evans. He wrote a column about this kind of love in his Mars department, and a hundred thousand men read it with gurgles of warm appreciation and quoted it at dinner the next night.

Then he married Miss Evans and became interested in the price of coal and other household supplies. His absorption in these topics was almost feverish. He talked about them morning, noon and night. His interest in literature flickered and died out. To Maxwell, his first and still his best friend, he finally confided his dilemma.

"You see, old man," he began, one morning about six months after the wedding, "we've discovered, Clara and I, that the least we can live on in New York is $50 a week. And you see, I'm only getting 40. It's serious, isn't it? But Clara says that if we buy all ouah canned goods at Lacy's"——

Maxwell stopped him with a gesture of desperation.

"Harrington, if you say another word I shall go crazy," he announced, with the calmness of despair. "We'll give you $50 a week. Now consider that settled, and for God's sake get your mind off it. If you don't look out you'll be writing about coal and canned goods in your Mars column. What are you going to write this week, anyhow?" he demanded with sudden suspicion.

Harrington looked guilty.

"I thought I'd say something about how prices have advanced," he faltered. "Clara says that two yeahs ago"—— But Maxwell had taken him by the shoulders.

"No you don't," he shouted, fiercely. "You'll keep on writing about literature and life and lily-pads and love—that's what you'll do. If you don't, you'll lose your job. Don't you dare introduce a single dollar sign or canned tomato into those columns," he added, warningly, as he returned to his work.

LATER Kingdon, in search of the missing guest, strolled down to the mess hall, guided thither by a rippling laugh, chorused with responsive guffaws.

Curious, he looked in. Seated on the floor were Jo and Pen, excitedly playing an evenly matched game, while an adoring circle of men applauded, encouraged and scoffed in turn.

There were two patches of crimson in Pen's cream-white cheeks, a bright sparkle of excitement in her eyes, which changed to the apprehensive look of a child expecting reproof as she looked up and saw Kingdon.

"I'm having such a good time!" she told him, deprecatingly.

He smiled.

"You look it. The children and the rest of us are lamenting your absence. We want a good time, too."

"I'll come again," she promised, with a backward look at the men, as she docilely walked on with Kingdon.

Jo hurried after them.

"Tomorrow's field day," he reminded her. "You'll be there?"

"I'm living on the thought of it. You're the manager, aren't you?"

"Acting manager—for Kurt Walters."

"Mayn't I do a stunt, too?" she asked eagerly.

"Sure thing, you may. We'll be glad to have a novelty in the way of a lady performer. What'll it be?"

"I'll see you in the morning and tell you what I can do."

Mrs. Kingdon smiled understandingly when she heard of the game of craps.

"Just a few days up here have done wonders for you," she observed, looking at her young charge approvingly.

"Yes; I feel physically fit—like a real soldier."

CHAPTER VI.

WITH a little sigh of relief and pleasure, Pen laid aside some garments, on which she had been steadily and surreptitiously working, and sought Jo.

"Come down under cover of one of the hills," she urged, "and I will show you what my part in the day's work will be. Special exhibition. Admittance free, but no other spectators allowed."

Half an hour later Jo was gazing at her as one gazes at some marvelous performer, but his awe and admiration were expressed in a simple but effective phrase:

"Oh, baby, but you can put it over them all!"

That afternoon when the Kingdon household came down to occupy the row of raised seats erected in the "field," Pen was missing. Her absence was a mystery until the following typed programs for the day were handed out:

OUTLAW HORSE SHOW
TOP HILL PARK.

JO GARY, Champion Rider of Top Hill, will ride Turn Turtle and Pinch Hitter.
SLEEPY SANDY will ride Battleship Gray and Baby Doll.
JAKY FOURR will ride Pickled Pete and Piker.
GENE DOSSEY will ride Hiawatha and Whizz.

MISS PENNY ANTE
(Miss Penelope Lamont)
Will ride anything brought into the ring.

GREAT EXHIBITION OF ROUGH Riding by the most notorious riders of the West. Only the most unmanageable animals will be ridden.

"This will never do, Margaret," he exclaimed. "Those crazy boys have no sense. They'll bring out some of those wild horses, and that meek-looking little daredevil friend of Kurt's will call any bluff. She mustn't be allowed to ride."

His wife restrained him as he started away.

"I feel confident that she can do—anything. She told me she could ride."

"Well," he replied resignedly, "I always have left everything regarding girls to your judgment, so I suppose I must now, but I am surprised at you."

A bugle sounded.

Into the ring rode the four slim, young top riders of the ranch force, chaparajos and sombreros being much in evidence. They gave the usual stunts in the typical Western way on a track tramped as hard as asphalt, the tatoo of hoofs making the hard earth ring in the soundless atmosphere. Their feats, singly and together, were marvelous, but there was lacking to the onlookers the charm of novelty, as they had long been accustomed to these and similar exhibitions of horsemanship.

Everyone's heart beat a little faster with expectancy, therefore, when there came another blare of the trumpet. Into the ring came "Miss Penny Ante," slim and straight as a boy scout, clad in puttees, dark blue breeches and an olive-drab blouse.

A sleek, shy colt was suddenly inducted into the scene of action. Then there began a frisky game of maneuvers. The little, wouldbe rider proved as wary and nimble as the colt on which she finally succeeded in shooting a bridle. Another round of come and go, and one leg went over the slender neck, and then down the glossy back slid the lithe figure. With a wondering, protesting neigh, the colt tried all the tactics known to his species, but they were of no avail, and after circling and recircling the ring, Pen calmly relinquished him and waited the next offer.

A wild-eyed mustang was the victim. As soon as she was mounted, he rose high on his hind feet, but came down like a lamb and ended in spinning like a top around the ring.

A general protest went up when a demoniacal-looking buckskin was produced.

"Louis," she replied earnestly, "this is only horseplay to Pen. No, I'm not punning. I didn't know she was going to make this exhibition, but some way I feel that she can easily live up to the promises in the program."

With a plunge the buckskin went straight into midair and came down hard. Then at full speed amid a whirling of dust, he tried all his tricks, but always the little figure held her position, easily triumphant, and finally the hitherto unmountable animal again came trembling to earth and obediently followed his rider's will.

"You've won!" cried the cowboys.

"Now, bring me a horse, a real saddle horse—the kind you give a kingdom for!" she demanded. "I'd like to ride a bit, if you don't mind."

They brought her a beautiful thoroughbred. She rode around the ring a few times, and then, leaping the fence to the inclosure, was away and over the hills, her blood throbbing, her heart pounding as she felt the soft, southwest wind in her face, the siren song of freedom ringing in her ears. The divine sweetness of the mountain air was in her nostrils. She was recalled from her state of rhapsody by the sound of pounding hoofs behind her. She half turned in her saddle, expecting to see Jo. She didn't need the commanding-toned "Wait!" to rein in her horse.

There was an inscrutable look in the blazing eyes of the approaching horseman, a compelling force in his broad shoulders as he rode up to her.

"Where are you going?" he demanded.

"Nowhere. Just riding," she replied.

Her uplifted face was vivid with joy, her eyes sparkling. Suddenly a wave of color suffused her cheeks.

"I wasn't running away!" she declared, suppressing a chuckle. "Honest, I wasn't. It's field day. I've been doing stunts and I just ached for a regular ride. It's so grand to be astride a horse and feel the world is yours? When did you come home?"

"I haven't come home. I am on my way to Fowler's to subpena a witness, and I rode this way meaning to stop but a moment. I came over the big hill just as you rode into the ring."

She stole a look at his impassive face.

"And you saw the sports?"

"Yes; and rode on after you"——

"Because you feared your prisoner might be taking French leave? No; this is the end of the rainbow to me. I have no desire to leave—at present."

They were riding slowly on.

"Where did you learn to ride?"

"I don't remember; it was so long ago."

"That was circus riding."

"It did look like it," she said deprecatingly.

"If you can ride like that, why did you leave the circus for the life"——

"Of a crook?" she finished. "Suppose I stole a horse and sold it and had to vamoose. Even circus managers don't employ thieves."

"Who gave you permission to ride today?" he demanded.

She pulled from the pocket of her blouse a program and handed it to him.

"You see, I was featured," she explained modestly.

He read it with a frown expressive of displeasure.

"Did Mrs. Kingdon know you were going to do this?"

"No one but one of the men knew."

"How did you come to meet the men?"

"The children introduced me to one of them and I met the others at the dance. I never knew what dancing really meant until then. I've learned to play a very gamey game, too. Craps."

With a jerk Kurt brought his horse to a halt and reaching over caught her bridle as she was about to spur her horse onward.

"Did you tell Mrs. Kingdon everything?" he asked sternly.

"Everything I could remember," she replied demurely. "Far more than I told you."

"What did she say?"

"She is going to talk to you and ask you to leave the entire matter in her hands."

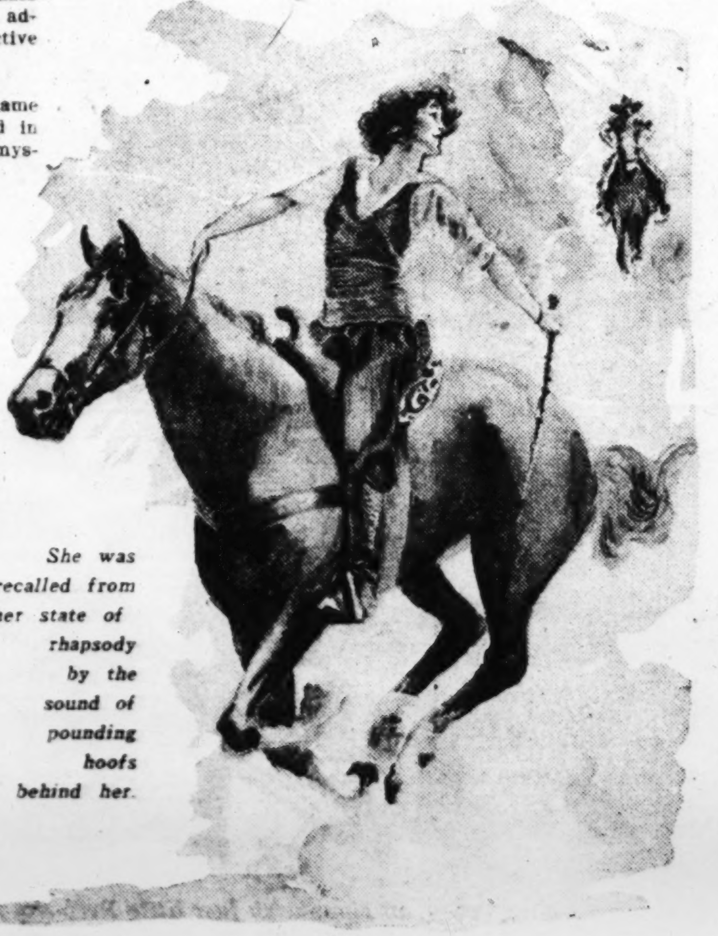
He broke the short silence that followed.

"Dancing, craps and bronco-busting are not what I brought you here for."

"But I've done lots of other things, too. Sewed three days straight, learned how to make salads, heard the children's lessons, picked flowers and getting wise to a home atmosphere every minute. You won't send me away?"

He was scowling at the program again.

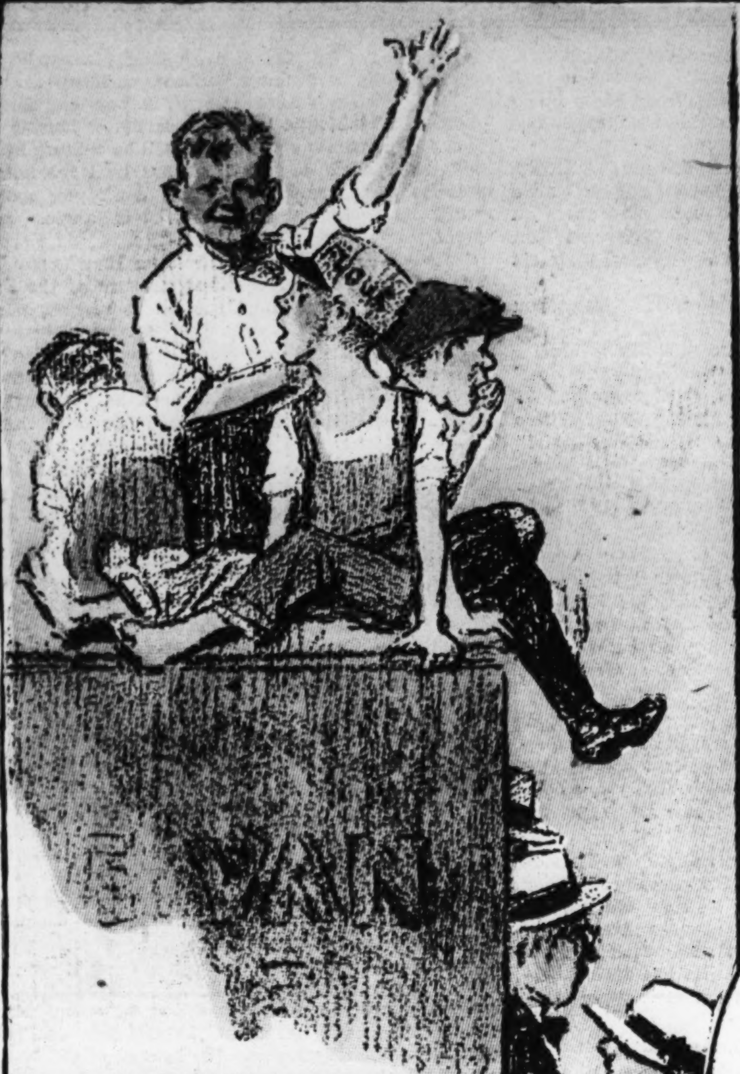
"Why are you called Penny Ante?"



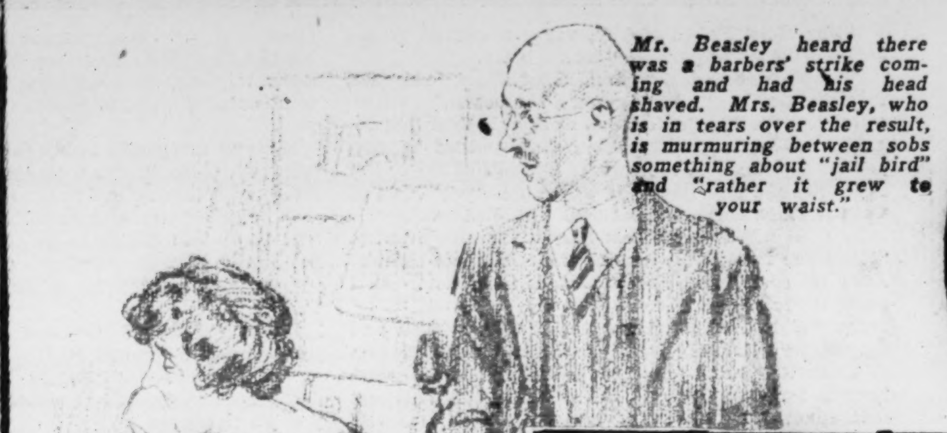
She was recalled from her state of rhapsody by the sound of pounding hoofs behind her.

STRIKES!

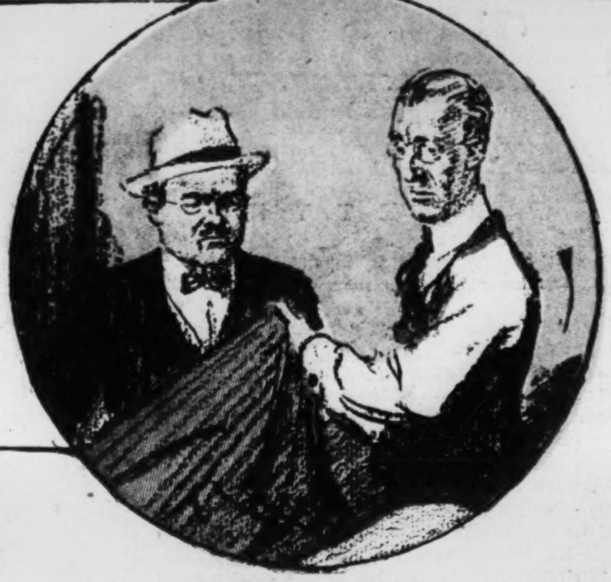
Character Sketches by W. E. HILL



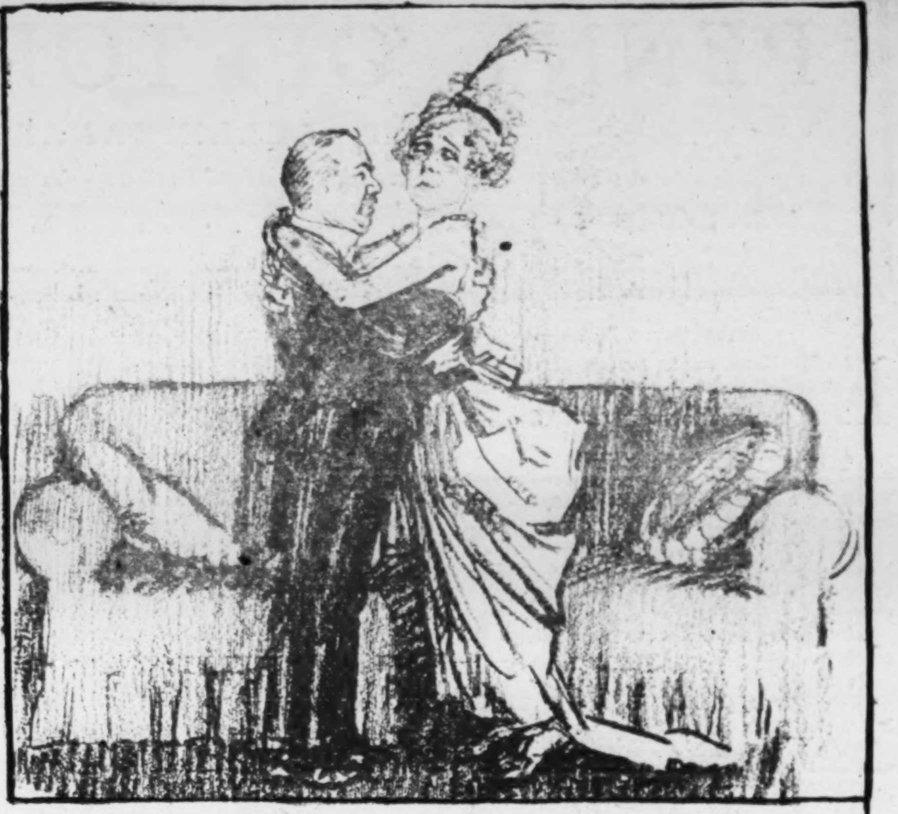
Little boys, not going anywhere in particular, during the street car strike caught the fever of climbing on to things with the rest of the crowd.



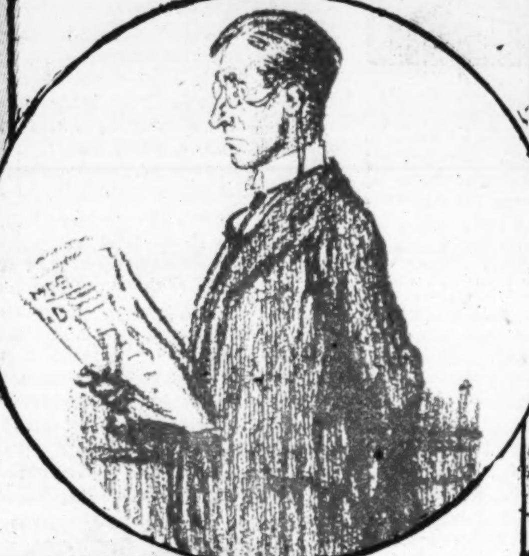
Mr. Beasley heard there was a barbers' strike coming and had his head shaved. Mrs. Beasley, who is in tears over the result, is murmuring between sobs something about "jail bird" and "rather it grew to your waist."



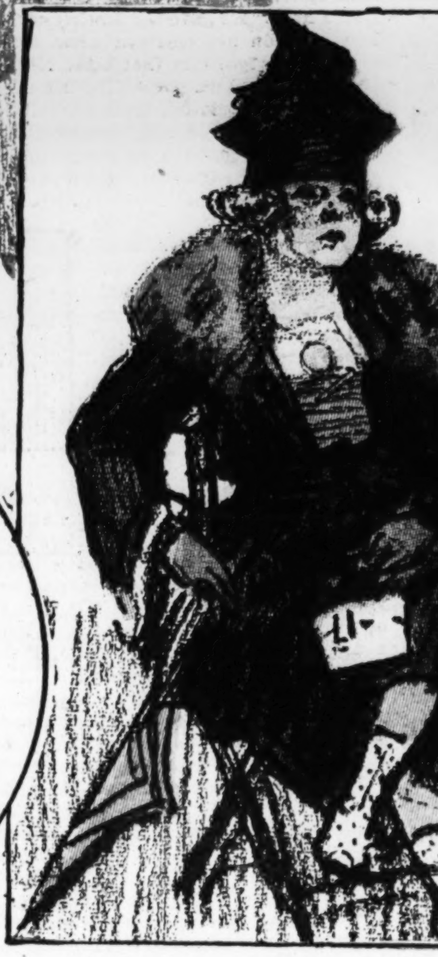
The button makers are striking, and Steebe, the tailor, although it pains him, has got to charge Mr. Swor $25 more than he expected to on his new suit. (If the strikers win, Steebe will have to charge 10 per cent increase on all orders, and if they lose, why, of course he will have to charge 10 per cent increase just the same—he can explain it to you.)



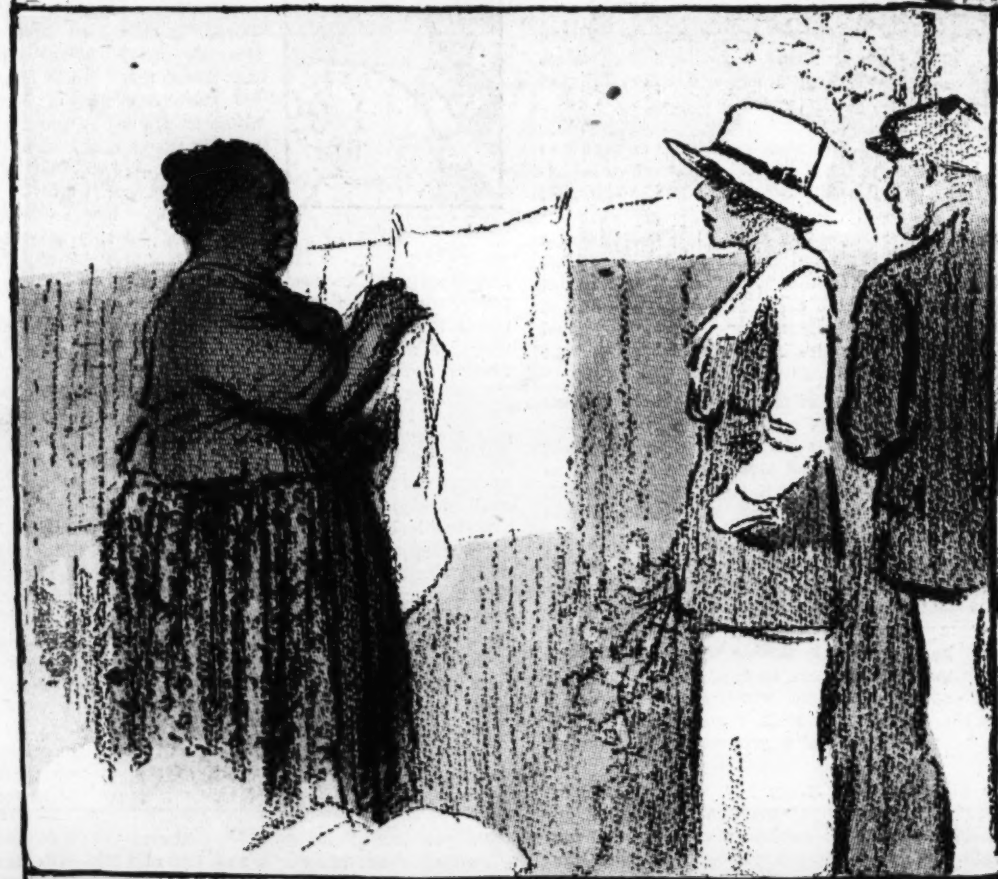
Manager Bangham simply wouldn't let the striking actors spoil his show. Manager Bangham played the leading juvenile role himself, and Miss Tessie Shad, who had been understudying everything and everybody in a No. 8 "Within the Law" company, played the heroine. Miss Shad always had wanted a chance on Broadway, and it was just by luck that she got the part instead of the wardrobe mistress.



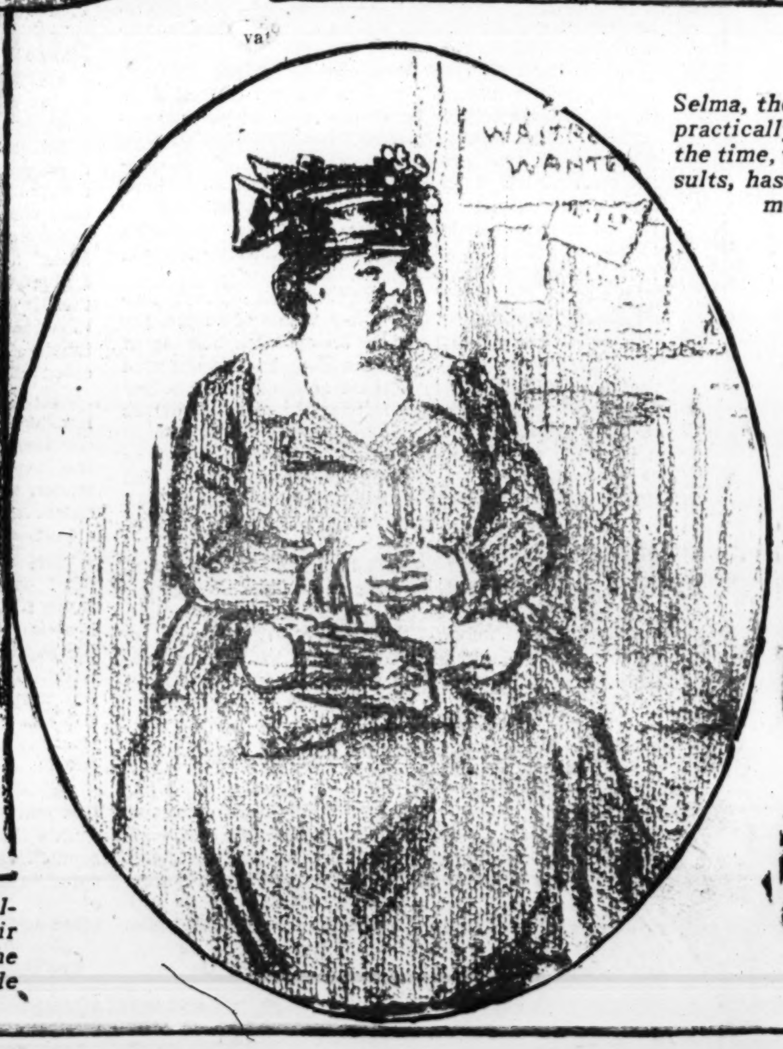
One of the most terrible conditions of modern times is to be a member of the downtrodden middle classes. They get it coming and going. Mr. Harrod, professor of sedentary English, has a salary of $1200 a year and a family of five. Professor Harrod is seriously thinking of learning to be a motorman, seeing that the motormen struck for $7 a day.



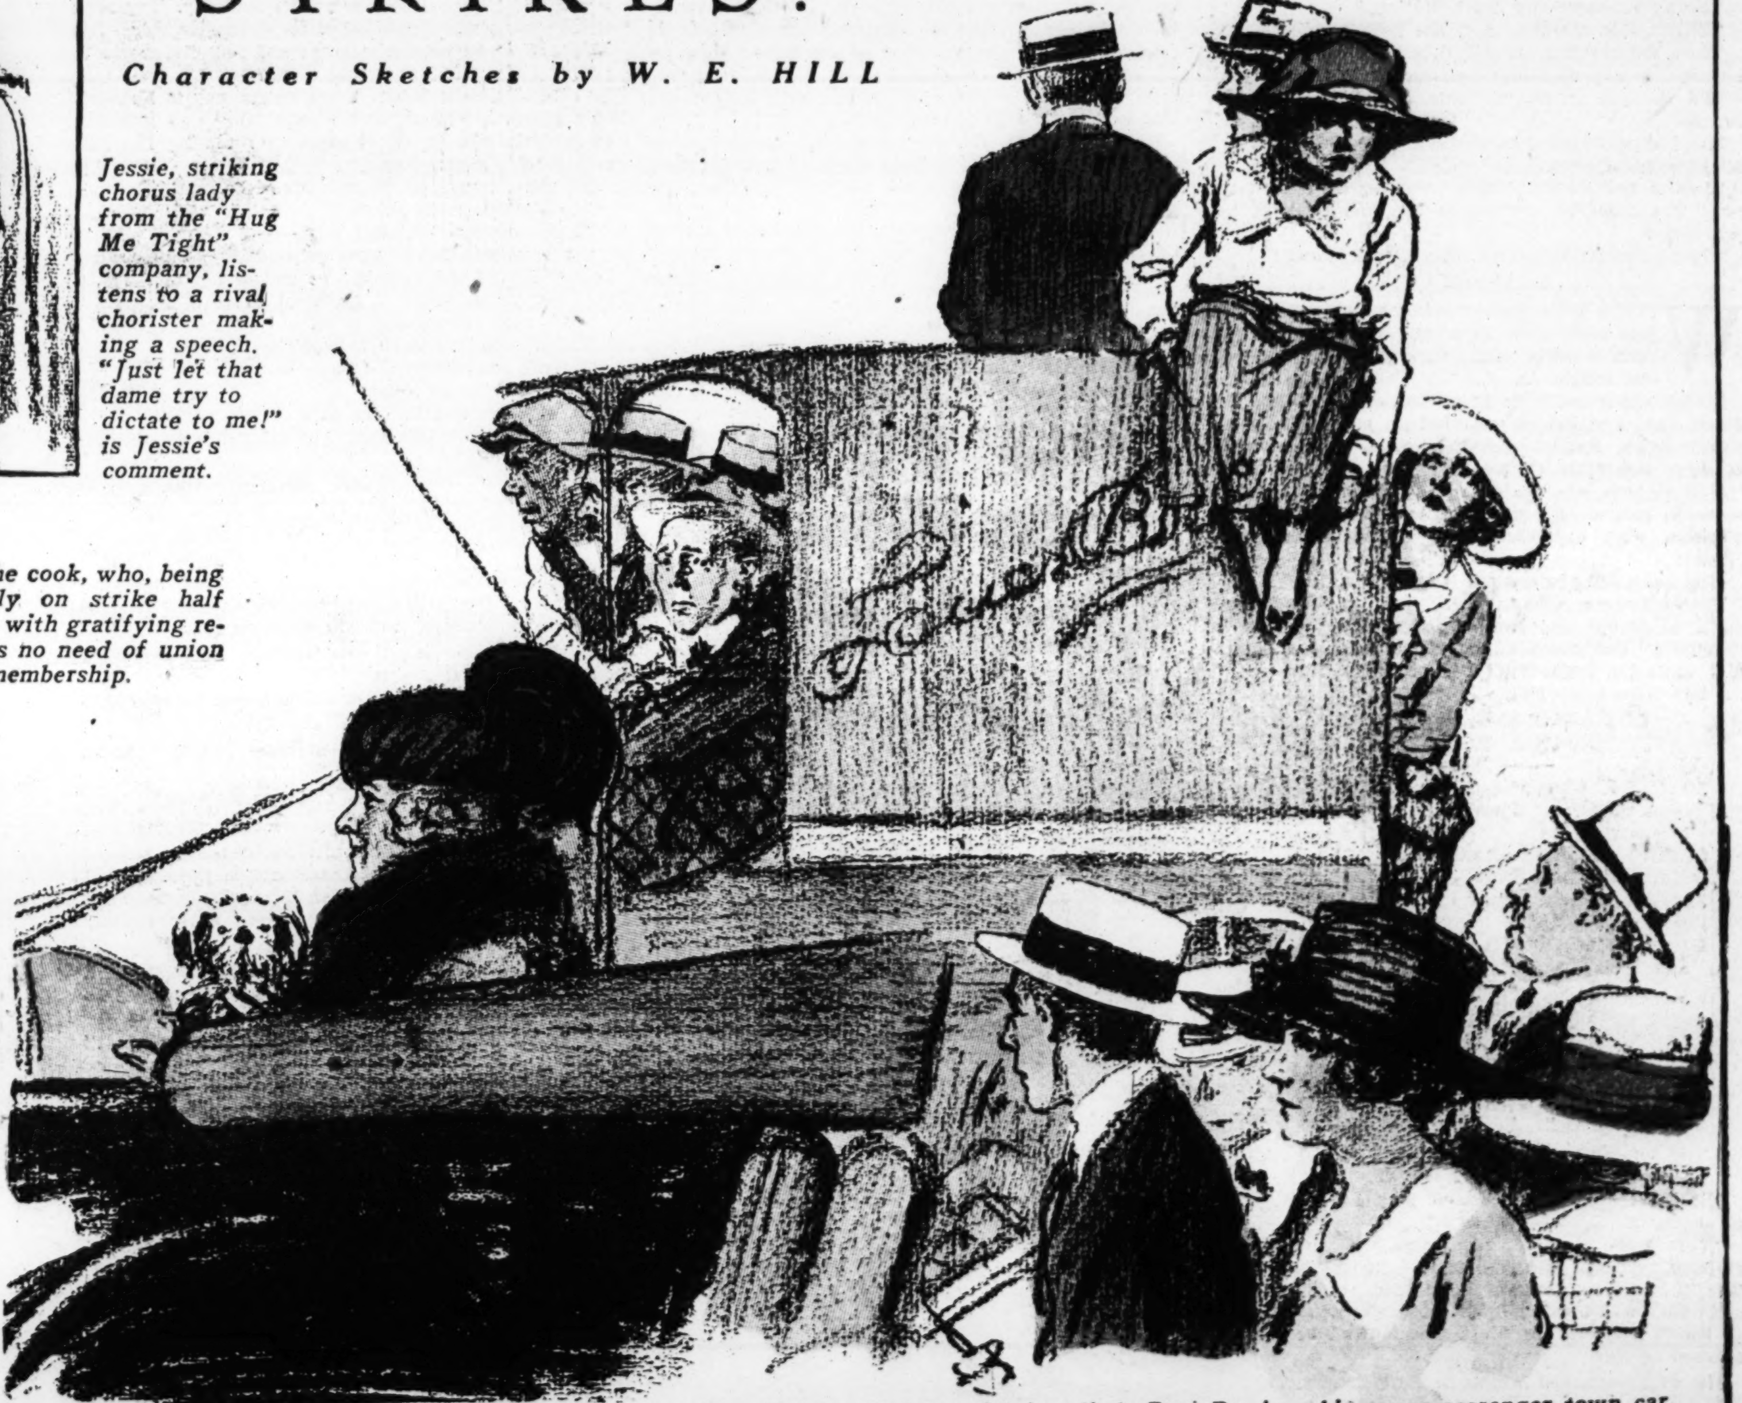
Jessie, striking chorus lady from the "Hug Me Tight" company, listens to a rival chorister making a speech. "Just let that dame try to dictate to me!" is Jessie's comment.



Mrs. George Washington White, while not exactly on strike, has a way of dealing with the capitalistic class that is just as effective in keeping them in their place. Yes, she can do Mrs. de Lancy's wash, but can't tell when, or whether she can send for it or not, or how much it will be, or when it will be done. Mrs. de Lancy is all but apologizing for asking such a favor of Mrs. White.



Selma, the cook, who, being practically on strike half the time, with gratifying results, has no need of union membership.



Mrs. Tobey, all alone with just little Peep-Bo, in a big seven-passenger town car, had such an amusing time watching the crowds try to get home during the street car strike. "The people do look so comical!"

Build Your Own Home

You Will Save:

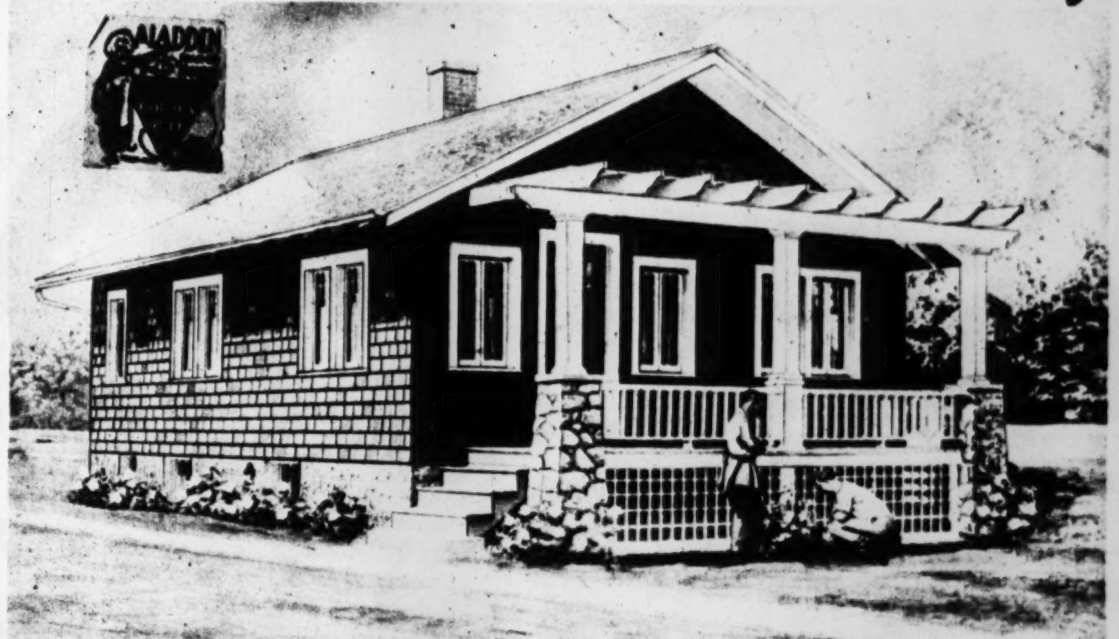
Contractor's Profit
Middlemen's Profits
Architect's Fees
20% Lumber Waste
30 to 40% on Labor

Read How the ALADDIN System Saves You This Money

Why should you buy 1250 feet of lumber when you only need 1000 feet? Why should you pay four profits on the material to build your home when you can pay only one?

This is a straight shot at the "high cost of building." The much talked of high cost is not entirely due to the price of materials—a big part is the high cost of Waste.

Why does your carpenter and Lumber dealer agree that it takes 1250 feet of material to cover 1000 feet of space? Ask them. They'll tell you it takes more material for fitting, mitering and working. Of course you have to pay for this "extra" material and after the job is finished it makes up the "waste pile" of firewood that you bought by the thousand feet and at a big price, too. Besides you paid four profits on the material—timber owners, saw mill, lumber jobber and dealer.

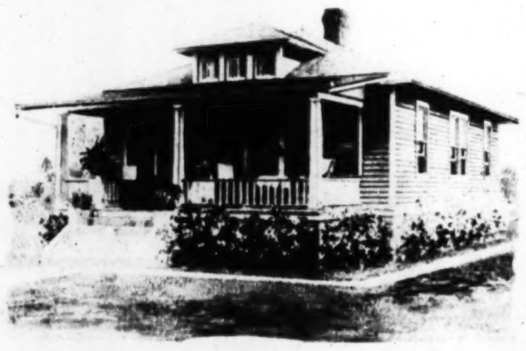


The "Roseland" Bungalow Home

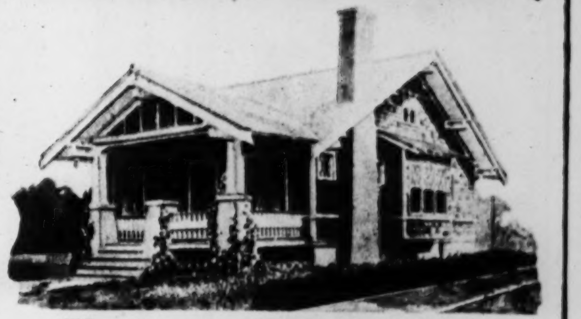
One Profit and No Waste Cuts Down Building Costs

When you buy an Aladdin house, you buy only the material required to build it. And that's all you pay for. The Aladdin system does not ask you to pay for extra material for mitering or fitting. The Aladdin system is the scientific method of using up both ends of the board—and knowing it before it is cut. As an illustration, take the sheathing for your Aladdin House. It is unloaded out of the car cut-to-fit ready for use. Possibly among other lengths are ten pieces thirteen feet long. These were cut from a sixteen-foot board. You paid for only 13 feet. The other 3 feet from each board were used in another home.

Sheathing Lumber in Gable of Aladdin House
All Cut to Fit. Saves Labor and Lumber



The "Edison" Bungalow Home



The "Pomona" Bungalow Home

Labor One of the Biggest Items in Building a Home—Reduce It 30% to 40%

It doesn't take near as long to nail a cut-to-fit piece of lumber in place as it does to measure, saw, and then nail it. There you have the difference between the Aladdin System and the old fashioned System of construction. It's not surprising that our customers claim savings of $250, $425, $575 up to $850. They make a distinct saving on the cost of materials for their home and the cost of building the home. A carpenter's time is valuable. You can't expect to cut down your building cost if you waste his time.

Little woolens are so expensive

Keep them new this way

THEY must be washed so often! Yet they must be kept soft and "comfy." Not a scratchy thread! Not the least bit shrunken!

Find out for yourself how the Lux way of washing saves woolens. Lux comes in pure, delicate flakes. They dissolve instantly in hot water and whisk up into a rich lather. There is no rubbing to make little woolens stiff, matted and shrunken. Just sousing in the rich pure lather, gently pressing the suds through the soiled parts.

Lux won't hurt anything pure water alone won't injure. Your grocer, druggist or department store has Lux.—Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Mass.

To wash little woolens like new

Use two tablespoonfuls of Lux to a bowlful of water. Dissolve in boiling or very hot water, whisk into a thick latner and add cold water to make suds lukewarm. Put the woolens in. Then squeeze the suds through the garments. Do not rub. Rinse three times in clear, lukewarm water, dissolving a little Lux in the last rinsing water. Squeeze the water out. Do not twist. Dry in a moderate temperature. Press with a warm iron.

There is nothing for fine laundering like Lux!

The Best Way to use Rouge

The specialist who created the wonderful La-may Face Powder has invented a new rouge. The rouge is inside the puff. All you do is to rub the puff on your face. It comes through the puff just as you need it. It goes on splendidly and stays on the face until you wash it off. The puff is in a dainty metal box. The box cannot break and the rouge will not crumble like the old-fashioned kind. This newly invented rouge is called La-may (French, Rouge L'Ame). It gives a beautiful color that looks natural under the strongest light. There are two colors—medium and dark. The fifty-cent package will last six months, yet the box is small enough to fit your purse. When you use this pure, harmless Rouge and see how much more convenient it is and how much better it stays on, you will understand why thousands of women say it is the best they have ever used. Because La-may Rouge is so new, your dealer may not have it yet, but he can easily get it. Show this notice to your dealer and if he refuses to get you a package you may order by mail from Herbert Roystone, 16 E. 18th St., New York.

The Rouge Is Inside the Puff.

Pompeian
BEAUTY POWDER

Pompeian Beauty Powder
Pompeian Bloom
Pompeian Day Cream

They All Want To Cut In

All the men want to cut in when she dances, for there is only admiration for the woman who applies her cream, powder, and rouge correctly. Youthful beauty in an instant comes from the Pompeian method.

First, a touch of fragrant Pompeian DAY Cream (vanishing). It softens the skin and holds the powder. Work the cream well into the skin so the powder adheres evenly.

Then apply Pompeian BEAUTY Powder. It makes the skin beautifully fair and adds the charm of delicate fragrance.

Now a touch of Pompeian BLOOM for youthful color. Do you know that a bit of color in the cheeks makes the eyes sparkle with a new beauty?

Lastly, dust over again with the powder, in order to subdue the BLOOM. Presto! Such beauty and cool freshness in a few moments!

These three preparations may be used separately or together (as above), as the "Complete Pompeian Beauty Toilette." Pompeian DAY Cream (vanishing), removes face shine. Pompeian BEAUTY Powder, a powder that stays on—flesh, white, brunette. Pompeian BLOOM, a rouge that won't break—light, dark, medium. At all druggists, 50c each. Guaranteed by the makers of Pompeian MASSAGE Cream, Pompeian NIGHT Cream, and Pompeian FRAGRANCE (a 25c talc with an exquisite new odor).

"Don't Envy Beauty. Use Pompeian"

Very Special Offer (to Sept. 27th only)

To one person only in a family (and to Sept. 27th only), we will send for a dime a special box of Pompeian BEAUTY Powder. It contains one half of our regular 50c box and should be at least a month's supply. This offer is made so attractive that you simply cannot resist trying Pompeian BEAUTY Powder now. And once you try it we are sure you will buy it steadily. Samples of Pompeian DAY Cream and Pompeian BLOOM will be included, so that you can make many interesting beauty experiments. Clip the coupon now, before it is too late.

ON a clinging evening gown or snugly fitting tailored frock SO-E-Z snaps are infinitely important. Where it is essential that a fastener be invisible, SO-E-Z snaps lie flat against the garment. Where the entire effect of the gown depends upon the faithful service of each fastener, SO-E-Z snaps perform their duties perfectly; they stay closed until released.

And there's another very special exclusive SO-E-Z feature, a feature that cannot be found in any other fastener—the coined edge (patented) rounded inside and outside the large oblong holes so that the thread passes over an absolutely smooth surface both inside and outside. No other fastener can have this feature, therefore, no other fastener can be as good.

Made in America! SO-E-Z Snaps are 100% perfect and 100% American. Every card of SO-E-Z Snap Fasteners bears a garment protection guarantee.

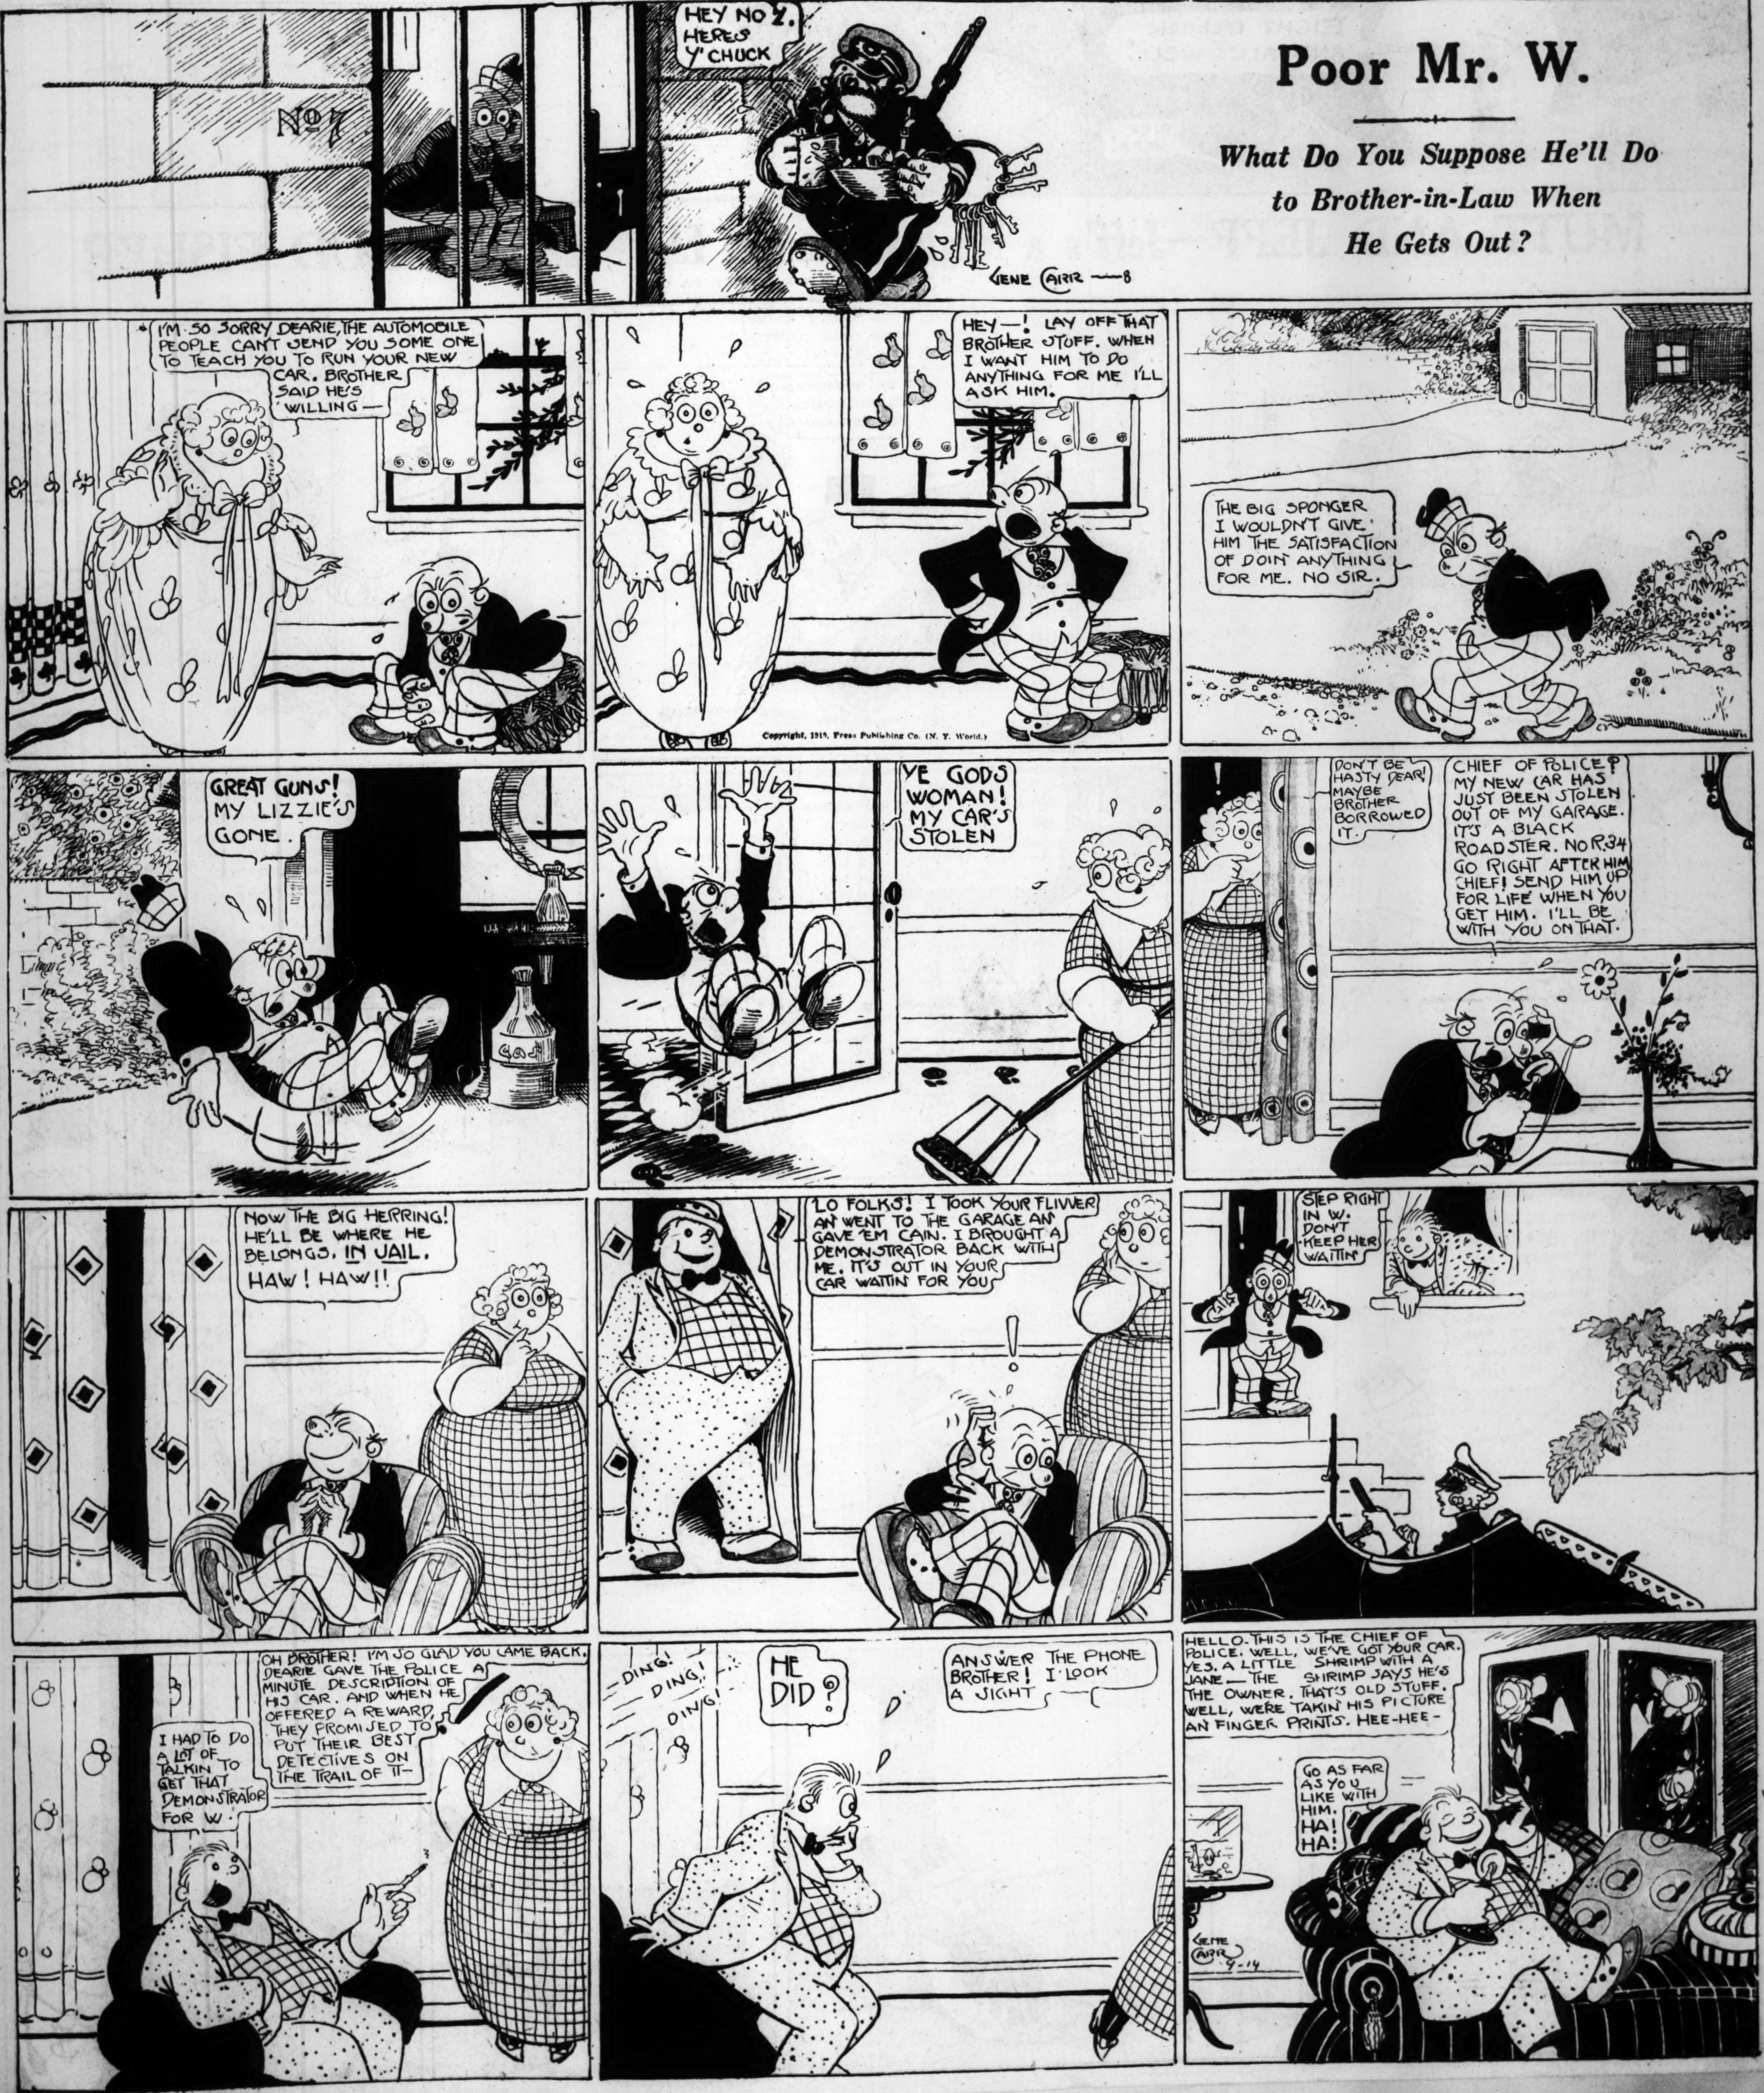
What Do You Suppose He'll Do to Brother-in-Law When He Gets Out?



Nº 7
HEY NO 7. HERE'S Y' CHUCK
GENE CARR —8
I'M SO SORRY DEARIE, THE AUTOMOBILE PEOPLE CAN'T SEND YOU SOME ONE TO TEACH YOU TO RUN YOUR NEW CAR. BROTHER SAID HE'S WILLING—
HEY—! LAY OFF THAT BROTHER STUFF. WHEN I WANT HIM TO DO ANYTHING FOR ME I'LL ASK HIM.
THE BIG SPONGER I WOULDN'T GIVE HIM THE SATISFACTION OF DOIN' ANYTHING FOR ME. NO SIR.
GREAT GUNS! MY LIZZIE'S GONE.
GAS
YE GODS WOMAN! MY CAR'S STOLEN
DON'T BE HASTY DEAR! MAYBE BROTHER BORROWED IT.
CHIEF OF POLICE? MY NEW CAR HAS JUST BEEN STOLEN OUT OF MY GARAGE. IT'S A BLACK ROADSTER. NO R.34 GO RIGHT AFTER HIM CHIEF! SEND HIM UP FOR LIFE WHEN YOU GET HIM. I'LL BE WITH YOU ON THAT.
NOW THE BIG HERRING! HE'LL BE WHERE HE BELONGS. IN JAIL. HAW! HAW!!
'LO FOLKS! I TOOK YOUR FLIVVER AN' WENT TO THE GARAGE AN' GAVE 'EM CAIN. I BROUGHT A DEMONSTRATOR BACK WITH ME. IT'S OUT IN YOUR CAR WAITIN' FOR YOU
OH BROTHER! I'M SO GLAD YOU CAME BACK. DEARIE GAVE THE POLICE A MINUTE DESCRIPTION OF HIS CAR. AND WHEN HE OFFERED A REWARD, THEY PROMISED TO PUT THEIR BEST DETECTIVES ON THE TRAIL OF IT—
I HAD TO DO A LOT OF TALKIN TO GET THAT DEMONSTRATOR FOR W.
DING! DING! DING!
HE DID?
ANSWER THE PHONE BROTHER! I LOOK A SIGHT
HELLO. THIS IS THE CHIEF OF POLICE. WELL, WE'VE GOT YOUR CAR. YES. A LITTLE SHRIMP WITH A JANE—THE SHRIMP SAYS HE'S THE OWNER. THAT'S OLD STUFF. WELL, WE'RE TAKIN' HIS PICTURE AN FINGER PRINTS. HEE-HEE-
GO AS FAR AS YOU LIKE WITH HIM. HA! HA!

JEFF, WE'LL PUT UP OUR TENT RIGHT OVER THERE. THAT'S A NICE SPOT.
IT SUITS ME, OLD DEAR!
LISTEN, PULL THOSE GUY ROPES GOOD AND TIGHT. THIS IS GREAT, EH?
SURE! TO-MORROW WE GO HUNTING FOR BIG GAME!
FRIED EGGS TO-DAY AND DEER MEAT TO-MORROW! THAT'S MY DISH, MUTT!
JEFF! COME HERE!
LOOK! BEAR TRACKS!! DO YOU KNOW WHAT THAT MEANS?
IT MEANS THAT A BEAR HAS BEEN AROUND HERE, MUTT.
DON'T BE SILLY! IT MEANS ONLY ONE OF US CAN SLEEP AT A TIME. IF WE BOTH GO TO SLEEP THE BEAR'S LIABLE TO CHEW US UP. ONE OF US HAS GOTTA DO SENTRY DUTY TONIGHT!
FINE! I DID SENTRY DUTY IN FRANCE!
ALL RIGHT! YOU WATCH TO-NIGHT AND I'LL WATCH TOMORROW NIGHT. KEEP YOUR EYES OPEN BECAUSE MY LIFE WILL BE IN YOUR HANDS WHILE I'M ASLEEP!
SURE!
MUTT NEEDN'T BE ALARMED! HE'S JUST AS SAFE AS IF HE WAS AT FORTY SECOND STREET AND BROADWAY. HO HUM!
WELL! DAYLIGHT AT LAST AND I'M STILL ALIVE! I CERTAINLY GOTTA HAND IT TO JEFF. HE KEPT FAITHFUL WATCH!
